Ringo set to open — and close?

By MARY NEISWENDER

Ray Shira is short and thin, soft-spoken and almost shy—but for almost six years he has fought City Hall in an attempt to set up something like a form of bingo on the Long Beach Pike. And, although he has lost his share of battles, he believes he has won the war.

Next weekend, his Ringo, Inc., opens its doors to the public.

But, the city says, there will be one more fight—which will start when the first table-tennis ball pops out of the wire cage and into the hands of the caller, signifying the start of Ringo play.

"We're going to throw them all into the slammer," Sgt. Robert Platt said. "We won't arrest any of the people playing, but we'll pick up the ones conducting the game.

"And," he adds, "we plan to move down with a big truck and take all the equipment. It's evidence."

Platt, along with Lt. Harry Welch, both assigned to the Police Department's administrative vice division, and City Prosecutor James Starr, haven't kept their battle plans secret.

According to Shira, all three have visited the 150-person-capacity game room and have warned that, once the game is open for business, the arrests will follow.

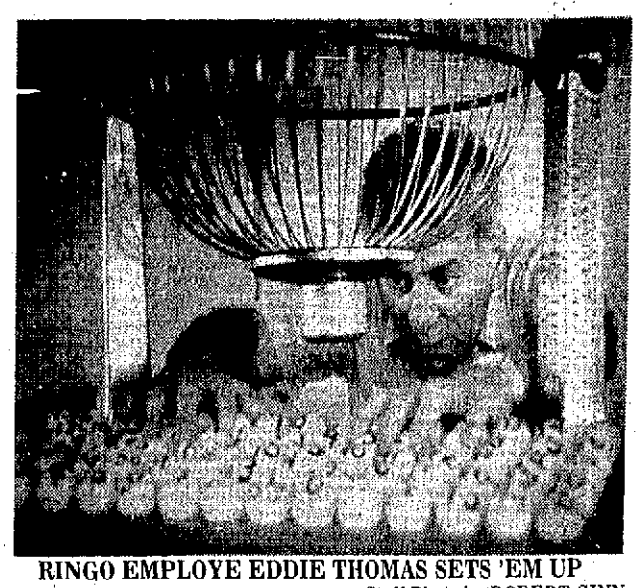

"I expect them to show up with a big moving van and haul all of us—and everything—away," Shira says with a shrug. "I had planned to hire a bunch of college kids—a chance to help them through school—but I can't because I don't want them to have arrest records."

The 60-year-old former mortician and Douglas aircraft worker, who police claim operated a similar-type game in Palm Springs more than 10 years and has twice been arrested for bookmaking in the past, is confident he will eventually win.

So are his attorneys, C. Ransom Samuelson and Gary Carlin.

"As far as we're concerned it's all over with," Carlin said in explaining the lengthy battle for a city license and a right to run the game.

Kissinger, Russ 'secret deal' denied

Charge said 'totally without foundation'

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allegations that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger made secret nuclear arrangements with Soviet leaders in 1972 are "totally without merit or any foundation whatsoever," the State Department said Saturday.

"There are no secret agreements of any kind," Robert Anderson, the department spokesman, told newsmen in disputing reports suggesting the Russians were allowed to build more missile launchers than Congress had been led to believe was permissible under the U.S.-Soviet accord.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., a critic of the administration's negotiating strategy, had supported the allegations as being "reliable and creditable." According to one account, the 950 sea-based missiles allowed the Soviet Union were raised to 1,020, while the U.S. total was lowered from 710 to 656.

WITH PRESIDENT Nixon and Kissinger set to leave next week for a third round of summit talks in Moscow, the department appeared particularly irritated that the charges would be raised now.

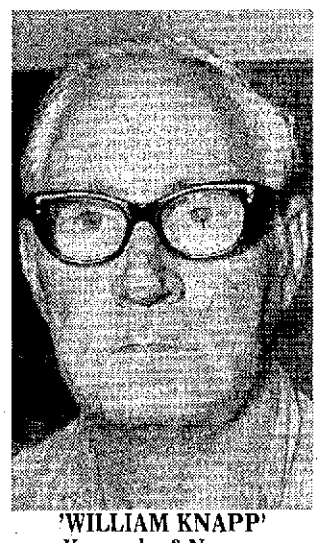

"It is regrettable," said Anderson, "that this false suspicion has been raised just before the President's trip to the Soviet Union."

He said Kissinger is prepared to address the issue at a news conference Monday morning and in testimony to the Senate arms control subcommittee headed by Jackson on Monday afternoon.

"I want to emphasize that no secret deal has been made which permitted any change in the totals outlined in the 1972 agreement," the spokesman said.

THE PRINCIPAL topic on the agenda for Nixon's summit meeting with Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Communist Party leader, is further restraints on nuclear weapons. In 1972 the two powers agreed to a five-year limitation on the number of offensive missiles that each side could deploy.

A Senate source claimed the United States privately agreed that the Soviets could modernize older, G-class diesel submarines, thereby gaining 70 additional undersea missiles. Kissinger told a news conference in Moscow May 27, 1972, that the Soviets were not required to retire the G-class submarines "but if they modernize them they are counted against the 950."

'Not nice man'

Ordeal just a memory to Michele

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

"Our God is not dead, sorry about yours," proclaims the terse bumper sticker on the rear of Mike and Chriss Booher's car.

For the Boohers, both 23, that statement held special meaning Saturday as they watched their 4-year-old daughter, Michele, playing quietly on the lawn of the Westside Long Beach Naval Housing Project where they live.

Only 24-hours earlier, Michele—that captivating blue-eyed blonde now just a few feet away—was the object of one of the most intensive missing-child searches ever mounted in Long Beach.

She had been playing with neighborhood children when she disappeared about noon Monday, not to be seen by her family again until 6 p.m. Friday, when she was tearfully reunited with them in San Diego.

Where she was and what she did during those four days remains a mystery. Michele has said only that she was with a man called "Cecil," who didn't hurt her but "was not a very nice man."

POLICE SAY they are not sure how the little girl got from the neighbor's yard into a car with a man she didn't know, except that he apparently said her mother was sick and that she should "get in the car."

Michele's accused kidnaper, 44-year-old William Knapp, has told police only that he used at least two names.

Police, who booked Knapp late Friday on the kidnaping charge, said a check of criminal records showed he was released from Los Angeles County Jail only last Sunday after having served 90 days on a conviction of child molestation.

Doctors, who examined the girl at St. Mary Medical Center on her arrival from San Diego, said Michele did not appear to have been sexually molested.

She was returned to her parents Friday evening, just hours after an alert staff member at the Echo House—a hand-out hotel in San Diego—told police she thought there was something suspicious about the "unemployed cook," who checked into the hostel on Thursday with his 4-year-old "daughter."

POLICE QUESTIONED the man, who then gave his name as Cecil Russell, and arrested him when detectives positively identified the girl he claimed to be his daughter as Michele Booher.

A stolen car, recovered in San Diego later Friday, contained papers bearing the name of "William Knapp" and articles of clothing which apparently belong to Michele, according to police.

Long Beach homicide detectives C. S. Roberson, J. J. Hurlbirt and William Dunyon said late Saturday they still are running fingerprint checks on Knapp, to determine if that is, in fact, his real name.

An arrest report lists his names as William Knapp, Cecil Russell and Jack Clifton Sharp.

Though Michele was brought into the police station for questioning and spent much of the day in front of television and still cameras, she appeared far removed from the flurry created by her disappearance.

To look at the child—playing with her puppy, Chance; hugging her parents, or crying after having been frightened by a large dog just outside her apartment—you would not suspect she had just been the object of a massive search.

In fact, she appeared more calm and collected than the swarms of reporters who descended on the Booher household Saturday.

"Don't bite me, Chance" she said authoritatively to the dog. Having settled quickly back into the simple joys and trials of childhood, Michele didn't stay long to talk.

She wanted to get back to her playmates, she said.

Her parents, who moved to this area a month ago when Booher's ship, the USS Roark, was transferred, said they had leaned heavily on their religion and their neighbors during the four-day ordeal.

Hughes gift tied to 'favor' by Mitchell

Probers tell Rebozo role

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

WASHINGTON (AP) - One of two $50,000 campaign contributions from billionaire Howard Hughes to a close personal friend of President Nixon was set in motion after Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell approved Hughes' $35 million bid to buy a Las Vegas gambling hotel, the staff of the Senate Watergate committee reports.

The 47-page report to the senators calls the administration's handling of Hughes' efforts to buy the Dunes Hotel "a classic case of governmental decision-making for friends."

"As the evidence indicated, the apparent decision by Mitchell to approve the Dunes purchase is clothed with the appearance of impropriety," the report said. "The facts of this case ... pointedly suggest impropriety to a significant degree and raise serious questions about campaign contributions" and Justice Department practices.

The report, which was made available to the Associated Press by a source close to the committee, analyzes the relationship between Hughes' repeated attempts to expand his Las Vegas hotel and gambling empire and the $100,000 Hughes paid out to Nixon's friend, C. G. "Bebe" Rebozo, at about the same time.

Committee sources say the investigation has left many questions unanswered and many leads not fully pursued. The committee is scheduled to end its probe officially on Friday, the day it issues its final report.

One by one, Chuck Colson and other Watergate figures are repenting, but Washington observers remain skeptical. Page A-11.

THE APPROVAL to buy the Dunes, a deal which later fell through for purely financial reasons, came after the Justice Department's antitrust division had frustrated Hughes' 1968 attempt to buy the Stardust Hotel and then had reluctantly approved his purchase of the Landmark Hotel.

In the Landmark case, an exception to antitrust policy was made because Hughes' purchase was determined to be the only alternative to the hotel's bankruptcy.

The report noted that Richard Danner, the man selected to present the case for the Dunes purchase directly to Mitchell, had delivered the $100,000 in cash to Rebozo. The money was returned last year.

Dunlop hits Congress on inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — John T. Dunlop, the government's outgoing price controller, says Congress is aggravating inflation by pursuing inconsistent economic policies. As an example he cites proposals to aid the beef industry.

On the one hand, Congress is demanding that the administration restrain inflation, Dunlop said, while on the other it is considering guaranteed loans and import quotas for the beef industry to keep meat prices from falling.

He said there is special irony in this because Americans already have shown they are unwilling to buy large quantities of beef at current prices.

"It's time Congress stopped its month-to-month changing of economic policy," Dunlop said.

Middle age 'a state of mind'

By C. G. McDANIEL
AP Science Writer

CHICAGO — Middle age is a time when a lot of people start thinking about doing something for themselves, and that's not all bad, says a psychiatrist.

During middle age, people evaluate their achievements, think about the time they have left and what they want to accomplish for themselves, he said.

This selfish response is not unhealthy, "depending on what you do," according to Dr. Francois Alouf.

Alouf, director of psychiatric education at Northwestern University medical school, presented his observations to newsmen at a preview screening of a Public Broadcasting Service program on "Male Menopause: The Pause that Perplexes."

Narrated by actor Norman Windom, the program touches on the problems created by a youth-oriented culture such as reaching a job plateau, getting gray and flabby, not being able to perform sexually and other middle-age anxieties.

Some men attempt to adapt to middle age by denying that they're getting older, Alouf said. These men continue to try to compete with younger men and seek to cover up their physical changes, he added.

"Middle age is mostly a state of mind," the psychiatrist observed. The changes vary from individual to individual and some men may even increase their sexual activity during middle age, he said.

Alouf said the PBS program incorporates "just about everything we know about the middle years" and noted that only in the past few years have scientific studies of this age span been conducted.

He said the program is likely to produce anxiety in persons approaching middle age or those who already are there.

Guerrillas free U.S. missionary

Combined News Services

A 24-year-old pregnant American missionary nurse was freed by antigovernment guerrillas in Ethiopia Saturday and said she felt fine after her four-week ordeal.

Deborah Dortzbach of Freehold, N.J., walked alone into Massawa, a Red Sea port 450 miles north of Addis Ababa and telephoned her husband, Karl, also a missionary. Hours later, the couple was reunited and went into seclusion.

"I'm all right. I feel fine," Mrs. Dortzbach, now in her sixth month of pregnancy, told a pilot who flew her to Asmara, the capital of northern Eritrea province, for an emotional greeting from her husband.

She said she was treated well by her captors and that her faith kept her going during 27 days in the wilderness as a hostage of the Eritrean Liberation Front.

No reason was given for her release. The guerrillas are still holding three Americans and two Canadians kidnaped during an oil exploration mission in Eritrea three months ago.

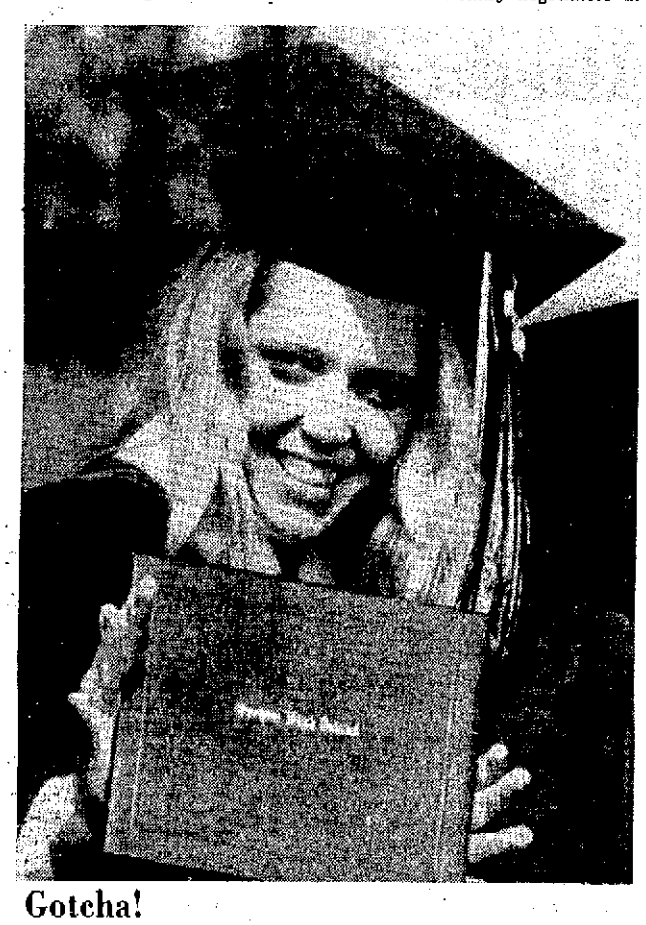

Mrs. Dortzbach, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. William W. Mull of Freehold, was abducted May 27 from a mission hospital at Ghinda, about 25 miles from Asmara. The guerrillas also took a Dutch nurse, Anna Stickwerda, 54, who was killed.

The guerrillas have been fighting for Eritrean independence from Ethiopia for the past 10 years. They stepped up activities following widespread Ethiopian military mutinies several months ago and have been reported attacking vehicles on the road between Asmara and Massawa.

There was no report that the guerrillas had attached conditions to Mrs. Dortzbach's release. Reliable sources said the guerrillas had asked earlier for $250,000 ransom, then scaled down the demand to $25,000. The sources said the guerrillas eventually abandoned the money request and asked missionary negotiators instead for medical supplies to counter cholera reported spreading in parts of Eritrea.

Tearful

Bill Rogers, a country and western songwriter who wrote "The Ballad of Richard Nixon" in defense of the President, said Saturday in Dallas he received a personal letter of appreciation from Nixon.

"I cried," Rogers, 48, said. "For a grown man to cry — it touched me and tears came to my eyes."

Rogers said he sent a framed copy of the song to Nixon.

"My wife was sitting beside me and she started crying, too," he said. "My oldest son, Richard, who is 28, was visiting and he cried, too."

Rogers, who wrote "Hanoi Jane" about a year ago and "No Justice Here Today," a mournful tune about the conviction of Lt. Calley, had to quit his job at a furniture factory because of a blood clot near his heart.

Pedaler

Concord, N.H., patrolman Robert Libby has installed a bicycle rack on his police cruiser and carries a 10-speed cycle around for use as a crime-fighting tool.

He often leaves the cruiser, mounts the bicycle and patrols back alleys and parks.

In the experimental program begun Friday night, Libby uses one of the abandoned or stolen bicycles the department has collected. If the experiment is a success, other cruisers will be similarly equipped, said Police Chief Walter Carlson.

"We kicked it around in a staff meeting and it didn't have overwhelming support," Carlson said. "But maybe it'll be a deterrent to catch a burglar or two."

Marriage plea

A 22-year-old American woman appealed to President Nixon Saturday to help her overcome Soviet red tape so she can marry a Russian next Thursday, the day Nixon begins his visit to Moscow.

Diane Nemec, the daughter of a Chicago police lieutenant, said she hoped to marry Sergei Ignashev, 36, a librarian and translator, on Thursday but Soviet authorities are withholding official documents.

In a telegram to Nixon, Miss Nemec said she is pregnant and the marriage is in jeopardy because of Soviet harassment. Miss Nemec said by harassment she meant withholding of the documents and an army induction order for her fiance.

Miss Nemec, who studied Russian at the University of Illinois and did graduate work at Berkeley, Calif., came to Moscow in June 1972. She worked as a mother's helper for a year before joining the English-language Moscow News as a translator.

Country music singer-writer Tom T. Hall has resigned from Nashville's Grand Ole Opry, saying his band wasn't allowed to use trumpets, drums and violins.

The Opry moved from downtown Nashville this spring into a $10 million glass, brick and steel, ultra-modern auditorium with an inaugural performance attended by President Nixon.

But Hall, a member of the Opry since 1971, complained in his letter of resignation sent June 10 that the Opry's policy on the use of some instruments has not kept up with the times. Specifically, some of Hall's arrangements call for a violin section, horns and a full set of drums.

Opry manager Hal Durham confirmed Hall's resignation Saturday but said: "I think the Opry has a history of tradition and authenticity in music. It also has a history of changing at the proper time as you can see in our use of amplified instruments and a partial set of drums.

"Its possible that we may see full drums on the Grand Ole Opry before long, but a string section and a brass section probably area little further down the road."

Among Hall's biggest hits included "The Ballad of Clayton Delaney" and "Old Dogs, Children, Watermellon and Wine."

Cashing in

Hundreds of penny pinchers crowded into an Orlando, Fla., shopping mall Saturday, cashing in on a merchant group's offer to pay $1.25 for every 100 pennies turned in.

Pennies were hauled in wheelbarrows, grocery carts, cigar boxes, jars, little red wagons, paper bags and baby carriages — some with babies mixed in.

By the time the exchange ended Saturday evening, an estimated 2½ million pennies had been turned in, counted and sacked by four automatic machines, and carted away by a shotgun-guarded armored truck.

The largest single contributor was Alfred Lucas, a vending machine operator, who turned in 175,000 pennies. Fred Wilcox stood in line for more than three hours, turned in 1,200 pennies and walked away with a $3 profit.

Coin-collector Robert C. Baldwin III and his father drove up in a yellow pickup truck carrying 17 cider jugs filled to the brim. Two professional glasscutters helped open the jars to get at the estimated 100,000 pennies inside.

"It would have taken forever to shake them out," said Baldwin.

Devoted

Lisa Scritchfield, 11, had this to say about her teacher: "On each of our birthdays he bakes a cake from scratch ... He is dedicated to our learning. He loves us and we love him."

So wrote Lisa in behalf of her 11 classmates in seeking "Teacher of the Year" recognition for Thomas Assenza, 26, who teachers the fourth grade in a Board of Cooperative Education Services learning disorder class at Collins, N.Y., near Buffalo.

"He is a man who would take no pay to teach us," Lisa said in the letter to the Buffalo Evening News. All of her classmates signed it.

Lisa asked the newspaper if there was some way that Assenza could be honored for his devotion. "If not as teacher of the year, could you find some way of recognition for him?"

"The News doesn't have to, Lisa — you did," the newspaper responded.

Time to retire

Former East Texas congressman John W. Dowdy, returning home to Athens, Tex., from a six-month prison sentence for perjury, said Saturday he was going to "re-retire."

Dowdy, 62, served six months at the federal prison in Springfield, Mo., on conviction for perjury stemming from his alleged attempt to block a Justice Department investigation of a Baltimore home improvement firm in exchange for a $25,000 payoff.

Dowdy said he planned to do busy work around his modest brick home. "I'm going to 're-retire.' Oh, we may run around some, but as far as travel itself, I'll do whatever my wife wants to do," said Dowdy, whose wife ran unsuccessfully for her husband's former congressional seat in 1972.

Philosopher

Jean Wahl, a major French philosopher and poet who was associated closely with Jean Paul Sartre's existentialism, has died one month after his 86th birthday.

Wahl's household said the noted teacher, who once gave Sartre a failing grade in his course at Paris's Sorbonne, died Friday in Paris. Cause of death was not announced.

Although Wahl taught existentialism, he insisted he belonged to no fixed philsophical school. He spoke of existence only by showing what it was not. Wahl's ideas had significant impact on the intellectual community in the United States.

Southern faction OKs union study

Presbyterian merger plan gains

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Southern Presbyterians Saturday approved a two-year grass-roots study of a proposed planned union with the northern-based United Presbyterian Church that could bring the two denominations — separated since the Civil War — back together before the end of the decade.

As one of the final acts of the 114th General Assembly of the Dixie-based Presbyterian Church in the U.S., delegates accepted merger proposal presented by a joint committee of the 900,000-member PCUS and the 2.9 million-member nationally organized United Presbyterians.

Union of the two churches has been cited as one of the chief causes of division in the southern church, which last year lost 200 congregationsand 55,000 members to the newly formed conservative National Presbyterian Church.

However, there was little debate in the southern General Assembly over the question of whether to send the union plan to local congregations for study.

After two years of review, the plan will be brought back to the General Assembly for another vote and then sent back to the Presbyteries—regional groupings of local churches—for approval. A final affirmation would be needed from the General Assembly.

Continuing the trend of not disturbing the status quo on social and political issues, the southern Presbyterians have tightened the reins on their Washington "lobbyists" but turned aside conservative attempts to completely shackle the office.

THE LONG wrangle over the role of the Washington office delayed until Saturday the vote to send the merger plan to study.

Officials of both denominations, meeting here concurrently, predicted that merger of the two churches could be accomplished within the next 10 years.

At the same time, representatives of the 90,000-member Cumberland Presbyterian Church told the PCUS assembly they are voluntarily joining in the two-year study of the union plan.

Reunion of the 900,000 member PCUS with the 2.9-million-member United Presbyterians would make the new structure one of the largest Protestant bodies in the United States.

There are, however, continuing roadblocks in the path of union, including conservative resistance to merger in the PCUS, and a fear on the part of blacks in the United Presbyterian Church that they will be swallowed up in areas where white PCUS churches are predominant.

The United Presbyterian Church will take up the proposed merger plan during its meetings this week with a recommendation for a similar study at the grass roots level expected to be approved by their General Assembly.

On the issue of recognition of the National Presbyterian Church—formed a year ago by separatists from the PCUS—the southern church refused to accept a plan to normalize relations with the dissidents.

IT ADOPTED a statement scorning the "divisive and damaging actions of the leaders" of the National Presbyterian Church, and in a letter to the church at large said it and three other conservative organizations "have contrary interests to the health and growth of this denomination."

Nevertheless, the delegates voted to keep lines of communication open with the National Presbyterians and said the PCUS is not interested in "retaliatory action" and the doors of the southern church would be kept open to those who seek to return to the fold of the parent church.

Missing boats found off Baja

SAN DIEGO (AP)—The Coast Guard Saturday located two sailboats reported overdue for several days but continued searching for a 40-foot ketch with three members of a Tustin family aboard.

A helicopter crew hunted between Punta Descanso and Cedros Island off Baja California for the 40-foot, black-hulled boat Ta Ata Ori, due back a week ago from a cruise to Magdalena Bay.

Aboard were Leonard C. Robbins, 48, his wife, Adrianna, 45, and their daughter Christine, 25.

The other overdue boats, the 64-foot yawl Emerald with five Los Angeles area men aboard, and the sailboat Labonnina, were found safe at San Martin Island.

Ex-Navy aide claims SALT weakens U.S.

By KATHY ESTELLE
Staff Writer

A former assistant secretary of the Navy warned a veterans' group Saturday that the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) have weakened the United States militarily and could have dangerous economic consequences.

Dr. John Johnson, who served in the Navy post from 1971 to 1973, told participants at the Military Order of World Wars convention aboard the Queen Mary, that a strong national defense is essential for a strong economy.

Johnson was the main speaker at the conference. Gen. Omar Bradley, the nation's only living five-star general was the guest of honor. Gen. Bradley made an appearance at a dinner banquet, but did not speak.

"WHEN we build more ships, we are not preparing for war, but for survival," Johnson said. He said that protection of shipping lanes is essential to the American economy because over 90 per cent of all imports and exports are transported by sea.

"It would cost us 92 per cent more to fly all our imports and exports," he added.

Johnson noted that the SALT agreements allow the Russians to build three ships for every two the United States produces, but claimed "there is no way of checking whether they build three or 33 for every two we build."

In the United States, the former secretary said, "the free flow of information through newspapers, radio and television makes it humanly impossible for the Russians not to know if we violate the agreements." A 21-year veteran of the Marine Corps whose son, a Marine 2nd lieutenant died of wounds received in Vietnam, Johnson lashed out against proposals to give amnesty to men who fled the country rather than serve in the armed forces.

"I'M NOT bitter, but I could never find it in my heart to say let's give them amnesty," he said. "When your country calls, you have no right to refuse."

Johnson urged conference participants to focus on the positive aspects of American life. He said critics should "try one of the Communist countries and they will see what we have in America." He said he has traveled through 44 other nations and "wouldn't trade one of them for the United States."

The ex-Marine also criticized the news media for what he said was focusing on the negative aspects of the country. He said that when television crews heard that his topic was going to be "Positive Aspects of American Life" they decided not to cover the speech.

"IF I HAD been speaking on black power or building an organization for the Communist Party to take over the country, none of you could have gotten past all the television cameras which would have been here to see what I was saying," he said to thunderous applause from the audience.

Johnson said that if the country is wrong, "We should do everything possible to make it right, but if it's right we ought to keep it right."

"Right or wrong," he concluded, "America is still our country and it is the only one we've got."

The shavetail is a girl

Lynda A. Taylor, the first female graduate of the Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) program at UCLA, became a small part of Air Force history Saturday when she was commissioned a 2nd lieutenant.

And there to help pin bars on the 22-year-old coed's shoulders was an Air Force legend—retired Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle, 77.

Miss Taylor, recipient of the Gen. James H. Doolittle Outstanding Service Award, smiled broadly as her father, retired Lt. Col. Charlie T. Taylor, administered the oath of office during ceremonies in the Long Beach Naval Station's Allen Center.

Gen. Doolittle, who in 1942 led the first U.S. air attack on Japan, also presented the newly commissioned 2nd lieutenant with a perpetual plaque bearing her name.

The award is given annually by the Gen. Doolittle Chapter of the Air Force Association to the outstanding ROTC graduate from UCLA, according to chapter president Dolly Foster, who said the group is located in Santa Monica.

BUT for Miss Taylor, those two, 2-inch gold bars—one on each shoulder— meant more than any award.

"I think I'm going to like the Air Force," said the English major from Palos Verdes. She is to be stationed at McCord Air Force Base in Washington as a Weapons Control Officer.

"They (ROTC instructors) don't care what your major is, as long as you're proficient in military training," she added, admitting that Chaucer and military tactics don't really go together.

Though Miss Taylor said she belongs to "an Air Force family," she claims her father's 21 years in the service had no "influence on my decision to go through the ROTC program.

"There's a retired Air Force recruiter who lives down the street from us," she continues. "He told me about the program while I was attending California State College, Dominguez Hills. I thought I'd like it, so I went and told my dad I wanted to do it. He was thrilled," she added.

MISS Taylor's twin sister, Darlene, has also joined the Air Force—by marriage. Her husband, James Robold, was commissioned in that branch of the service two weeks ago.

But the "shavetail lieutenant," who compiled a 3.6 (near perfect) grade point average at UCLA, says she didn't join the service to further the family tradition. She didn't even join to become a small part of its history.

Instead, she says, "I joined because it was something I wanted to do. All I want now is to do a good job.

"The minimum commitment is four years," she added, " but I think I might make the Air Force a career."

The softspoken Doolittle, who won the Medal of Honor as leader of the famed " Tokyo Raiders," gave the new officer an approving glance, a peek on the cheek and whispered, "Congratulations and good luck."

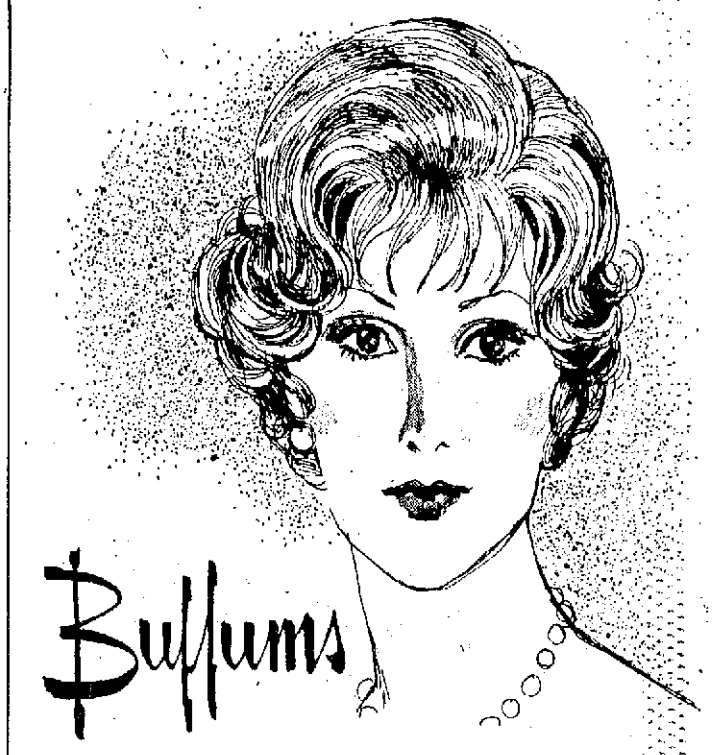

AFT teachers to join strike

Long Beach teachers in the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) have voted to authorize their board to join a school strike in September, an AFT official said Saturday.

The vote, which surprised few, came a day after the much larger Teachers Association of Long Beach (TALB) took a similar vote. TALB claims about 2,000 of the Long Beach Unified School District's 2,850 teachers, while the Long Beach Federation of Teachers, the local AFT group, numbers about 150 members.

Jerry King, president of AFT Local 1263, said the vote was 96 per cent in favor of the strike authority vote. Sixty per cent of the local's membership voted for the action, he added.

King said the Board of Education's wage offer of a 6 per cent hike was a "unilateral salary decision."

Burglar loot $1,220

Jewelry and a tape recorder, valued together at $1,220, were taken from the home of David H. Payne, 4212 California Ave., by burglars who slashed a rear door screen to gain entry, Long Beach police said Saturday.

Open store robbed

Clerks at Fern's Nutrition Center, 638 E. Fourth St., told Long Beach police Saturday that someone entered the office while the store was open for business and took $975 in cash.

Ringo set to open, close?

"Mr. Shira was given a license at first by the City Council. Then, for some reason, it was taken away. We appealed, and the appellate court ruled they had to give us the license.

"The city asked for a rehearing before the appellate court and was refused. The Supreme Courtrefused to hear the case again, too.

"At this point we have a peremptory writ of mandate in which the city must—by Monday—show they have complied by issuing the license.

"That's it. I think it's clear."

City officials don't see it as "clear," although they will issue the license.

City Manager John Mansell, who ordered the first investigation of Ringo, claims that every city and police official who watched or played the game considered it a game of chance.

"We'll look at the game when it opens," Mansell claimed, "and, if it's played the same as it has been in the past, they'll be arrested. We intend to enforce the law, and if the police feel it's an illegal game we'll back then 100 per cent — and we'll pick up every table, every card, every ball..."

If, as the operators contend, the game is one of skill, Mansell claims, it should be proved in a court of law.

Shira, who has been a resident of the city for almost a half century, maintains the city fathers would be "foolish" to arrest him and take him to court.

"We feel we can go to court and prove that Ringo is a game of skill, and the minute a court rules that way every Ringo operator in the country could be here—and I don't think the city wants that.

"Besides that," he adds, "the city will spend a lot of money to fight this. If we lose we'll take it to the highest courts.

RAY SHIRA IS READY FOR RICHES — OR A RAID
Next weekend his Ringo game opens on Long Beach Pike
— Staff Photos by ROBERT GINN

"I'll never run out of money, I can assure you."

Although he refuses to name individual backers, Shira claims he is supported by a corporation called Ringo, Inc., and that they know what they're doing.

"There are two ways around the lottery law," Shira admits frankly. "One is if you play free—as they do at some service stations—at no cost, theoretically. The other is if skill is the determining factor and not mere chance."

He says golf tournaments could fall in the latter category:

"You pay to get in, but in between the paying and the receiving you display a certain amount of skill to take it out of the lottery category."

And that, he says, is the name of his game, too.

A player will be given a free red hoop, an inch and a half in diameter, with which to circle an inch pole which stands a few feet away. If the player hoops the ring, he can play two bingo cards free. If he doesn't he can buy hoops in an attempt to get his Ringo cards free. The hoop and/or two cards are a quarter.

At the end of a routine Ringo game, the player winning—getting five numbers in a row—must hoop a two-inch peg with a hoop that is 3¼ inches in diameter. He gets three chances.

If he hoops it, he gets the prize, which Shira says will be $10 and up. If he misses, Shira says, it shows he's not a good hoop thrower, and he doesn't get a prize.

But there will be a chance for players to practice hooping the pegs, the owner-operator says, since "practice tables" will be open all day long—from noon when the operations begin until 2 a.m. when they close down.

PRACTICING the game is Bertha Warrington, retired, of Long Beach.

Meanwhile, apparently in anticipation of a chance to play, would-be players have continued to haunt the game room at 130 W. Pike, even though construction workers are still putting the finishing touches on the equipment.

"I don't have anything to do all day long," one elderly woman said as she wandered through the tables Friday, "so we really need a place like this for us old folks—so many like to play Bingo."

Shira recognizes this and maintains Ringo would not only entertain the elderly but would revitalize the amusement zone.

And, apparently, so do the Downtown Long Beach Associates—who sent Ringo, Inc., a monthly news bulletin complete with application for membership.

"We want to be of the community," the Ringo owner claims, "and we'll join the DLBA and the Chamber of Commerce as soon as we get our license."

And the license, say officials of the city's licensing bureau, is ready for Shira to pick up.

But the police say they are ready, too.

A perfect day for beaches but smoggy inland

Overcast skies in coastal areas this morning and midday smog alerts inland are in store for Southern California residents, but weather along the beaches should be ideal this afternoon, forecasters said.

High temperatures in the mid-80s were forecast for the Long Beach area, with 83 predicted for Long Beach, 85 for Anaheim and Santa Ana and 85 for central Los Angeles.

Smog alerts were issued Saturday for the San Fernando, San Gabriel, and Pomona-Walnut Valley areas, and Air Pollution Control District forecasters said more health warnings would probably be issued today.

Winds up to 30 mph were forecast for desert areas, where high temperatures were expected to range from 95 to 118.

In Southland mountains, occasional winds and temperatures in the high 70s and 80s were forecast.

Arms cache seized as L.A. police arrest 7

Associated Press

A weapons cache has been seized and seven persons arrested in a sweep against juvenile gangs, Los Angeles police said Saturday.

Raids late Friday and early Saturday at four locations netted 10 handguns, five shotguns, 100-150 rounds of ammunition, about $1,700 in cash and some narcotics, Sgt. William Duffy said. He said the five men and two women arrested were all members of "violence prone groups," or juvenile gangs.

Duffy is the uniformed supervisor of a squad in the 77th Street Division called "Community Resources against 77th Hoodlums."

Bandits hijack truck of meat

A truckload of ham and bacon valued at $7,000 was taken from the Serve-Rite Meat Co. early Saturday by two stocking-masked bandits who left two cleanup men in walk-in freezers, police said.

Firestone sheriffs deputies found the empty meat company truck parked at the 1900-block of east El Segundo Blvd. a few hours after the robbery.

Investigators said the bandits entered the meat plant, 2515 E. Anaheim St., through an unlocked rear door and confronted cleanup men Arturo C. Mendez, 53, and Raul Juarez Gaona, 39.

They were ordered to "just be quiet," said Gaona, who was struck on the side of the head by one of the bandits carrying a sawed-off rifle.

After their hands were tied with wire, the cleanup men were placed in large, separate freezers whose doors the bandits tied with wire from the outside.

Police said the bandits took a pistol and truck keys out of a desk drawer and proceeded to cart off 192 rolls of boneless ham valued at more than $5,000. From a third refrigerator, they took about $2,000 worth of bacon slabs.

They loaded the meat into a two-ton refrigerator truck at the rear of the plant and fled.

Gaona and Mendez pushed against the bound doors until the wires snapped and freed them from the refrigerators.

Gaona said the bandits also robbed him of a company paycheck.

Top mediator in nurse strike

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) —Negotiators for hospitals and striking nurses met with the nation's top labor mediator Saturday, but spokesmen for both sides reported no progress in settling the two-week strike by 4,000 nurses against 42 hospitals and clinics.

"We're still laying the ground work for real negotiations," said Norman Walker, an agent with the Federal Mediation Service. "There have been no significant developments."

The session with William Ussery, director of the service, and other federal mediators lasted six hours. The talks were to resume today.

Ussery flew to San Francisco from Washington Friday after hospitals said there was danger of a crisis resulting from the nurses' abandonment of emergency rooms and intensive care units.

"I'm hopeful that I will be able to help resolve the issues and settle the strike," Ussery said before meeting with hospital officials at a hotel.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the striking California Nurses Association warned that "the potential is there for a very long strike unless we get our demands.

"The nurses started out strong and they're getting firmer every day," said Eric Poole of the union, which called a strike June 7 against 28 hospitals and 14 clinics from San Jose to Sacramento.

Bargaining talks on the strike issues—which include wages, pensions and working conditions—broke off at midweek after the two sides said they were making no progress. Earlier, the intervention of a state mediator had failed to create a breakthrough.

In what hospital officials claim was an unprincipled escalation, nurses Wednesday walked out of many emergency rooms and intensive care units which they had agreed to staff during the dispute.

"Doctors and licensed vocational nurses are having to work long hours to keep these special services going," said Larry Corbett, a spokesman for Associated Hospitals, one of three private hospital groups affected by the strike.

Children's Hospital in Oakland reported it had transferred 50 of its 82 patients because it was unable to provide adequate nursing care.

Poole said the nurses pulled out of special services only because the hospitals were violating their agreement to cancel routine surgery during the dispute.

"They simply were taking advantage of us," Poole said. "Our members are always available on a standby basis in a real emergency."

The Teamsters Union gave the walkout formal sanction Thursday and halted all deliveries except those of vital items such as oxygen, blood, prescription drugs and food.

In Oakland, hospital officials obtained a court order forcing garbage collectors to make pickups at the hospital. Some hospitals were reporting laundry shortages.

The union is demanding a 5.5 per cent increase in nurses' salaries plus a cost-of-living escalator. The nurses also seek guaranteed alternate weekends off, better pensions, and a promise that only properly trained nurses be assigned to work in special services units.

Current monthly salaries for registered nurses range from $915 to $1,035.

9 Republicans may be key to Nixon future

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's fate in the House impeachment inquiry may be decided by nine Republicans.

At 5:45 p.m. Friday, the House Judiciary Committee completed six weeks of closed hearings on impeachment evidence assembled by the inquiry staff.

In the next four weeks, the 38 members of the committee will decide whether the evidence warrants a recommendation that the President stand trial in the Senate for alleged constitutional crimes.

Well-placed members of the House and officials of the impeachment inquiry whose views have been sought in the past few days believe that a majority of the Judiciary Committee will vote in favor of impeaching Nixon.

But the majority will be composed mostly of Democrats. And the outcome on the House floor, where 397 other members will decide whether to accept the findings of their 38 colleagues on the committee, may be determined by the extent to which the impeachment recommendation has Republican support.

No one seems certain how much bipartisan breadth would be persuasive. There are 17 Republicans on the committee. One of them, Rep. Tom Railsback of Illinois, said two or three Republican votes might be sufficient. Five, according to a respected Democratic official, would be "substantial." Rep. John B. Anderson, chairman of the House Republican conference, estimated that "more than two or three"

REP CHARLES WIGGINS
"Not Enough to Impeach"

would be the deciding factor.

Accordingly, in the view of those who have closely watched the conduct of the inquiry for clues to its outcome, Nixon's impeachment or exoneration could hinge on the following:

—A series of crucial procedural decisions that the committee will make next week. The issues, over which the committee is split along partisan lines, include the form and scope of a rebuttal presentation to be made by White House lawyers and the number and identity of witnesses who will be summoned to testify at impeachment hearings.

—The votes on proposed articles of impeachment that will be cast by eight committee Republicans widely regarded as uncommitted. They are Robert McClory and Railsback of Illinois, Henry P. Smith III and Hamilton Fish Jr. of New York, Wiley Mayne of Iowa, Lawrence J. Hogan of Maryland, M. Caldwell Butler of Virginia and William S. Cohen of Maine.

—The role that John M. Doar, the committee's special counsel on impeachment, will play in the final stages of the inquiry. He, too, is a Republican.

"John Doar is the most important person in the whole proceeding," an associate of his said this week.

In the 18 days of hearings that ended Friday, Doar and his staff presented to the committee 36 volumes of evidence, consisting of 650 findings of fact and 7,200 pages of supporting documentation, and played a total of 12 hours of the President's tape-recorded White House conversations.

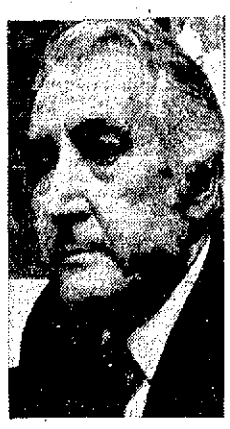

If the evidence was massive in scope, it apparently was not conclusive in content — or, at least, in form. It was said to contain substantial indications that the President violated criminal laws and disregarded constitutional obligations, but no indisuputable proof that he had.

"I'd prefer to be the defense counsel," summed up Rep. Charles E. Wiggins of California, who has emerged, to the delight of most of his Republican colleagues, as the leading defender of Nixon inside the committee.

"Looking to what is generally regarded as the most important question — Watergate and the cover-up — I don't think there's enough there to impeach the President of the United States," Wiggins said.

But the committee's Democratic chairman, Rep. Peter W. Rodino Jr. of New Jersey, is apparently prepared to come to the opposite conclusion.

Without flatly stating any conclusion, but in terms more forthright than Rodino has used before, he assessed the presentation by Doar as follows:

REP PETER RODINO
"Grounds for Consideration"

"The committee has before it material that it can base a judgment on. What we have presented lays a basis for what I believe are grounds for consideration (of presidential wrongdoing)."

Rodino said that "the question in the minds of the committee members has to be, with all we have seen, do we evaluate this in a way that (concludes) the President has failed to execute the laws faithfully, has abused his power and in specific instances has violated the rights of individuals?"

How the committee answers such questions may well be influenced by Doar's actions.

Until now, he has been rigidly impartial. Democrats, Republicans and even the President's chief defense counsel, James D. St. Clair, have stated that Doar presented the evidence without characterizing or coloring it. As one of his associated stated it:

"Doar's feeling is that his ideal role should be that the day he leaves here nobody remembers he was here."

Many committee members, however, say that they have been inundated by such a flood of evidence that they cannot determine, without some guidance or at least consultation, where to locate the high-water mark of proper grounds for impeachment.

The closer they get to a vote assessing Nixon's conduct, the more fidgety committee members — especially southern Democrats and neutral Republicans — have become. For many of them, a vote on impeachment could decide their own political futures.

Rep. Walter Flowers, D-Ala., said the committee had come to a "turning point," a juncture at which he was undecided as to which road he would take. "I think it's a coin flip right now" whether Mr. Nixon will be impeached, he added.

Both advocates and opponents of impeachment in their districts send wavering committee members mail containing veiled, and sometimes explicit, threats that a vote either way will end the member's career. Some members have privately expressed regret that the staff presentation did not contain some damning, irrefutable piece of evidence — "the murder weapon," they call it — that would decide the question to the satisfaction of their constituents.

Without, apparently, such a piece of evidence, the committee is faced with a decision based on an accumulation of bits and pieces of a potential case against the President and on the theory that Nixon's defiance of committee subpoenas and requests for 153 more tape recordsings supports the "adverse inference" that the tapes would be incriminating.

Bond hails McCarthy's victory

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Assemblyman Bill Bond, R-Long Beach, Saturday hailed the expected election this week of Leo McCarthy, D-San Francisco, to the Assembly speakership as "a positive step in the direction of bringing about legislative reform in California."

McCarthy would replace Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, vacating the post Thursday and leaving the Assembly at year's end after his unsuccessful gubernatorial bid. McCarthy has votes enough for victory in the unanimous backing of his own party, a condition moved by Assemblyman Willie Brown, D-San Francisco, after Brown trailed McCarthy 26-22 in the Democrats' first caucus.

Bond said McCarthy also had the support of the majority of the Republican caucus "because of his willingness to make changes in the organization and operation of the Assembly.

"Brown is a highly capable, hard-working and articulate legislator, but his ties are so close with the entrenched Democratic power structure that it would be difficult for him to make significant changes. Similar to Congress, this is simply a situation in which vested interests stifle progress."

Bond said 10 of 14 Democratic freshmen supported McCarthy, meaning that "new blood will be occupying leadership posts in the future." He commended McCarthy's ability and said, "You can trust his word."

The Long Beach legislator, now the GOP nominee for Congress in the 34th District, said that while he dislikes the idea of centering such far-reaching authority in an office not accountable to all the voters in California, the speakership being generally recognized as second only to the governorship in power, "McCarthy has indicated his willingness to reduce power of this position by relinquishing to the seven-member bipartisan Rules Committee the authority to assign bills. However, he will retain the authority to assign members to committees and to designate committee chairmen.

"Furthermore, the 26 standing committees will be reduced in number and committee chairmanships will be given to the minority party more in accordance with its proportional representation. Currently only three of the 31 GOP members head committees.

"There are many other reforms that could and should be made in the Assembly," Bond said. "I am confident that McCarthy will modernize and improve its overall operation. In terms of the future, his election to this critical post could be the most important decision that will be made during the current session."

GOP unity

Sumner M. Offill, Republican nominee for Assembly in the 58th District (East Long Beach, Lakewood, Signal Hill, Hawaiian Gardens) has been joined by his primary opponents, Jim Gray and George Curry, for a unified GOP campaign for the general election, according to Paul Jenkins, chairman of the Republican Central Committee.

Jenkins said, "The cooperative attitude and spirit expressed by George and Jim assures us that we will have a unified, determined team working for victory in November." Jenkins praised Offill, chief assistant to StateSen. George Deukmejian, as "a young man who is uniquely qualified to provide effective, conscientious representation to all the citizens of the 58th District."

Democrats meet

Democratic candidates and members of the party's state and county central committees will attend a public meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday in Democratic Headquarters, 3390 Magnolia Ave., Long Beach, to discuss the November election.

AIP headquarters

American Independent Party candidates Jim Griffin, 33rd Congressional District, and Larry Breazeale, 63rd Assembly District, announced they will jointly kick off their campaigns at the open-house opening of their new headquarters Saturday noon at 14305 San Antonio Dr., Norwalk.

Brief ceremonies are scheduled for 2 p.m. The headquarters will remain open until 8 p.m. Information is available at 868-2893 or 863-6428.

Nixon call for summit leaves allies puzzled

By RICHARD C. LONGWORTH

BRUSSELS (UPI) — President Nixon's sudden decision to whip up a giant Western summit here this week left his allies divided Saturday over the question: Is this trip really necessary?

Soundings in the capitals of America's 14 North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) allies revealed various reactions to the meeting, with Holland miffed, Britain satisfied, Belgium skeptical, West Germany lukewarm, Italy enthusiastic and France blase. Only Iceland isn't coming because of an election there.

Nixon will arrive here Tuesday evening and leave Thursday morning for Moscow.

On Wednesday, he will brief the other NATO leaders on the Moscow trip ahead and the Middle East trip just finished, then join them in signing the NATO "Declaration of Principles" approved by their foreign ministers in Ottawa this week.

Belgian sources said the government here was happy about the briefings, because of long-standing European demands for more consultations on U.S. policy. Without this, they said, Nixon's visit here would be "useless" because the declaration signing "is not quite necessary."

THE SOURCES mentioned what most European governments assume—that the summit is planned partially for domestic U.S. political purposes as the President fights against the prospect of impeachment.

Unlike most other NATO nations, France is sending its second most powerful man —Premier Jacques Chirac. But French sources said President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's reason for staying in Paris — that the Shah of Iran will be there the same day— is understood and accepted by Washington.

The sources said France favors the Nixon briefing. They said Nixon's attempts to arrange the summit earlier were vetoed by Giscard d'Estaing's predecessor, the late George Pompidou, and it is only because of Giscard d'Estaing's warmer attitude toward the United States that it is being held at all.

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt held off the expected announcement that he will attend until he saw whether other leaders were going. This hesitancy was seen in Bonn as proof of Schmidt's lukewarm attitude toward the sudden NATO announcement that Nixon wanted a summit and was summoning his allies, in effect, to Brussels.

The same attitude prevailed in The Hague, where Premier Joop Den Uyl first considered staying home, then changed his mind when he saw leaders of larger nations booking flights to Brussels. Dutch sources said Den Uyl was angered by Nixon's lack of consultation with other NATO nations before springing the announcement.

BRITISH Prime Minister Harold Wilson, who has urged better U.S.-Europeam relations since he came to power earlier this year, will lead the British delegation. A government spokesman called the signing of the declaration "simply a logical next step after Ottawa", but said Nixon's briefing on his Moscow visit would be the most valuable aspect of the visit.

Before his previous Moscow trip, Nixon sent Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger here to brief the allies. But Kissinger did not tell them that Nixon would sign documents with the Russians pledging "peaceful coexistence" and no nuclear war, and many NATO nations—particularly France— complained about this later.

The NATO nations bickered for more than a year before initialing a watered-down version of the "Atlantic Declaration" in Ottawa. At one point, Kissinger was reported ready to drop the whole exercise but its signing has been turned now into one of the basic reasons for the Brussels summit.

Mideast trip was no picnic

By FRANCES LEWINE

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's trip to the Kremlin may prove every bit as fatiguing for his travel-weary troupe as his tour of the Mideast. But for sheer frenzy, it probably won't come close.

The President's journey to Moscow two years ago was marked by long hours at the conference table but comparatively little ceremonial commotion. The same businesslike atmosphere is expected to prevail this time around.

Officially, his itinerary calls only for stops at Brussels and the Soviet capital on the 10-day mission, though it will come as no surprise if Nixon does some unscheduled touring of the Soviet countryside.

EVEN so, his security and transportation aides should have far fewer headaches than they encountered in the Mideast, where huge crowds, concern about about terrorist activity and the whirlwind hops from one country to the next kept them in constant motion in an effort to stay a step ahead of the President.

Unlike Nixon, many of them got no break at all in the five-day period between the two journeys. A number of Secret Service agents and advance men left directly for Europe from the Mideast.

The President would have complicated their woe had he stuck to his plan to go to Florida in the meantime. Instead, he settled on Camp David, Md.

Nixon, said Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, was "not overly tired" by the trip, even if he "showed the hours and the miles."

But others didn't fare so well. The three White House doctors who accompanied the President said all but a lucky few suffered at one time or another from such ailments as diarrhea, dysentery, heat exhaustion, colds, chills and fever, cuts and bruises.

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Nixon both grew hoarse at times from the dust and changes in temperature — going from the heat of the desert to palace air conditioning that often was too cold for comfort.

And palaces there were. The President slept and visited in more of them than even King Farouk had dreamed of -- and he walked on more Persian rugs than most Arabs do in a lifetime.

Optimism on Moscow summit

Nixon hopes to promote detente

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon heads for the summit in Moscow Tuesday in hopes of promoting U.S.-Soviet detente through new nuclear and economic agreements.

Officials here are careful not to excite American expectations. But Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Communist party leader, already has set an optimistic tone predictig "good new agreements" that will please people in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger plans to report to the NATO Council after the summit and swing through Paris, Munich and London for meetings with French, West German and British leaders.

He will stop also in Madrid to sign a similar declaration with Spain.

Nixon's Soviet visit begins on Thursday and will last a week, with side tours to such points as a Black Sea resort in the Crimea serving as diversions from the business of the third annual summit.

Coming on the heels of a five-nation trip to the Middle East, the Moscow summit serves to focus attention at home on the President's interest and accomplishments in the foreign field. Critics suggest that Nixon hopes thereby to offset his Watergate troubles and to improve his chances in Congress of surviving the impeachment drive.

Initially, the administration looked to the summit session to produce a comprehensive treaty limiting strategic nuclear weapons. But it lowered its sights when a Kissinger mission to the Kremlin in March did not result in the breakthrough needed to expand upon the pioneering 1972 SALT pact.

Now, Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger and other senior U.S. officials seem confident that Nixon's visit will result at least in a partial ban on underground nuclear tests and in an agreement in principle to limit the deployment of new Soviet missiles with multiple warheads.

A group of U.S. scientists and technical experts was sent to Moscow a week ago to join the technical team already in the Soviet capital working out the details of the agreements Nixon hopes to sign.

Standing in the way of a broad, new SALT accord are internal debates within the two countries as well as differences between them on how to measure nuclear strength and on the significance of the Soviets' massive launch-power.

If Nixon makes any headway on th Soviet Union's emigration policies, it almost certainly will be done behind the scenes. Publicly the Soviets have assailed congressional pressures for further concessions. In a commencement speech at the U.S. Naval Academy, Nixon said world peace could be undermined if the United States attempted to intervene in Soviet internal affairs.

The obvious pressure point is the Soviet need for American technology and wider and wider trade to help satisfy a domestic yearning for consumer goods and a less arduous life. A majority of both houses of Congress remains ready to block lower tariffs or larger credits unless the restrictions on emigration are ended.

In any event, the United States and the Soviet Union were aiming to sign a new, long-term agreement for cooperating on large-scale joint economic projects.

In October 1972, the two countries signed a detailed agreement on tariffs, marketing, business contacts and other matters. It has never gone into effect because Moscow was not given "most favored nation" status.

U.S., Spain to sign NATO-type accord

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States and Spain agreed Saturday to base their relations on a declaration of principles similar to the new NATO guidelines, smoothing the way toward a renewal of leases on U.S. military bases.

A State Department spokesman said Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Spanish officials will sign the unprecedented declaration on principles of military, political and economic cooperation in Madrid July 9.

After that, the two nations will open negotiations for renewal of the agreements that make Spain a major overseas outpost of U.S. nuclear power, with a nuclear submarine base at Rota, a Strategic Air Command base at Torrejon and a smaller air base at Moron. The agreements governing those bases expire this year, but Saturday's announcement seemed to make their renewal likely.

Kissinger and Spain's foreign minister, Pedro Cortina Mauri, issued a joint communique announcing the prospective declaration of principle after seven hours of talks Friday and Saturday.

The communique said the declaration would recognize the two nations are interdependent for security and would "coordinate their common (defense) efforts with those of existing Atlantic organizations."

Washington and Madrid have never had such a declaration to guide their relations before.

Nixon cancels Yalta site for meeting with Soviets

MOSCOW (UPI)—President Nixon has canceled plans to visit Yalta when he comes to the Soviet Union next Thursday, American sources said Saturday.

They said the reasons for the cancellation were political because Nixon did not want to give his political enemies in the U.S. opportunity to say that he had come to Yalta for a new "sellout" of American interests.

Yalta, a Black Sea resort, was the site of the 1945 Big Three conference involving President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Prime Minister Winston S. Churchill and Premier Josef V. Stalin.

Afterward many persons in the U.S., including Nixon, accused Roosevelt of having sold out American interests in agreements with Stalin on the division of postwar Germany and other issues.

American sources said the Soviets originally proposed that Nixon go to Yalta and perhaps stay at the Livadiya palace, site of the 1945 conference.

But they said a White House advance party that arrived in Moscow Thursday informed the Soviets that Yalta was not acceptable.

The advance party left Saturday for the Black Sea area. The sources said they were scouting Pitsunda and possibly other sites as an alternative to Yalta.

A vacation complex for high Soviet government officials is located at Pitsunda. Communist party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev played host to the late French President Georges Pompidou at Pitsunda last March.

Mayors neutral on Watergate; issue called critical for cities

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The leader of the nation's mayors said Saturday the impasse in Washington could be resolved by the immediate resignation or impeachment of President Nixon, but his colleagues refused to formally embroil themselves in Watergate politics.

Democratic Mayor Roy B. Martin Jr. of Norfolk, Va., without specifically urging impeachment, said a prolonged trial of the President would be disastrous for the nation and particularly for critical urban legislation stalled in the Congress.

Martin's comments came during a news conference opening the 42nd annual meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, of which he is president.

SAN DIEGO'S MAYOR Pete Wilson, left, and Norfolk's Mayor Roy B. Martin Jr. tell news conference that national Watergate preoccupation must be cleared up so cities' problems may be solved. —UPI

HE SAID a critical lack of leadership from Washington could be resolved "by either immediate impeachment and conviction, resignation or forget it." But he said he didn't think Nixon would resign or that Congress would expedite the impeachment proceedings.

Thus, the mayors should "forget Mr. Nixon" and seek action on their programs in their own way," Martin said. He suggested the need for "a domestic Kissinger" who could shepherd programs of interest to the cities through Congress.

But when the conference sessions formally began, other mayors thought it best to avoid the Watergate-impeachment controversy. With scant debate, the resolutions committee killed three proposed measures dealing with Watergate and related matters.

ONE OF THEM would have asked Congress to write a strict legal definition of a president's executive privilege and implied powers. Specifically, the resolution wanted to legally prohibit a president from refusing to spend funds appropriated by Congress.

Republican Mayor Ralph J. Perk of Cleveland, a candidate for the U.S. Senate, and Mayor Kenneth A. Gibson of Newark, who campaigned against Nixon two years ago, joined in saying the conference should avoid the touchy political issue.

"This is not in line with our objectives and goals," Perk said. "We risk turning a governmental conference into a political convention."

GIBSON SAID the issue should properly be handled by the House and, should it come to a trial, by the Senate.

Norfolk's Martin said Vice President Gerald Ford is the logical person to work with the mayors in the concept of a "domestic Kissinger." But Ford has not done so, he added.

The mayors invited Ford to attend their five-day session, but his office said he would not be able to come. The vice president has been in California the past several days and was playing golf in the Monterey area Saturday.

But there was a substantial White House delegation in attendance, led by Kenneth Cole, Nixon's chief domestic adviser, and Secretary James Lynn of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

ONE LEADING mayor, a Democrat who declined to be quoted by name, said the White House contingent was seeking to blunt impeachment talk and head off such resolutions as the one on executive privilege and implied powers.

Lynn called a private conference Saturday night with six mayors to brief them on the administration's position on pending urban legislation. The mayors invited were the ones who were scheduled to be interviewed on the nationally televised program "Meet the Press" originating from San Diego this morning.

The conference transportation committee urgently appealed to Congress to approve an $18 billion program of federal aid for public transit systems over the next five years.

'... our politicans are thieves'

Blue-collar voters bitter

By WILLIAM K. STEVENS
New York Times Service

WARREN, Mich. — Bob Vavro, a 45-year-old welder whose generous Slavic features hint strongly at his heritage, is a genuine American original, blue-collar style.

If his mood is at all representative, there is a huge political question mark hanging over the country's industrial centers, those concentrations of electoral strength that helped muscle Franklin Roosevelt and John Kennedy into the presidency, then went over to Richard Nixon in 1972.

Tough and profane, Vavro is proud of the memories of 35 years ago when, as a boy in Detroit, he carried knucklebone soup to strikers on the picket line. In those days Vavro's parents, Czechoslovak immigrants, voted Democratic as faithfully as they went to Mass.

So did most other working men, who saw the Democratic Party as the traditional guardian of their interests. And so did Vavro when he grew up.

But then the Varos of the nation made money and moved to cozy, secure, honor-the-flag suburbs like this one on Detroit's northern border. Seriously protective of what they had achieved, they grew conservative. Their political affection went unreservedly to Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace. When the assassination attempt removed him from the 1972 presidential picture, they looked at Sen. George S. McGovern, blanched at his "ultra-liberalism," and handed Nixon a big chunk of his landslide election victory.

NOW THEY seem disillusioned, hurt, angry and somewhat confused by the scandals of the Nixon administration. Their loyalties appear to be shifting again — not so much back toward the Democrats, although a significant number might eventually go that way, as toward the candidate, regardless of party, who proves himself to be the most upright and honest man available. It would help if he were conservative.

"Next time around," Vavro said the other day over a beer in the living room of his $40,000 home on a quiet Warren cul-de-sac, "we're all gonna be looking close at that candidate, and, damn it, he better be honest."

"I thought Nixon was going to be the greatest thing since popcorn at the movies," Vavro said.

And now, after Watergate?

"I feel so bad about the whole thing that I won't read the transcripts," he answered. "I couldn't bear it. I feel so betrayed by it. I think Nixon should resign."

The unkindest cut of all was the conviction and disgrace of former Vice President Spiro Agnew. He was Vavro's particular hero, standing "toe to toe," as he did, with the "pseudo-intellectuals" and the powerful of the media.

"I STILL think they should've hung him," Vavro said. "Maybe this is an Archie Bunker point of view, but I firmly believe that 70 or 80 per cent of our politicans are thieves. It's not just Nixon or Agnew. Hey, there's hundreds of them."

The results of random interviews with Warrenites during the last few days strongly suggest that Nixon would have a tough time winning here again. Betrayal of trust — for that is how it is widely perceived — is not taken lightly.

"It's like you lost your trust in everybody," said 32-year-old Dick Snyder, a tool and die maker. "Things looked so good, and then all of a sudden, zap."

Wallace remains a darling. But if he is not a realistic candidate, as many believe, the vote here appears for the present to be up for grabs.

This disillusionment, this prevading distrust of things political, may well be the legacy the Nixon administration has left with blue-collar America.

HUD facing 'crisis' in repairs on foreclosures

United Press International

The Department of Housing and Urban Development faces a crisis because of rising construction costs, a federal housing administrator said in Los Angeles Saturday.

H.R. Crawford, assistant secretary for housing management in HUD, said the department is finding it difficult to repair foreclosed houses in order to market them.

"We are taking back on a national basis between 3,500 to 5,000 homes per month," said Crawford, here to inform minority and small business repair contractors and brokers of the opportunity that exists to repair HUD houses.

"We expected to have at the end of the next fiscal year some 200,000 single-family properties."

"What we are facing is a sort of crisis in that our ability to market these houses is based on our ability to repair them and get them ready for marketing."

Crawford said the average repair on a foreclosed house runs "anywhere from $8,000 to $10,000." He said HUD expects to pay $100 million this year just to repair and maintain the houses it has control over.

Tornadoes, floods hit mid-U.S., kill three

Associated Press

Tornadoes, severe thunderstorms and flooding struck the nation's midsection Saturday, piling up damage and resulting in at least three storm-related deaths in Iowa.

A flash flood near Whitten, Iowa, swept a 6-year-old boy to his death as his parents clung to tree limbs over a raging creek. Two persons were electrocuted by downed utility lines elsewhere in Iowa.

The storm system extended from the middle Mississippi Valley to the central Appalachians.

CLASHES OF warm and cool air masses brought tornado watches for parts of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia. Flash flood watches were posted for parts of Illinois and West Virginia.

Thunderstorms, accompanied by high winds and hail, hammered Illinois and Indiana throughout the day. Several tornadoes touched down, damaging property and choking roads with debris.

Several mobile homes were overturned near Universal and a tornado was sighted at Mecca in western Indiana, where trees were toppled and power lines downed.

But no deaths were reported and there were few injuries.

In the Peoria, Ill., area 4.25 inches of rain washed out some rural roads. In Edwards 100 persons were evacuated as Kickapoo Creek overflowed and in Pekin 100 residents were forced to leave their homes when water began pouring over the banks of Lake Arlan.

National Guardsmen sandbagged the lake's banks and Red Cross units cared for the evacuees.

More than 5 inches of rain doused parts of eastern Kentucky and the hamlet of Neon was under 3 to 4 feet of water.

Meanwhile, residents returned home and shoveled mud and debris from their basements as flood waters began to recede from the southeastern Minnesota town of Elba, population 158.

Gov. Wendell Anderson said he would fly to the area Monday and survey the damage from Friday's flooding in the three-county area.

THUNDERSHOWERS were common from northern Arkansas to the Texas Panhandle and were scattered over Florida, Louisiana and New England.

There was a wide contrast of temperatures throughout the nation, ranging from the 50s and 60s in the western Great Lakes area to the 100s from Texas to Southern California.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from 51 at Marquette, Mich., to 107 at Palm Springs and Phoenix, Ariz.

SMOKE POURS from Villa Nova Apartments Saturday in Spokane. Arson is suspected. —AP Wirephoto

12 blazes tie up Spokane firemen

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Twelve fires erupted in Spokane and its suburbs Saturday, and officials of three fire departments said at least 10 of them were the work of arsonists. The most serious destroyed a three-story apartment building, leaving about 60 persons homeless.

Within a 6½-hour period, flames broke out at the Villa Nova Apartments, the North Side Building, Automotive Warehouse Distributors, Inc., and Gung Ho Restaurant.

Fires also struck a motorcycle distributorship, a truck distributorship, two parked cars, three parked trucks and a wooden shed in a suburban area.

Spokane Fire Chief Alfred L. O'Conner said it was not known whether the fires were the work of the same arsonist.

Eleven trucks answered the predawn three-alarm call for assistance at the apartment building, a brick structure perched on a steep hillside at the western edge of the city's downtown area.

Units from a fire station a block away were fighting an arson fire at the automotive warehouse when the apartment alarm was received.

But soon after the apartment was reported in flames, crews were dispatched to the restaurant, where a set blaze damaged a doorway and trash container. As firemen struggled there, flames broke out in an automobile parked 50 feet away.

At that point, with all the city's fire apparatus shifted to key locations, a two-alarm call came from the building supply company.

Auction threatens quiet isle

CENTREVILLE, Md. (UPI) — Only a month after local officials and conservationists thought they had saved historic and beautiful Wye Island from development, its owners have announced an auction of one-third of its unpopulated 2,800 acres.

The serene island, only about 40 miles from the 5 million people of the Baltimore-Washington area, was one of the first inhabited in the bay region.

But it has contained only two farms since early in this century. It is considered by some to be one of the most beautiful places on earth.

Owners Frank and William Hardy listed 890 acres for sale in classified ads last week, to be sold at an auction on July 20, unless they sell the entire island before July 17.

THE LAND, including nine miles of undeveloped waterfront unchanged since colonial times, will be sold in about 30 parcels ranging in size from 15 to 70 acres at about $5,000 an acre.

A month ago the Rouse Co., developers of the new city of Columbia, Md., withdrew a proposal to build a low density luxury project on the island, citing strenuous local opposition and the current money market.

With the Baltimore-Washington region growing at the rate of 100,000 persons a year and land becoming scarce close to the two cities, the island, just south of the five-lane Chesapeake Bay Bridges, across the Bay from Annapolis, is a prime target for development.

Migraine headaches linked to use of pill

CHICAGO (AP) — A study of migraine patients shows that women who take birth control pills or estrogens in other forms have more headaches than other such patients, a researcher reports.

Dr. Lee Kudrow told the annual meeting of the American Association for the Study of Headache on Saturday that stopping use of the pill reduced headache frequency among most of the women. He said changing the estrogen dosage and its timing helped women taking this hormone as therapy, he said.

Kudrow, director of the California Medical Clinic for Headache, studied 300 headache sufferers, 239 of them women, 62 per cent of whom were using estrogens in some form. One female hormone is sometimes prescribed for postmenopausal women and for treatment of some diseases.

Migraine has been associated with constriction of blood vessels in the head, and Kudrow suggested that constriction of blood vessels caused by estrogens may cause migraine headaches in these women.

A family history of migraine was significantly lower among women on the pill, he said, indicating that inheritance of migraine tendencies was not so important in many women as was use of the oral contraceptive. Many of these women did not suffer from migraine until after they started using the pill, the physician reported.

Seventy per cent of the women using oral contraceptives showed a marked reduction of headache frequency after they stopped taking the pills, although this often did not occur until four weeks after discontinuation.

DIAL 432-3451

ACTION LINE is your service, solving your problems, getting your answers, cutting red tape and standing up for your rights. To get action, write ACTION LINE, Box 230, Long Beach, Calif. 90801, or dial 432-3451 between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m., Monday through Friday. Questions to be answered are selected for their general interest and helpfulness. Please, do not send original documents you wish returned.

Leaf it to me

Could you please give me instructions for starting a compost bin? What types of cuttings do I put in? Do I add manure, or what? G.G., Lomita.

The easiest and most common method, recommended by a spokesman for a local nursery, involves the use of Dexol compost maker, available at most nurseries for $1.49 a pound. He said you should start your compost bin with a three-inch layer of leaves (any except eucalyptus), grass clippings or other organic refuse. Add to this a light layer of the compost maker, then top with two inches of good soil. Repeat these layers until the pile is the height you want. Water heavily every 10 days and keep the bin covered. The Dexol compost maker will eliminate the need to fork the pile over from time to time. It will take about three months for the pile to decompose to the point where it is ready for use, the spokesman said. Compost is used as a fertilizer to loosen the soil and keep it in condition.

Tired of waiting

In May I purchased two mag wheels for $96.57 from the Tyre Shack, 13042 Gilbert St., Garden Grove. The wheels were found to be defective when I had the tires mounted. The store replaced the wheels but the new pair were worse than the original ones. I returned the merchandise and was promised a refund by mail. I have never received it and believe I am getting the run-around. Could ACTION LINE please help me get my refund? S.B., Sunset Beach.

ACTION LINE contacted the store and by now you have received your refund check. Ian Gerard, owner of the Tyre Shack, said a check had been sent to you before, but it apparently was lost in the mail.

Home sweet home

I am interested in taking out a homestead on some property I own. Would you please tell me whom to contact? Mrs. J.J.G., Long Beach.

You can homestead your house simply by buying a Declaration of Homestead form available at most stationery stores for about 25 cents. Fill out the form and send it with $3 for the first page and $1 for each additional page to the Los Angeles County Recorder, 227 N. Broadway, Los Angeles, Ca. 90012. You must actually be living in the house at the time you record the Declaration of Homestead, but once it is recorded the protection continues no matter where the owner resides and even if the property is rented. Only one property can be homesteaded at a time. Homesteading generally protects your residence from forced sale for the benefit of creditors. It gives no protection, however, against liens on the property before the homestead was recorded.

REACTION

ACTION LINE recently stated that a person could have his GI loan privileges reinstated if he obtained a release of liability on the old loan from the Veterans Administration. ACTION LINE was misinformed about this. The release of liability has nothing to do with reinstatement of loan privileges; it merely protects the original loan holder from being responsible for the loan if the new buyer defaults. Generally, a person can get a second GI loan if he sold his old home for "compelling reasons," such as a change of jobs, and if the old loan is paid off. Both conditions must be met. If a homeowner lets a new buyer assume his GI loan, he will not be able to get a second GI, even if he moved for compelling reasons, until the buyer pays off the old loan, either through refinancing or simply by making his payments for the duration of the loan. The release of liability does not mean the loan has been paid off. D.P., Long Beach.

Navy denies bias on carrier Midway

TOKYO (UPI) — The U.S. Navy said Saturday 55 sailors who refused to return to the aircraft carrier Midway when it left Japan last week because of alleged racial discrimination were misled and exploited by private organizations.

A Navy spokesman dismissed as "unsubstantiated" the complaint of racial discrimination made by the sailors who refused to rejoin the crew of the Midway when it left the Yokosuka naval base near Tokyo late last week with some 4,500 men.

Experts feel Nixon's defense evidence flimsy

By PHILIP SHACOFF
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The constitutional defense being erected by President Nixon against demands that he produce additional evidence for the Watergate and impeachment proceedings are viewed as a flimsy argument standing on shaky factual ground by a number of experts interviewed recently.

In a letter last week to the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., Nixon said he was basing his refusal to obey the committee's subpoenas for additional evidence on the constitutional doctrine of the separation of powers.

"I am determined," the President wrote, "to do nothing which, by the precedents it set, would render the executive branch henceforth and forevermore subservient to the legislative branch and would thereby destroy the constitutional balance."

The White House made a similar argument with regard to the power of the presidency in relation to the judiciary as part of a brief presented to the Supreme Court Friday.

But constitutional experts in the academic community and members of Congress concerned with constitutional matters, when asked for comment on the President's letter to the Judiciary Committee, flatly rejected Nixon's argument.

Of nine experts questioned, all indicated they believed the President's argument not only was inappropriate for an impeachment proceeding but, even more significant, that it misrepresented the facts of the existing relationship between the executive and legislative branches of Congress.

In various ways, the experts all expressed their belief that for Nixon to warn that the presidency was in danger of being destroyed by Congress was like the wolf warning that it was in danger of being wounded by the lambs.

In fact, they said, it is Congress that has been dominated by the executive branch as recent presidents—particularly Nixon—have enlarged their powers and prerogatives. If anything, they added, the current confrontation, may offer Congress a rare opportunity to redress what has been a widening imbalance in the constitutional system of checks and balances.

One constitutional expert, Professor Yale Kamisar of the University of Michigan School of Law, commented that "it is hard to take seriously" the President's argument that the presidency is threatened by the demands of the Judiciary Committee.

"If anything," he said, "the danger is the other way. If Congress had not acted in this situation, it would have been made completely subservient to the executive branch."

If Nixon were truly concerned with protecting the presidency against Congress rather than protecting himself, he would act differently, Kamisar asserted.

Nixon, he said, could follow a precedent set by Thomas Jefferson by affirming the principle of executive privilege and then waiving that privilege and giving Congress the evidence it sought.

The White House did not respond directly when asked for comment on the criticism of the President's constitutional argument. The question was referred to the President's lawyer, James D. St. Clair, who answered through a spokesman that "we'll stand on the letter."

St. Clair also declined to direct a questioner to a constitutional authority who would support the position outlined in the letter. "It would be inappropriate because the matter is before the courts," the spokesman said.

The President's chief constitutional lawyer, Charles Alan Wright, was out of the country and unavailable. No expert opinion supporting the President's constitutional argument could be found over the last week.

Hughes gift linked to hotel OK

The report deals in detail with the testimony of Robert Maheu, who was fired as head of Hughes' Nevada operation.

"Maheu says that Hughes ... instructed him to send Richard Danner, then manager of the Hughes-owned Frontier Hotel of Las Vegas, directly to John Mitchell to obtain Justice Department approval for the purchase," the report said.

Maheu told the committee that after being thwarted over the Stardust Hughes decided he would never again talk with secondary Justice Department officials, "but instead would deal only with the boss."

ACCORDING to Maheu, Hughes was aware of Danner's "very definite political advantages" as a friend of Nixon and Rebozo and approved his selection as political liaison with the government.

In early 1970, the report said, Danner set up a series of secret meetings in Washington attended only by himself and Mitchell.

There is no record of the meetings in the files of the antitrust division, the report said.

It noted also that Mitchell and Danner deny discussing political contributions and that Rebozo denies discussing the Dunes with either man.

"Nevertheless, the reports of the case provoke serious questions," the report said.

The favorable decision came on March 19, 1970, and the report quotes Danner's version of a meeting with Mitchell:

"I went to his office; I cannot recall whether there was anybody else present, whether he called anyone up to meet with me, but in a very perfunctory manner he said, 'From our review of these figures we see no problem. Why don't you go ahead with the negotiations?'"

Danner also testified Mitchell told him the proposed Dunes purchase met antitrust guidelines.

Danner told the committee he reported his success immediately to Maheu and Edward P. Morgan, a Hughes attorney in Washington.

"Maheu remembers Danner telling him the case was 'taken care of in Washington and there would be no interference beyond that,'" the report said.

It said that Maheu testified that after Danner returned from one of his meetings with Mitchell in Washington, Maheu "set in motion one of the two $50,000 contributions to Rebozo."

"I BELIEVE that I informed Mr. Bell (Tom Bell, then a Hughes lawyer in Las Vegas) in the presence of Mr. Danner upon the return of Mr. Danner from Washington, D.C., that certain political obligations had to be made as the result of the trip which Mr. Danner had made," Maheu testified.

"I believe I requested that Mr. Bell make these funds available to Mr. Danner," he continued.

"Maheu has raised the distinct possibility of a quid pro quo arrangement," the staff report said.

"The essential point is that Maheu remembered a clear connection between the Danner-Mitchell meetings and the contribution to Rebozo."

The report again quoted Maheu: "I remember telling Danner that we had authority from Hughes to make a commitment to help the administration in some of the congressional races they'd be interested in. But I don't know to this day if he took the matter up with Mitchell or someone else."

Maheu himself is prosecuting a libel suit against Hughes for a public statement that Maheu "stole me blind."

The report said Mitchell "says he remembers almost nothing about the Dunes."

MITCHELL remembers meeting only once with Danner, the report said, and claims that the antitrust division preferred someone like Hughes, with no ties to organized crime, to own Las Vegas hotels.

Congress aggravating inflation, Dunlop says month, will cease being director of the Cost of Living Council when it formally goes out of business on June 30. He plans to return to Harvard University, where he is a professor of economics, but he will serve as a part-time adviser to White House economic coordinator Kenneth Rush.

He said he would have remained in Washington had Congress approved his proposals for a federal inflation monitoring agency and a modest price control program, which he wanted to head.

Dunlop made clear he feels both Congress and the administration should do more to combat inflation, which has resulted in consumer price increases of 10.7 per cent in the past 12 months.

Use of fiscal and monetary policies alone by the administration will be inadequate because of political considerations, he said.

"I don't think they can do it now, or do it in the next 20 years," he said of these policies.

Congress, on the other hand, must settle on a economic policy and stick to it, Dunlop said. A year ago Congress was demanding a price freeze, he said, while now it opposes a much less restrictive price restraint program.

"That kind of volatility of decision making is a disaster, and our country cannot prosper under that," he said.

He emphasized that there are no easy answers to inflation and that it can be brought under control only over a long period of time.

Michele back at play in yard; ordeal just memory background, and that's what got us through this," said Booher, a five-year Navyman.

"I know there was more than luck involved in finding her. It's nothing short of fantastic, the way everything turned out," he said.

Booher, who said he wanted to make "a public thank you to everyone who helped in the search," added he "couldn't believe it" when police called to say Michele was safe and well.

He admitted hopes had dimmed after an intensve three-day search by more that 200 police, Navy and civilian volunteers—failed to turn up a clue to the girl's whereabouts.

"The first thing I did was call the police department back and make sure it wasn't a prank," he said. "Michele had kind of a blank look on her face when we first greeted her, but she's okay now," he added.

The father, an electronics technician, second class, theorized his daughter may have been susceptible to the kidnaping after she became lost in the sprawling housing project.

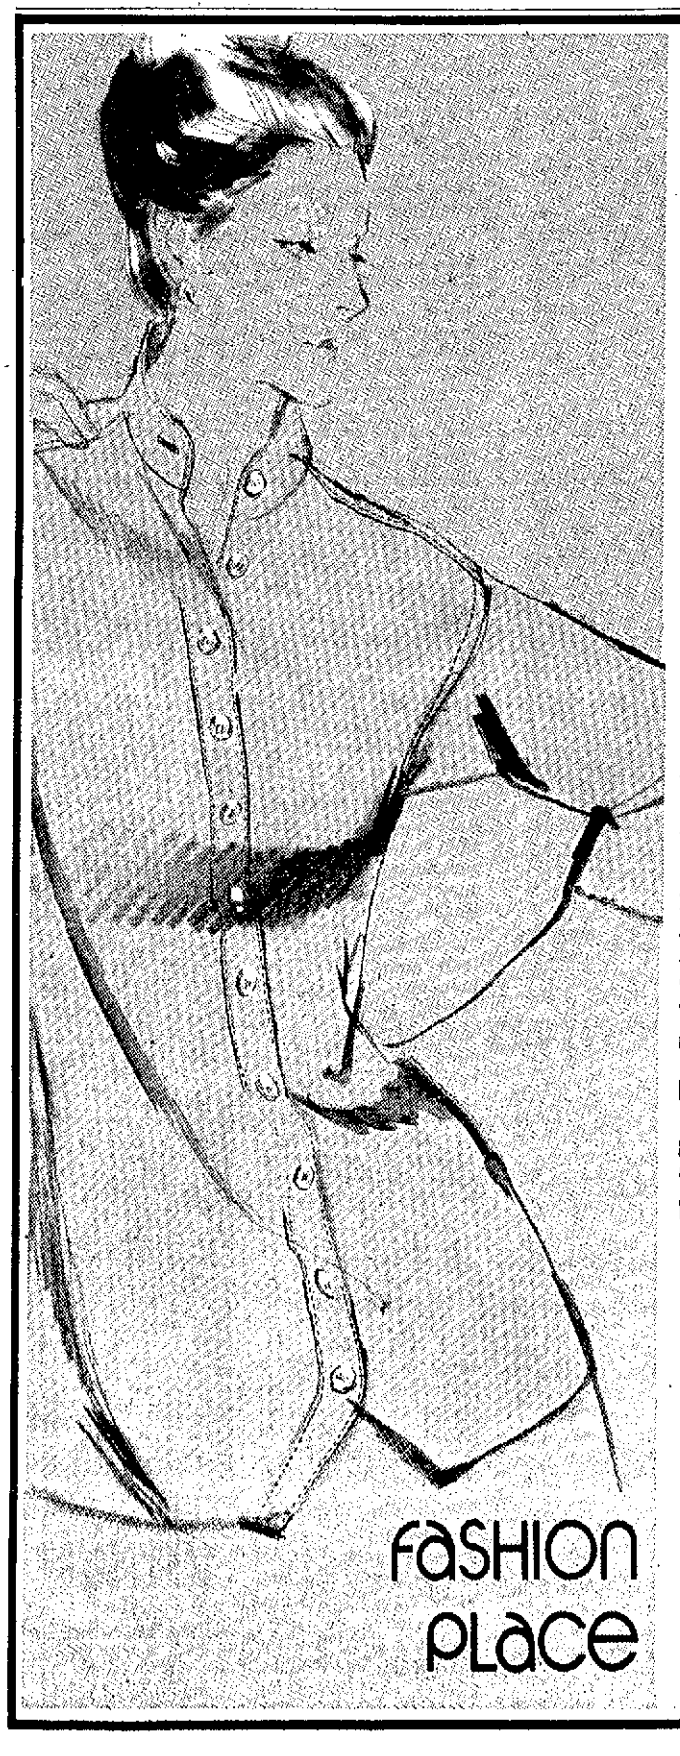

"I think she probably met a new friend—to her every kid is a friend," Booher said. "She knows her way around this complex real well, but if she crossed one of these streets with some new kids, she probably would have gotten lost trying to get home," he added.

Neighbors agreed with that theory. Said Laura Wankowski, who spent much of the week caring for the Booher's other daughter, 19-month-old Maryann:

"It's very easy to get turned around in this place, all the buildings look alike. It's probably especially easy for a child to get lost," she added, gesturing toward a maze of monolithic, sand-colored apartment structures, all surrounded by look-alike, green picket fences.

But for 4-year-old Michele Booher, the ordeal is over. She will have to testify at Knapp's preliminary hearing before her family vacations in Ohio, but that's not her primary concern, say her parents.

"She wants a Mattel 'Close and Play' record player," her parents said. "We just couldn't find one. So we bought her a different toy instead. We're just glad she's home."

One by one Watergate figures repent

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press

WASHINGTON—He is a man whose reputation for cut throat strategy was exceeded only by his lack of compassion for its victims, a fearless executor of power politics who reveled in success at "almost everything I've set out to do."

And Chuck Colson would willingly set out, said President Nixon, to do anything at all. H. R. Haldeman called him "an operator in expediency."

"A cobra," said Communications Director Herbert G. Klein.

"Chief ass-kicker around the White House," said Colson himself. But all that is changed.

And now, by his own account, the power that Charles Wendell Colson seeks is the power of prayer. He has abandoned his "damnable pride and ego." For, says Colson, "arrogance was the great sin . . . of a lot of us . . . We really are children of God."

There are skeptics and there are others who see the present attitude of Charles W. Colson as a lesson — a lesson of Watergate.

Not surprising, really.

One by one, proud and powerful men of Richard Nixon's White House humble themselves before Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski and the courts of Watergate. For some, it seems, the criminal act has brought the equal but opposite cleansing of the spirit.

It is a process as dramatic as the revelations of the scandal itself. Among those convicted, only the still-mute G. Gordon Liddy seems moved to be a tough guy to the end.

JOHN DEAN'S cover-up is now the confession complete; Dwight Chapin's dirty tricks now abject apolgies; Jeb Magruder's perjury now his proselytizing of principle; Egil Krogh's conspiracy to burgle now his concern for individual rights, and Richard G. Kleindienst's failure to testify fully now his greatest sorrow.

No one demonstrates the phenomenon more profoundly than the latest to offer his testimonial to the Lady of Justice. Charles W. Colson, 42, is the convert of converts.

For him, he says, the light of truth dawned not in fear of prison, nor even in the anguish of having his life disordered by protracted investigation. Rather than Jaworski, it was Jesus who swayed him to come clean and promise "to tell everything I know."

Not that everybody believes it. In Washington, particularly, most anything these days is viewed through cynical eyes. "Ever since Chuck Colson got religion," according to one crack heared on the cocktail circuit, "Dial-a-

Colson, others involved in Watergate repent—one by one

Prayer has been using an unlisted number." And the latest of the Watergate bumper stickers reads, "I'd Walk Over My Own Grandmother for Christ," a paraphrase of what Colson once said he would do to re-elect Nixon.

"I WAS pretty skeptical myself," says Sen. Harold Hughes, the deep-voiced Iowa Democrat who has become one of Colson's closest friends. Ironically, the liberal Hughes might have been trod upon himself by the former Nixon tactician if he hadn't withdrawn in the early stages of the 1972 Democratic campaign for the presidential nomination. But despite being poles apart politically, "I was completely convinced that Chuck had accepted Christ as his personal savior and we've been brothers in Christ ever since."

By Hughes recollection, Colson first approached him through a mutual friend, Douglas Coe, last October, asking for a face-to-face meeting to discuss a "conversion experience." The senator, who is retiring from Congress to devote himself fully to religious work, said, "I was reluctant to do that ... I sent word to him that I would see him, but I wanted to ask some tough questions." Colson went to Hughes' home, and after a two-hour session in which hands were held and eyes grew moist, said Hughes, "I believed him."

Within weeks, Colson was meeting regularly with Hughes and three others — Rep. Albert Quie, R-Minn., former Rep. Graham Purcell of Texas and Coe, a lay religious worker — for prayer and fellowship. They said they avoided the issue at first, but inevitably the discussion began to turn to Colson's culpability in the scandal.

Colson was charged in both the Watergate cover-up and the plumbers cases, but he maintained innocence in both. The special prosecutors, his friends say, began to dangle lesser charges — misdemeanors — as alternatives to be traded for his vast knowledge as a member of Nixon's inner circle.

"BUT he refused them," said Purcell, a former jurist as well as six-term congressman, "because he was not guilty of them."

Nonetheless, according to the prayer group members, Colson agonized over the dilemma, which kept him muzzled by the courts, pending his trials, as well as uncertain over his future.

On June 2, a Sunday, Hughes returned to his home at 9:15 p.m., after a trip to Iowa, to find his phone ringing. "Chuck asked me to come to his house as soon as I could," said Hughes. "He had arrived at a decision."

According to Hughes, Colson had worked it all out by himself. He had combed the statute books and settled upon a obscure law — a felony rather than a misdemeanor — prohibiting the defamation of a person under indictment. He then informed his attorney, former law partner David I. Shapiro, and the special prosecutors that he was prepared to confess to having defamed Daniel Ellsberg during the Pentagon Papers case.

Colson had affirmed his decision earlier on that rainy Sunday after he and his second wife, Patty — the first Mrs. Colson lives in Boston with their three daughters — got home from church. Although Colson remains a nominal Episcopalian, the couple goes to Roman Catholic Mass instead because Patty is Catholic.

THEN, with Patty's support, Colson gathered his friends at his comfortable McLean, Va., house, and, in a wood-paneled den lined with Nixon photos, he asked both their prayers and their help in drafting his statement to the court the following day. "It was an emotional session," said Hughes. "We held hands. There were tears shed.

"Here was a man who was willing to face a felony charge and take a step that would cost him his capacity to practice law. It was an example of complete and total commitment to Christ, to be a voice for truth at this time of political crisis."

Actually, whether Colson had a less severe alternative, as his associates believe he did, is a matter of dispute. Sources within the special prosecutor's office say Colson never had a firm offer of any deal short of pleading to a felony.

The next morning, as the fleshy-cheeked, bespectacled Colson stood somberly before Judge Gerhard Gesell and a startled courtroom crowd, Hughes and the others met to pray that his guilty plea to obstructing justice in the Ellsberg case would be accepted. It was. He was sentenced Friday to one to three years in prison.

That Colson had substantial knowledge of Watergate and related affairs is, by Nixon's own words, certain. The President, in an April 14, 1973, tape, tells John Dean that "Colson is closer to this crew of robbers than anybody else." The next day, Nixon characterized Colson as "up to his navel" in the affair.

SO, TOO, was Colson up to his navel in several other endeavors of questionable propriety. It was Colson who allegedly got Hunt to forge State Department cables designed to implicate the late John F. Kennedy in the assassination of President Diem of South Vietnam.

Watergate Committee testimony from Dean fingered Colson as behind an alleged plot to firebomb the Brookings Institution. Colson is believed to have engineered the parole of former Teamsters President James R. Hoffa in exchange for the union's political support.

That is but a sampling of the kind of activity by which he came to be known — and feared — as the White House hatchetman.

The Democrats loathed not only his zeal for playing rough, but for succeeding at it.

In 1970, Colson was the strategist behind the attack upon a group of senators whom Vice President Spiro T. Agnew later call the "radic-libs." Three of them, Democrats Albert Gore of Tennessee and Joseph Tydings of Maryland and Republican Charles Goodell of New York, were beaten. Two years later, Colson trespassed on traditionally Democratic grounds by urging Nixon's special appeals to the Teamsters, hard hats, Roman Catholics and Spanish-speaking Americans.

It was in that campaign that he wrote, in a White House memorandum, that "I would walk over my grandmother, if necessary" to ensure a Nixon victory.

THAT KIND of loyalty has been cited time and again as the underlying disease behind the convulsions of Watergate. And Colson was, in the words of his father, Wendell Colson, "viciously loyal."

But Colson himself, who still chain smokes and gobbles antacid tablets despite his new "peace and serenity," sees it as having been more than that. To find Christ, he told a prayer group in Michigan last month, he first had to abandon his "damnable pride and ego." Even after he left Nixon in March of 1973 to return to private practice, he said, "I had a terrible emptiness, a longing to find some other high mountain that I could scale."

And scaling mountains was Colson's penchant long before he met Richard Nixon.

Born Oct. 16, 1931, in Boston, Colson's formative years came at the heart of the depression. An only child, he watched his father work a regular job during the day and then spend hours at night studying for the law degree which earned Wendell Colson a job in the Boston office of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

That aspiring spirit obviously caught hold. At the Browne and Nichols School in Cambridge, Colson became a star debater and was so good academically that Harvard offered him a scholarship.

"THERE WAS this dean of admissions," Colson has recalled in an interview. "A very stuffy Bostonian. He said, 'You can't turn it down; no one has ever turned down a full scholarship at Harvard.' So I turned it down."

Colson knew, too, that his chances for being a big man on campus were better at Brown University, where he was active in debating, student government and the Marine officers program.

He loved the Marines. The effect of his mid-1950s service with the Corps — and its "Can Do" philosophy — is reflected by him to this day. The Marine Hymn, says Patty Colson, is still his favorite tune. At the White House, a Marine poster adorned his office wall.

Indeed, there was a military ring to many of his exploits. It was in Colson's office that the list of more than 200 White House "enemies" was drafted. A daily staff meeting in that office during the 1972 campaign was formally titled the "attack group."

After leaving the Marines, Colson served briefly with the Navy Department in Washington and then joined the staff of Sen. Leverett Saltonstall, R-Mass. By 1958, he was, at 27, the youngest administrative assistant in Congress. At the same time, following his father's example, he attended night courses at Georgetown Law School.

In 1960, Colson quit the senator's staff to start a law practice with Charles Morin, and their firm quickly prospered. Eight years later, Colson was picked as counsel to Richard Nixon's Key Issues Committee for the campaign that made Nixon president. The role didn't change much when he was named special counsel to the President after the inauguration.

AN EARLY sample of Colson's bare-knuckles tactics came in 1970 when he planted a story with a national magazine that Tydings, a liberal, had used his influence to land a $7-million State Department loan for a firm in which the senator had a financial interest. Tydings lost a close election, then was cleared of any wrongdoing a few days later in a government report.

Last year, Republican Sen. Lowell Weicker, an outspoken member of the Watergate Committee, complained that Colson was spreading rumors about him. Shortly thereafter, Colson showed up in Weicker's office one morning, apparently to assuage him. But the senator shouted, "You make me sick!" and ordered him out.

Colson, others repent

Many of the Colson episodes involved Hunt, a former CIA operative whom Colson met at a Brown alumni meeting. When the Pentagon Papers were leaked in 1971, Colson gave Hunt a call — with his tape recorder running:

Colson: Let me ask you this, Howard, this question. Do you think with the right resources employed that this thing could be turned into a major public case against Ellsberg and co-conspirators?

Hunt: Yes, I do . . . with the proper resources.

Colson: Well, I think the resources are there.

Thus began Colson's — and Hunt's — downfall. The "resources," it turned out, amounted to appointing Hunt a White House consultant, along with creation of the plumbers unit.

ALTHOUGH it is not known what connection, if any, Colson had with Hunt's part in the Watergate break-in, it is a matter of record that he employed the former spy for more than the Ellsberg operation and forging cables. Colson once authorized Hunt to investigate Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in the wake of the Chappaquiddick accident, an effort which reportedly turned up nothing. On another occasion, he sent Hunt to the Denver hospital bed of ITT lobbyist Dita D. Beard. After Hunt, wearing a red wig disguise, had talked with her, she disavowed a memorandum which tied the ITT antitrust settlement to a political contribution.

After the 1972 election, Colson focused his attack upon the Washington Post, which then was publishing disclosures that White House and campaign officials had been involved in the Watergate burglary.

In a speech to the Society of New England Editors, Colson said the Post accounts were "a fantasy, a work of fiction rivaling only 'Gone With the Wind' in circulation and 'Portnoy's Complaint' for indecency."

But the scandal nonetheless continued to spiral, and the name of Charles W. Colson, by then out of the White House and back at his law firm, began to crop up itself.

There seemed no hard evidence with which to tie him to a crime, but when the Watergate Committee sought to summon him in September 1973, he refused to testify on the ground he had been notified he was under investigation by a federal grand jury.

Thus began the slide leading to the Watergate and plumbers indictments, now dismissed, and ultimately his confession as a felon. But it was a period, too, that produced an affirmation of religious faith and, by all appearances, a new Chuck Colson.

There are many skeptics, to be sure, but Republican Sen. Mark Hatfield — who was once among them — believes the change holds a lesson for all the nation.

"Out of the lives of some of these men, out of a Colson," said Hatfield, "there might be more impact than a Pope Paul or a Billy Graham.

"Strange as that seems."

Rewards will remain in effect, however, for all cases previously published until such cases are closed or until notification is given in print that the reward has been withdrawn. These rewards will vary in amount, depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information directly through Secret Witness, either by calling the special Secret Witness number or by writing in care of the special Secret Witness post office box.

Crime family members killed

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two men believed to be connected with the Joseph Colombo crime family were gunned down gangland-style early Saturday on a Brooklyn street.

The victims, each killed by a shotgun blast in the chest, were identified as John Coiro, 35, and Thomas Babuska, 35.

How to become Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of other criminals. For this purpose, a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal, or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information resulting in arrests and convictions in cases not published by Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to Secret Witness at the following address: Secret Witness, P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

Japan to protest proposed ban on whaling

By MASASHI KURAMITSU

TOKYO (UPI) —Japan's whaling industry, the world's largest, is waging a desperate fight against mounting pressure that threatens its existence.

The United States and other nonwhaling countries are demanding that Japan and the Soviet Union stop commercial whaling for the next 10 years to preserve whale stocks.

Japan and the Soviet Union are the only signatories to the International Whaling Commission (IWC), which allocates quotas for whale catches, who still engage in commercial whaling.

The IWC set an overall 1973-74 catch quota of 1,450 fin whales and 4,500 Sei whales, of which Japan has been allocated 867 fin whales and 2,632 Sei whales.

Advocates of the 10-year ban claim that whales have now been threatened with extinction and argue that Japanese whaling is a brutal slaughter based on short-sighted policy.

Two whale conservationists who visited Japan recently warned the country might risk a boycott of its products abroad unless it halts commercial whaling.

Press reports here say a "Save Whales, Boycott Japanese Goods" campaign is spreading in the United States.

The Japan Whaling Association disputes the conservationists' arguements, which it claims are "not based on realities."

The association says, "Japan's whaling operations have been carried out wih full knowledge that whales are the common property of all mankind. For us, more than for any other people, it is unthinkable that whales should disappear completely from the earth, for Japan would be the heaviest loser."

It adds, "The time will never come when whales will no longer be needed by the Japanese people. It is for this reason that we are seeking ways to enable man and whales to live in ecological balance."

The association says whale meat, which is eaten only in Japan, is needed here as a source of animal protein.

Whale meat consumption in 1971 total 132,000 tons, or an equivalent of 300,000 tons of unboned beef and pork in terms of protein value, it said.

According to association officals, the decrease in whale population is due largely to "over-exploitation" by the U.S., Britain and other former whaling countries in the past.

The United Nations conference on the human environment held in Stockholm in 1972 adopted a resolution recommending a 10-year ban on commercial whaing, but the IWC rejected the resolution.

The IWC is to meet in London this week to discuss next season's catch quota.

Japan's fishery agency officals say the U.S. has told Japan it plans to submit a resolution calling for a 10-year ban on whaling.

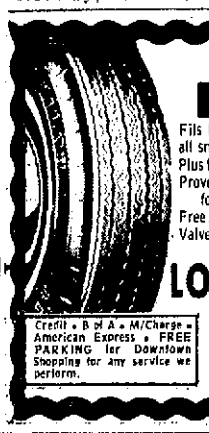

They said Japan will make a strong effort to prevent the U.S. resolution from being adopted.

Fourteen nations, including the U.S.,Britain, Norway, Canada, Denmark and the Soviet Union, are signatories to the IWC.

Shippers angered

U.S. policy in Great Lakes hit

By AL EISELE
Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Spokesmen for the Great Lakes shipping interests told a congressional hearing that discriminatory transportation policies by the federal government are making meaningless the Great Lakes' designation as the nation's "fourth seacoast."

In an hour-long session marked by strong language and even a call for a congressional investigation of the U.S. Maritime Commission, 45 representatives of Great Lakes ports, shippers and maritime unions vented their anger at what they called unfair treatment by federal bureaucrats.

ONE of the group's principal spokesmen, Thomas Burke, executive director of the Duluth Port Authority and president of the International Association of Great Lakes Ports, told the hearing there are two main problems facing the Great Lakes shipping industry.

The first results from a 1972 international agreement that prohibits foreign ships from carrying general cargo on the Great Lakes until there is a parity of tonnage between foreign and American vessels.

Since there is currently a large deficiency in U.S. tonnage, only U.S. flag vessels can carry general cargo (wheat is not classified as general cargo) until that deficiency is made up.

The second problem, Burke explained, stems from the decision of the U.S. Department of Agriculture to award contracts for shipment of surplus agricultural commodities to Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports.

Both problems have caused drastic reductions in cargo tonnage and jobs in the Great Lakes ports, according to Burke, who organized the meeting.

Have hopes of '72 been realized?

U.S.-Soviet trade in spotlight

By THEODORE SHABAD
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — As President Nixon heads for Moscow next week, some economic questions arise from his visit there two years ago.

In May 1972 he and the Kremlin leaders achieved a turning point in international trade. They agreed that economic ties were essential in improving relations between the United States and the Soviet Union. Since then several deals designed to bridge the gulf that separated the two nations commercially have been signed.

Have the high hopes of 1972 for a new era of trade relations been realized?

WHERE DO Americans stand now in doing business with the Soviets?

What are the commercial prospects for the future?

Not all the expectations have been fulfilled. Major projects for developing Siberian resources such as natural gas (considered a key element in the new commercial relationship) are yet to be implemented. And there is strong sentiment in Congress against reducing tariffs on imports from the Soviet Union and against granting large low-interest government credits on exports to the Soviet Union.

However, since the Nixon administration flashed the green light, this country's total trade with the Soviet Union has surged. Much of the gain has been in response to the Soviets' need for industrial machinery to help build up their huge economy, which has lagged technologically behind that of the United States.

FACILITIES to promote Soviet-American trade, which has become respectable in the U.S. business community, are flourishing. A joint trade council has been established, half a dozen newsletters have sprung up, trade missions and seminars are glowingly promoted and the Soviet government has allowed a dozen American companies to open offices in Moscow.

So the outlook is for continuing heavy trade as the Soviet Union seeks to infuse modern technology into its economy and American businessmen seek opportunities in a market that was virtually closed to the United States for a quarter of a century.

AN intergovernmental agreement reached in Washington in October 1972 provided for tripling Soviet-American trade in the 1972-74 period to at least $1.5 billion from the $500 million of the 1969-71 period.

This goal has turned out to be grossly understated. In 1973 alone, Soviet-American trade totaled $1.4 billion, more than double the 1972 level of $640 million.

The trade forecast for all 1974 is below last year's level because a record Soviet harvest in 1973 eliminated the need for grain imports this year. But the outlook still is for at least $1 billion, keeping the United States among the Soviet Union's leading western trade partners, together with West Germany and Japan.

The large trade volume is generated mainly by American sales of manufactured goods, including high-technology equipment and "turnkey" projects (entire manufacturing plants). Soviet hunger for advanced industrial techniques seems insatiable as the Kremlin makes up for years of neglect in research and development.

TWO VAST Soviet projects stand out, although many smaller deals also contribute to the trade pattern.

One project is the Kama truck-manufacturing plant. American companies have obtained about $400 million worth of equipment contracts.

The other is an ammonia and urea fertilizer complex in the Kuibyshev area on the Volga River. Orders of more than $300 million are expected to be placed in the United States.

U.S. exports greatly exceed imports from the Soviet Union. Advocates of more trade between the two countries cite this imbalance as a bonus for the United States. To narrow the trade gap, the Soviets are trying to build sales in the United States in the face of discriminatory tariffs dating from the cold war.

TRADITIONALLY, U.S. imports from the Soviet Union have been mostly raw and semiprocessed items such as platinum-group metals, chrome ore and diamonds. United States tariffs on raw materials tend to be low or nonexistent. (Some manufactured goods, such as tractors, also carry no duty.)

The Soviets hope to expand their exports of manufactured products they feel have something to offer the American market. Among these are passenger aircraft and helicopters, hydrofoil boats, machine tools, power station turbines and generators, chemicals and wood products.

ON MANY of these Soviet goods, however, American tariffs are considerably higher than on similar imports from countries of most-favored-nation status. (A most-favored-nation agreement binds two countries to give each other all the most favorable trade concessions that either may grant any other country."

A majority in both houses of Congress opposes trade credits and low tariffs unless the Soviet government opens its borders to unrestricted emigration.

The fate of these issues in Congress is still in doubt as President Nixon sets for Moscow. But the experience of the past two years suggests that Soviet-American economic relations have been revitalized. They seem unlikely to return to the nadir of the cold war.

THE OIL DIVIDER

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—If oil were worthless, few people would care where Louisiana ends and Texas begins.

But that isn't the case. Oil is an increasingly precious commodity, so valuable the governments of Texas and Louisiana have hired a small army of attorneys to determine the precise boundary.

The boundary, a matter of dispute for years, is critical since it runs through the oil-rich waterbottoms of the Sabine River, the historical dividing line between the two states.

Texas says the boundary should be drawn down the middle of the river. Louisiana says it owns it all.

Some have estimated at least $1 billion is at stake.

LAST MONTH, attorneys for both sides met in a map-cluttered federal courtroom at New Orleans for four days of hearings before U.S. District Court Judge Robert Van Pelt of Nebraska.

Van Pelt was appointed a special "master" by the U.S. Supreme Court to study the evidence and present his recommendations for a decision later this year.

He said he would give both states until the first week of September to file briefs on evidence presented in last month's hearings, and he then may schedule still another hearing before finally making his suggestions to the high court.

Delegates founder at sea parley

By WILLIAM F. NICHOLSON

'I think my bathtub is made of cardboard'

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Some of the diplomats attending the United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea really are at sea, in the huge complex of gleaming white skyscrapers housing the largest international conference ever held.

"Could someone please tell me where I am?" asked one confused participant among the 5,000 delegates and official observers who on Thursday began nearly three months of work in the maze of conference halls and committee rooms.

"Amazing ... amazing ... amazing," said an African delegate as he strolled aimlessly up and down, gazing at the outdoor fountains, modern sculpture and bustling humanity in what will be turned into an apartment development after the conference.

PLATOONS of pretty Venezuelan girls, each speaking several languages, are on hand to guide the diplomats to and from meetings so they don't get lost. And every participant gets a floor plan of the complex.

Venezuela had only four months to prepare for the conference when Caracas was accepted as the substitute for Santiago, the Chilean capital. After the bloody coup last fall in Chile, the new military junta there hinted the conference would not be welcome.

Work on the housing project already was well advanced when the Venezuelan government took it over. The government spent an estimated $16 million for conference services and round the clock shifts of workmen to complete the buildings.

Thirteen hotels were reserved for conference delegates. When they were filled, the military converted several buildings into temporary hotels for the overflow.

There have been some complaints about the makeshift housing.

One U.N. press officer unlocked the door to his room and found it opened into a blank wall.

"I HAVE no light bulbs," a delegate from the United States complained.

"You think that's bad — I think my bathtub is made of a cardboard, said a colleague.

But rooms have been found for all, and some hotels even have space available for tourists and visiting businessmen.

Restaurants and bars have been installed at the conference site, but slow service by inexperienced help and the large crowds forces the overflow into neighborhood snack shops.

"There is a waiter in the restaurant downstairs who is demented," one diplomat announced to a group of newsmen. "He takes our orders and then disappears, never to return. And I remain hungry."

PRICES in the conference restaurants are stiff, too. A cup of coffee costs almost 25 cents; it's about 7 cents elsewhere in the city.

Space for the conference meetings is no problem. Except for sporadic general sessions to discuss completed treaty resolutions, most of the conference will consist of committee meetings.

Many delegations will be working in shifts, shuttling members home and back so everybody doesn't have to spend the whole summer in the tropical heat.

U.N. officials say a total of 148 nations are represented at the conference, 13 more than the membership of the United Nations. Only two governments are absent — the Nationalist Chinese regime on Taiwan, which wasn't invited because of Communist China, and North Vietnam, which wouldn't come because the Viet Cong wasn't invited.

Observers believe the largest such international meeting held before this one was the 1971 U.N. Conference on Trade and Development in Santiago, Chile. It had about 2,000 delegates and they met for six weeks.

Waldheim predicts second conference on sea laws

Combined News Services

KURT WALDHEIM
"Second Phase planned"

CARACAS, Venezuela — U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim predicted Saturday that yet another conference will be necessary to finally draft a constitution governing usage of the world's seas.

He said he was confident the procedural problems under discussion since the third U.N. Conference on the Law of the Sea opened Thursday "will be resolved."

But he said that the 5,000 delegates and official observers here may not be able to draft a global treaty for use of the seas before the conference ends in late August.

A tentative "second phase," as Waldheim called it, has been scheduled for next year, probably in Vienna.

Waldheim spoke at a brief news conference before flying home to New York.

The delegates at this largest international meeting are discussing procedural business and what kind of voting rules to use before tackling the 100-item agenda that deals with all aspects of the sea, from pollution to territorial limits.

Efforts were being made Saturday to break a deadlock over voting procedures holding up the international conference.

The United States, Soviet Union and others favor consensus votes in approving new laws. In cases where consensus is not possible, they would like to see measures adopted by more than a simple majority.

The United States wants approval through two-thirds vote of the nations paticipating in the conference, while the Soviet Union is pressing for approval by a 90 per cent vote.

Most other nations want to use the U.N. General Assembly method, where approval by two-thirds of the delegates actually present and voting is necessary for passage of major measures.

Unless agreement is achieved by Thursday, the U.N. method will be used at the 10-week conference.

Substance seen in Nixon journey

By KIM WILLENSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — While President Nixon pronounced his Middle East peace mission a success, the Arabs and Israelis hardly waited for the contrails of Air Force One to disappear from the desert skies before they resumed fighting, both physically and verbally.

This contrast between the official American view of the trip and the reality of continuing hatred and warfare could lend weight to those who accused Nixon of playing impeachment politics with U.S. foreign policy.

It may be, in the end, that Nixon's journey will be seen as nothing more than an attempt to paper over the cracks. But for all the image-making involved in his Middle East reception, there does seem to be some substance to what he did.

The President, smiling and ebullient after what he regarded as a diplomatic triumph, said he had seen "a profound and ... lasting change" in the Middle East, a "hope for peace" and Arab friendship for America.

Even as he spoke, Israeli warplanes were streaking into Lebanon to retaliate for a guerrilla strike on a border kibbutz and, since then, the Israelis have struck twice again.

The war of words has accompanied the war of bombs. Israel now says she will lodge a complaint with the U.N. Security Council against continuing Palestinian operations in Lebanon, while Egypt and Syria both say they "cannot sit idly by" while their Arab brethren are being killed.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy says he believes Nixon gave Israeli Premier Yitzhak Rabin the green light for more raids by agreeing to denounce terrorism in a joint communique the two men signed last Monday.

And even Nixon's newfound friend, President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt, is reportedly busy firing off messages promising renewed support for the Arab cause.

None of this means, however, that Nixon failed during his "journey for peace," at least within the framework of the limited objectives he set for himself.

Nixon himself said time and again that he had no instant solutions to Middle East problems, that he went to listen more than to talk and to re-establish U.S. friendship with the Arab world so Washington could play a mediating role if both sides wished it.

Only in the final two days of his journey — once in Amman and again in the Azores before he flew home — did he pronounce himself genuinely optimistic that his efforts had moved the area closer to real peace. He told Jordan's King Hussein that this was "a confidence based on what I think are some new developments."

Neither Nixon nor any other U.S. official has yet spelled out just what those "new developments" might be, and they may turn out to be no more substantial than a footprint in the desert.

But Hussein, who laid out the substantive problems remaining in the Middle East as forcefully as any of the five leaders Nixon visited, also cast a broad hint of the outlines of a possible peace settlement during a speech of his own.

He told Nixon there can be no peace unless Israel gives up the lands it acquired in the 1967 Six-Day War, unless it recognizes the rights of the Palestinians to have a nation of their own and unless it returns the walled city of Jerusalem to Arab control.

But Hussein also said that "once the occupied territory has been evacuated by the Israelis only Palestinians can decide what its future is to be."

"They can choose continued union with Jordan, a new form of federation or the creation of a separate state," he said. "The choice is theirs and theirs alone, and, whatever their choice, it will enjoy our full acceptance and support."

In saying that, Hussein directly endorsed the idea that the conflict can be brought to an end by giving the Palestinians a homeland of their own in the Jordan valley.

Such an endorsement could ultimately cost Hussein the Israeli-occupied half of his kingdom, but it also opens, for the first time, the way to a realistic settlement of the three gut issues in the Middle East.

The occupied territories could be returned to Arab control, they could become the homeland the Palestinians have sought to regain for a quarter century and they could provide for a corridor of Arab territory to the gates of the Holy City, giving Moslems a passage under their own control to the third most sacred shrine of Islam, the Dome of the Rock.

There is no certainty yet that this will come to pass. Indeed, the Israelis still insist that any Palestinian state would have to be on the other side of Jordan, away from a border with Israel, and the Palestinians maintain they want major financial compensation for the properties they lost when they fled Israel in 1948.

There is no doubt, either, that there is going to be more fighting and morre dying in the Middle East.

But at least the two sides are talking. And if Nixon can get them to do more talking and less fighting, his trip could turn out to have had great value.

Israel returning captured land

By United Press International

Israeli troops took a Sabbath rest Saturday before turning over to U.N. forces the remaining chunk of a 325-square-mile sector captured from Syria in the October war.

Israeli military sources said the return of territory seized in 1973 would be completed Sunday, while land captured by Israel in the 1967 war, including the city of Quneitra and summit positions atop Mount Hermon, would be given up Monday.

Israeli and Syrian forces must be in their new cease-fire line positions by Wednesday under the accord engineered by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

RESPONDING to Israeli air attacks against guerrillas in Lebanese, Lebanese Foreign Minister Fuad Naffa, meanwhile, called upon a meeting of 37 Moslem nations in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, to force Israel to respect all U.N. resolutions.

"There are many ways to force Israel to do this, but the most appropriate would be for the U.N. to impose economic sanctions against Israel," he said in his opening address to the fifth Islamic Conference of Foreign Ministers.

"The Middle East question, in our opinion, is far from being solved, despite the disengagement agreement between Israel and Egypt and Syria."

Lebanese President Suleiman Franjieh received a note from Egyptian President Anwar Sadat declaring, according to Lebanese government sources, "unlimited backing for Lebanon against the Israeli aggressions."

SADAT SENT a letter to President Nixon Friday protesting the air raids.

Also in Beirut, Lebanese Premier Takieddin Solh discussed the attacks with the Soviet and British ambassadors.

In other developments:

— Zuheir Mohsen, leader of the Syrian-backed Al Saiqa guerrilla group, called on the Arab states to again cut off oil shipments to the United States, which he called "the No. 1 enemy of the Arab people."

— Hani al Hassan, a member of the executive committee of the Al Fatah guerrilla organization, predicted, "The coming three months will be months of violence" in the Middle East.

Pope sees hope for Mideast peace

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI Saturday welcomed a "new light of hope for peace in the Middle East" following President Nixon's visit and urged every effort to solve the problem of the Palestinian people.

The Pope spoke of the Middle East in what he called a "critical examination of the general situation both inside and outside the Church" on the occasion of his saint's day and the 11th anniversary of his election to the papacy.

He also called for aid to drought-stricken sub-Saharan African countries and justice for the people of Portugese Africa and pointed to "the continuing tragedy and outbreaks of violence in Northern Ireland."

Speaking of Nixon's goodwill mission to Israel and four Arab nations, the Pope said:

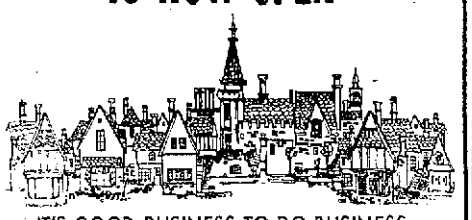

"Thus we do not wish to pass over in silence the new light of hope for peace in the Middle East which has been kindled by the intense activity and the converging joint efforts of men in the high posts of responsibility—a peace so yearned for and so difficult."

The Pope urged "all the responsible parties not to omit any effort of good will and political wisdom in the search for a just and becoming means of unraveling the problem, so difficult and so sad, concerning the destiny of the Palestinian peoples."

He reiterated the position of the Roman Catholic Church that Christians, Moslems and Jews must all have free access to the shrines of Jerusalem.

Jai alai big hit as new Las Vegas attraction

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

LAS VEGAS—As rich in entertainment as Kuwait is in oil, Las Vegas offers a new attraction—jai alai (pronounced hi li).

The speed and excitement makes it one of the world's fastest games. The addition of pari-mutuel wagering magnifies interest in the sport.

Housed in Las Vegas' MGM Grand Hotel Fronton, the sport is played nightly Tuesday through Sunday starting at 7:30.

Fans throughout the world are addicted to the sharp crack of the ball (pelota), its richocheting action off walls 55 feet high and 55 feet wide, including the foul areas,at speeds up to 130 mph.

A clear-vision screen protects the fans on the fourth side of the court.

The MGM Grand's Fronton seats 2,200 and the nightly 12-game program is averaging 2,000 patrons. Miami, with eight frontons, is the only other city in the country to offer jai alai.

What makes jai alai so fascinating?

For one thing, it's a sport that can be enjoyed without betting. But for that extra thrill, watch the game with a wager down. Then each spectacular snap and crackle of the ball takes on special meaning.

Wagering is the same as in horse racing with one added attraction:

While horse races are over in a few brief minutes, each jai alai game lasts up to a quarter hour, giving spectators chance after chance to applaud their two-man team or individual players.

A variety of betting is offered on every game. There is win, place and show wagering. Fans also have a chance for quinella wagering (a combination bet in which you pick two teams, or players, to finish first and second in either order).

There's also exacta wagering which is similar to the quinella in that you pick two teams to finish first and second, but they must finish in the exact order that you select them.

Jai alai is played either as doubles or singles. Doubles matches feature eight two-man teams; singles, seven single players.

Jai alai dates back to before the 15th century, when it originated in the Baspue provinces of Spain. The words jai alai mean "merry festival," and it was on festival days that jai alai was played.

Though a player needs strength and stamina, good footwork, balance and agility are just as important. It's not always the hardest thrower who wins, for playera learn special shots that require precise placement of the ball. These shots give the smallest player an even chance against the larger or stronger men.

The 37 players housed at the MGM Grand come from frontons in Spain, Mexico, Florida, the Philippines and Indonesia.

The players feel a sense of pride and responsibility to their sport. They feel that anything that hurts jai alai hurts them, and for that reason the players have formed a worldwide organization to insure the integrity of their sport.

Monte Pio is the association of professional jai alai players, and its main office in the Americas is in Mexico City. Monte Pio has the power to banish players from the game, for life, for infractions of the rules which might bring jai alai into disrepute.

SUCH banishment extends to the point where a guilty player cannot even attend jai alai games as a spectator anywhere in the world, and he cannot hold a job in any way connected with the game or any fronton the world over. Drastic? Yes, but effective. Jai alai is the only pro sport in the world which has never been involved in a scandal of any kind.

'Aggie'—'more like corn than porn'

By VINCENT CANBY
New York Times Service

NEW YORK—The sharp, cheerlessly reassuring smell of disinfectant seeped through the balcony of the World the other afternoon. A half-dozen men, smokers all, sat there singly, trying to ignore the smell, as depressing to the erotic instinct as a stop watch.

I was anxious to see "Memories within Miss Aggie," a movie that one critic has described as being "rich with intimations of 'psycho,' and 'images' and Faulkner," and whose director, Gerard Damiano, a former hairdresser and X-ray technician, has been called the Ingmar Bergman of porn.

That last must have been a typo. Corn is more like it.

On the screen a small, intensely yellow-haired young woman and a youngman of no evident passions frolic through the snow in a wildly unconvincing mime of rural innocence. The couple giggle, roll about in the drifts and toss snowballs at each other. Finally the young man and the young woman fall into each other's arms, exhausted.

Then they go to an empty house where they take off their clothes and, in the words of still another critic, perform sex "with feeling."

As a matter of fact, feeling is one of the things that is conspicuously absent in the porn parts of "Memories within Miss Aggie."

The actors work earnestly enough, but they don't seem to be interested. Even Harry Reems, the supporting star of Damiano's "Deep Throat" and "The Devil in Miss Jones," seems to be tiring. This may be why he doubled as production manager on this new film and is listed as Herb Streicher in the credits, which may or may not be his real name.

"Memories," in one of its earlier weeks at the World Theater, was reported by Variety to be the second highest grossing picture in New York, topped only by "Mame" at Radio City Music Hall. This is depressing news for anyone seriously interested in the fate of movies, or even seriously interested in the liberation of pornography.

"MEMORIES within Miss Aggie" is an overcooked, guilt-stuffed cabbage of a movie, which, like "The Devil in Miss Jones," pretends to seriousness through its synthetically solemn framing device.

Miss Aggie (Deborah Ashira), a tall gaunt woman, wanders around her farm house in what I take to be upstate New York. The snowy landscape outside is photographed adequately by Harry Flecks, and I suspect it's the existence of the snow, rather than the cameraman's Sven Nykvist-like talent, that makes people compare Damiano to Bergman.

Aggie, who has lived alone too long, as she tells us several more times than is necessary, has troubled memories of having done something "bad" when she was younger. When she thinks about it hard enough we, the audience, are treated to her fantasies, three in all, each with a different New York porn queen masquerading as Aggie's vision of herself.

In the first one, in which the very worldly, very yellow-haired Aggie is supposedly deflowered, Aggie is played by Kim Pope. In the second fantasy, Aggie is played by an actress who looks so butch that only wideangle close-ups can testify to the fact that she's not really Holly Woodlawn. In the third fantasy, and the only one that has a suspicion of humor or erotic style, Aggie (Darby Lloyd Rains) sees herself in an old-fashioned, turn-of-the-century bordello.

When Aggie has gotten through her three fantasies, Damiano lets us in on a secret—that none of these things really happened, and that Miss Aggie, as crazy as a bedbug, put a carving knife through the skull of the man whose body she still keeps by the kitchen stove.

DAMIANO, I'm afraid, is no Hitchcock, no Planski, no Faulkner. But he doesn't hesitate to lift the castoffs, the remnants, of other people's ideas.

It is significant that the only scene in the film that has any impact is the murder scene, not because it's well done but because the violence seems cruel.

'DEEP THROAT' A 'STEAL' AT CHICAGO THEATER

CHICAGO (UPI) — Two men with bogus police badges, apparently thinking the film was either too dirty or not dirty enough, burst into the projection room of a West Side theater Friday night and stole a copy of "Deep Throat."

Projectionist Leo Posner, 63, said the well-dressed, middle-aged pair flashed the badges, handcuffed him to a railing, covered his mouth and eyes with adhesive tape and ripped the film from the projector.

The single-minded thieves didn't bother with $285 in Posner's pockets or his wallet, which was lying in full view on a desk, he said.

"Either they were highly moral fellows who thought the picture was too dirty or they thought it wasn't dirty enough," Posner said. "We've had a lot of complaints that the movie isn't dirty enough."

The stolen 16 mm film was a heavily edited version of "Deep Throat," the original of which has been banned in the Chicago area since last spring on grounds it is pornographic.

Elizabeth Ashley 'liberated'

NEW YORK — Liberated lady Elizabeth Ashley has been in jail a few times,. doesn't know how many times she's been married, (promises she'll never marry again, finds smoking marijuana "a nice way to relax," and never liked being called "Mrs." because it was debilitating and "made me feel I was some dude's chattel like a cow or a horse."

"I'm in my early 30s, right?" she says. "I was out there by myself in the female experience a long time and it was lonely. You're always grateful when others come in and you're not so freaky."

Seriously back in acting after a six-year layoff to be George Peppard's housewife, she's perfectly cast, she feels, as an adventuress, a gypsy, in an American International film "Golden Needles," playing a con woman.

"I'VE BEEN married a whole lot of times," she said in her suite at the Drake, with her feet up on a coffee table, rubbing one against the other. "How many times? I don't know. I just got married a lot. They all run together at some point. I'm not going to march down any more aisles.

"Marriage hasn't anything to do with mating. There's not a lot of people I want to have sex with but the ones I want to have it with I want to have it a lot."

Her hair fell to her shoulders and she talked swiftly and well, her thoughts on being a liberalized lady pouring out unceasingly. "I've been in jail a bunch of times. In Chicago in '68 carrying a sign supporting Eugene McCarthy. I fell down and the police kicked me in the ribs. They took us to jail and kept us in 14 hours.

"And, when I was very young, in Mississippi, when they had literacy tests for Negroes, they said, 'You commy pinko faggots' and kept us in jail overnight, and overnight in Mississippi can be a lifetime.

"Also," and she was still rubbing one stockinged foot against the other, "I was in the Tombs a couple of hours, when I was 19. Innocent babes that we were, we were demonstrating against the coffee houses having to kick back to the cops.

"That's about it as far as me being a criminal."

SHE'S CRAZY about the shady lady she portrays in the film. "She's conning this dude into helping her pull off this caper and he says it's dangerous. She says, 'Don't you know anything any good is dangerous?'

"I'm an adventuress, too, but a poor one — I pay my own way."

A neat and orderly life simply doesn't appeal to this former model, cover girl, ballet dancer, Tony Award winner and TV performer. "I took my best shot at leading a conformist life but it's alien to my nature. To be dependent on anybody has been painful for me." As for continuing to be single, she said, "The day of the Scarlet Letter is far past."

"RICHARD NIXON," she commented, "is a man who led a very neat, orderly, easy life." She sat up in anger. "What really — me off was when they tried to steal my country, like a bunch of cur dogs snarling and salivating over a bone. For that I will have rage till the day I die."

Her son, Christian Peppard, 6, will make his own choices about many things.

"I hear these parents, after about 17 martinis, saying their children don't love them. They say, 'All right, after all I've done for you, what are you going to do for me?' I think it's arrogant."

A FRIEND of Sly of the Family Stone who had a televised wedding, Miss Ashley approved enthusiastically and and also applauded Elliot Gould and Jennifer O'Neill annoucing they'd shucked off other partners to have their own new wedding.

"Most people think they're crazy," I mentioned.

"'Most people'! Oh, 'most people' give me a pain. I think they're brave and it's marvelous for them to keep trying.

"But as for me," she laughed, "no more. It's going to be like with United Fund. I'm going to tell them, 'I already gave at the office.'"

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Taffy Tuttle suspects her butcher is using phony scales: "The other day I didn't buy anything — and it weighted three pounds."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: It's when a woman hasn't been to the hairdresser for a few weeks that she shows her true colors.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Minds are like parachutes. They function only when open."

EARL'S PEARLS: People who've stayed at one of the expensive new resort spots say it's really a family hotel: "You have to bring along a very wealthy relative."

Gene Barry arrived

ELIZABETH ASHLEY
Doesn't like "Mrs."

minus luggage to play a cafe date at a N.Y. mountain resort, and explained it was the airline's fault: "I'm playing the Catskills — I think my suitcases are playing the Rockies." That's earl, brother.

L.B., Downey men nabbed in gambling raid

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A Long Beach and a Downey resident were among three California men and a Nevada woman arrested by FBI agents in Gallup on charges involving gambling. The suspects were brought to Albuquerque Saturday for arraignment.

FBI special agent in charge William Meincke of Albuquerque identified those arrested, at 2 a.m. in a private Gallup residence, as Geraldine Marie Parades, 35, Las Vegas, Nev.; Jerry Morris, 28, Long Beach; Frank Sessions, 49, Bakersfield; and Mark Reed, 31, Downey, who FBI said is billed in show business as the "fastest gun in the West."

Meincke said agents and Gallup police led by Chief Robert Leyba seized $15,000, "allegedly the proceeds from a large gambling operation.

Fishing gear theft

Fishing gear valued at $195 was stolen from a garage basement at the home of Edward A. Edling, 21 62nd Place, by burglars who forced a lock to gain entry, Long Beach police said Saturday.

STARLIGHT SERENADE

Keyed to entertainment

HENRY BRANDON coaxes, cajoles, wheedles and beguiles his musicians into playing with more verve and finesse than they knew they possessed. Tuesday in Recreation Park he will conduct Long Beach Symphony Orchestra in the first Starlight Serenade of the summer. The free program will begin at 8 p.m.

When Henry Brandon steps on stage Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Recreation Park to direct Long Beach Symphony Orchestra, he will have a single purpose:

To entertain all the people who come to the free, opening concert of the 1974 Starlight Serenades.

"Music is to be enjoyed," he beamed, looking at the hundreds of professional musicians who had just heard him conduct his 35-piece brass band Monday in the Grand Ballroom of Disneyland Hotel. This was the first program of the 77th annual national convention of the American Federation of Musicians.

A performer and promoter — of music — Brandon has a formula. "Program, presentation and personality! That's the way to plan a concert," he said.

He should know. His programs draw up to 14,000 people and each week during July and August he shuttles between Southern California and Chicago to direct his "concerts for people."

"Business is great but it's killing me," he said, grinning.

"Now take programs. A program should be like a meal — balanced. You have to play on the senses. Something exciting, then something serene, fast then slow. Use contrast.

"THE KIND of concerts I conduct combine education and entertainment. They're a bridge between the unlearned listener and the symphony.

"And the presentation has to be right so the listener enjoys the music and has a good time. You have to titillate the ear. You can't fault us on technique, we're musically correct. But I've never believed music has to be dull. Even if its a straight classical program, you still can use showmanship."

Brandon had a thorough training in the art of showmanship, beginning with his first musical experience at the age of 12 when he joined the Audubon Grammar School Ukulele Band. That was in Chicago where he was born on Christmas Day, 1915. Later, he studied piano with Rosa Stein, who was accompanist for the Chicago Opera Company, and was student conductor and national champion E flat clarinet soloist — and at the same time was an art major at Lake View High School.

Art and music have tugged at him all his life. For a while he forsook music to

Pat Nixon: 'Better to laugh than cry'

EDITOR'S NOTE — Pat Nixon is showing the strain of Watergate. Not in public, and even in private she boosts others' morale. But her friends see the tension she's under.

By FRANCES LEWINE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Late at night, when Pennsylvania Avenue is deserted, Pat Nixon sometimes leaves the White House to walk the quiet nearby streets.

Often she covers her blonde hair with a scarf so she won't be recognized, her daughter, Julie Nixon Eisenhower, reports.

The late-night walks, two or three times a week, are something new. In a Watergate-troubled time, the strolls offer the First Lady privacy, relaxation, an escape from the "hermetically sealed-in" and constantly bustling White House, says, the youngest Nixon daughter.

Some evenings, Mrs. Nixon is joined by Julie. Others, she walks alone, save for the ever-present Secret Service agents.

Those close to the First Lady see the signs of Watergate strain.

She "feels very deeply about this," and sees in Watergate an attempt by some people to get "her husband's last pound of flesh," says a very close friend, Mrs. Helene Drown, who has known Pat Nixon for 35 years. They were teachers together at Whittier High School in California before the Nixons married.

"But I don't think Watergate has affected her any more than any crisis they've gone through in their lives," adds Mrs. Drown. "Pat Nixon's motto has always been: It's better to laugh than to cry."

THE LAUGHTER, the good spirits are what the public usually see. Hundreds of people who meet Mrs. Nixon in receiving lines find her a warm, friendly, smiling and responsive hostess.

"She goes merrily along as if nothing was happening," says Curator Clement Conger, who works with Mrs. Nixon to refurbish and replace White House furnishings.

"She tries to relieve the tension," daughter Julie adds.

The First Lady's social secretary, Lucy Winchester, bears that out with a report about Mrs. Nixon carrying off a poster showing a kitten clinging to a curtain rod. It was captioned, "Hang in there, baby." Mrs. Nixon took it to display in the President's bedroom.

The Nixons observed their 33rd wedding anniversary Friday and Mrs. Nixon expects to observe two more as First Lady, Mrs. Drown says.

"She doesn't seem to think her term in the White House will be terminated."

REPORTERS THINK Mrs. Nixon, 62, is showing signs of strain and her press secretary, Helen Smith, admits that "it's a difficult time for her."

In the few times she has spoken out after being pressed by reporters, Mrs. Nixon has proclaimed "I'm full of faith and confidence ... I'll have faith until I'm proven wrong."

When a reporter said, "This has been a hard year for you and you seem to be holding up marvelously ... what is it that sustains you?" Mrs. Nixon responded:

"The truth sustains me, because I have great faith in my husband. He's an honorable, dedicated person. And when you know the truth, you have nothing to fear. I have a very positive outlook."

While criticism mounts against Nixon, almost nothing is said against his wife and partner in 28 years of national politics.

Except for the fact that she was a wifely co-signer of the income tax returns on which Nixon was found to owe $476,000, Mrs. Nixon has not been linked personally to any of the President's Watergate-related problems.

Mrs. Drown says Mrs. Nixon felt that the Presidential tapes should have been considered "like personal, sensitive diaries ... never to be released to anyone."

Julie Eisenhower, frequently the family spokesman on Watergate, has described her mother as "able to take things with a grain of salt. She's very philosophical and I guess she finds she can hold up under all this because she loves my father and believes in him."

IT WAS A YEAR ago that Mrs. Nixon expressed her faith and confidence in her husband on Watergate. When someone gave her a copy of a weekly Pennsylvania newspaper during a reception, she joked, "Well, I don't see Watergate on the front page. Something's wrong here."

Since publication of the transcripts, Mrs. Nixon is less inclined to joke about Watergate.

Once friendly and relaxed with reporters, she has become irritable with them.

"I'll pray for the press," she flung over her shoulder in turning aside questions on one White House occasion.

Mrs. Nixon even has displayed what her press secretary described as "a flash of anger" during a talk with reporters aboard her plane on the way back from her six-day Latin American goodwill visit last March.

It came when she was asked about "the strain of the past year."

"I really don't wish to speak of it," Mrs. Nixon said, standing up to cut off the interview.

"It's just a personal thing and why bring that into the trip ... "

Mrs. Nixon reportedly is distressed at the news media's constant efforts to get Mrs. Nixon to discuss Watergate at social events.

"She wants to focus on the positive," Mrs. Smith explains. Mrs. Drowns adds that Mrs. Nixon has complained to her that reporters ignored events at the White House and she wishes they would give more recognition to volunteers and other groups she entertains.

Just as President Nixon has sought friendly audiences for his public appearances lately, Mrs. Nixon also entertains apparently supportive groups. Sometimes as often as three afternoons a week, she will have two events on her calendar to greet such visitors as the Daughters of the American Revolution or wives of a doctors' group.

Though she once traveled across the country promoting volunteer work, Mrs. Nixon now confines her efforts to meeting groups in the Washington area.

Despite her many years in the public spotlight, those who know Mrs. Nixon say she is basically a shy and private person.

PAT NIXON ACCOMPANIES the President as they prepare to leave Andrews Air Force Base on a recent trip to Oklahoma. The Nixons, who just celebrated their 33rd wedding anniversary, are facing, in Watergate, the biggest crisis of their lives. Some think the strain is showing, but those closest to her claim there has been no visible change in Mrs. Nixon personally or in her activities as First Lady. AP Newsfeatures photo

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Pools, patios are party settings

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

PAPER FLOWERS mingled with the real thing poolside at the Park Estates home of Ruth Grisham when nearly 100 members and guests of the Auxiliary to Long Beach Children's Clinic gathered for luncheon and a fashion show.

Fashions were from Town and Country with member models showing what the well-dressed lady will wear this summer.

Models were Mary Alice Johnson (wearing another hat as decorations chairgal), Helen Myers, Dorthy Urbanek, Lee Laufenberg, Dorothy Wise and Mary Ann Caramello.

Marian Smith brought an even dozen guests. One of them, Ruth Carl, came all the way from Hawaii.

Other luncheers included Irene Strohm, Helen Eastman, Lucille Sherman, Mary Wilson, Alberta Carlson, Madalyn Christopher, Eleanor Schurtless, Pat Lever, Jerry Hickman, Doris Mathers, Marge Johnson and Betty Jo Spence.

SPEAKING OF patios.

The patio at Rancho Los Alamitos was dressed with umbrella topped tables centered by summer flowers when Rancho board members honored the Docents for their volunteer work as public tour guides for the former Bixby ranch.

Connie Ainge, who traded her job as last year's docent chairgal for this year's president's chair, handed out awards to docents who served 200 hours or more.

They were: Naomi Alderman, Decima Beckett, Marion Burton, Dorothy King, Elinor Knox, Claire MacLaughlin, Nerine Salzer and Mary Ellen Thompson.

Those donating 150 were Marian Jacobson, Evelyn Prince and Connie, herself.

The combined hours of service for the past 12 months totaled 6,725. No one estimated the amount of shoe leather used in walking countless miles around the Rancho.

If you like to combine exercise with history and community service, call the Rancho and volunteer. Man and woman alike.

VOLUNTEERS have fun, too.

Like the bus trip to Solvang for the "Pinkies" of Long Beach Community Hospital.

Chief planners were Wilma Long and Mary Bailey. They didn't plan for Betty Brown and Edith Armstrong to come up with an entertainment act for the passengers — or that the bus driver, Clint Repp, would have such a good singing voice.

Some in the captive "audience" were Stephanie Swanson, Virginia Williams, Jimmie Burke, Mona Carder, Hazel Miller, Virginia Dobbins, Kay Peter, Joyce Coffee and Peg Widetick, president.

SANDLARK members named their annual fun and fund-raising party "Hoe Down — Western Style."

They borrowed the party room at the Century 21 building and ordered a barbecue and music. Reservations went well and everyone showed up at the appointed time rarin' to go.

A slight hitch developed.

The key to the room did not fit. Obviously it was not the key to the room.

After some panic button pushing, Ollie and Marguerite Speraw (he is with Century 21, you know) came to the rescue with the right key and all the cowboys and girls had a fine time.

Some were Niles and Mary Jane Haton, Fred and Patty Davis, Paul and Gloria Grandle, Roy and Mary Alice Jarvis, Tony and Betty Januzzi, Joyce Lewis and Ted and Jane Matt.

Also Perry and Bernice Maxson, Mitch and Betty Mitchell, John and Paula Mucciaro, Leo and Dorothy Neal, Dick and Dody Russell, Joe and Marilyn Shuff, Brenda Daigle and Bill and Jean Ingham.

PEOPLE who have been places...

Such as Frank and Addie Fortune who just returned from an exciting visit to the Holy Land.

Or the Jack Campbells of Westminster who enjoyed a 32 day Caribbean cruise aboard the Royal Viking Sky.

And the J. Wallace Cordes who vacationed in Sun City, Ariz.

It's cover up with hats for fall, winter

HATS were back and wider brimmed than ever as milliners previewed their fall-winter styles in New York. This giant nubby brim version is by Mr. John.

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI WRITER

NEW YORK — The millinery industry is brimful of good news.

It reports more women getting back into hats and, for fall and winter, the number one style is the wide-brimmed number.

"Business is booming," reported the Millinery Institute of America, as it presented highlights of the new collections for fashion editors visiting New York for a rundown on all the next season's ready-to-wear trends.

All told, the institute's show business presentation included 52 hat variations starting with the fedora. Throughout, the brimmed look dominated, except for evening when models wearing head-hugging cloches came swinging down the fashion runway.

The fedoras, copied from the man's classic, featured the tailored look, but softened, and done mostly in felt. Shapes varied from Mr. John's giant fedora with stiffened brim in moss green to Jack McConnell's smaller brimmed fedora in white felt with rhinestone studded band.

BRIMS CAME IN all sizes and shapes. Some were stiffened, some were turned back off the face, and so many pulled down over the eyes that its wearer either will have to hold her head high or it's going to be a hazardous winter.

Veils also were revived. Don Anderson showed a big-brimmed felt in black with face-covering net.

One group, called "fast hats," were designed as casuals, easy to pack, crushable, and aimed for the girl on the go. Among the handsomer numbers were the ruby red velvet snood from Mr. Martin and Adolfo's snap brim, eye-covering hat with felt brim and crocheted crown in white.

Hats go it alone or are combined with big scarves, muffs, mufflers, shawls and boas. Adolfo combined simulated white mink in a cape and turban. Albrizio showed a brimmed, beige hat with boa falling to the hemline plus a muff, all in beige feathers.

ALSO MAKING fashion news in hats is the return of turbans and cloches. Shown here are red jersey turban by Bob Greene for Irene and a white peek-a-boo cloche by Tom Hana for Kurt Jr. UPI Wirephotos

Swim program seeks volunteers

Prospective aides for the Red Cross Handicapped Swim Program will meet for an orientation program July 1 at 11 a.m. at the Jewish Community Center, 2601 Grand Ave. The meeting will fully explain the program and give basic water training.

The swim program provides water recreation and instruction for the physically handicapped and mentally retarded. As many as 200 handicapped can be accommodated if enough volunteer aides are available. The program operates on a one-to-one basis in half-hour lessons so many aides are needed.

Any handicapped youngster may participate if he or she is not able to benefit from regular instructional swimming programs. There is no age limit, but students must provide their own transportation, swim suit and towel.

Those wishing to participate as aides must be 14 years of age or older and be at a junior or senior life-saving level.

Classes will meet on Mondays from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. July 8 through Aug. 26, at the Jewish Community Center.

Coordinators of the program are Lori Swatek and Peggy Hunter, Long Beach State University students. They have worked with the program for seven and two years, respectively, and are certified Red Cross handicapped swim instructors.

Fest features foreign foods

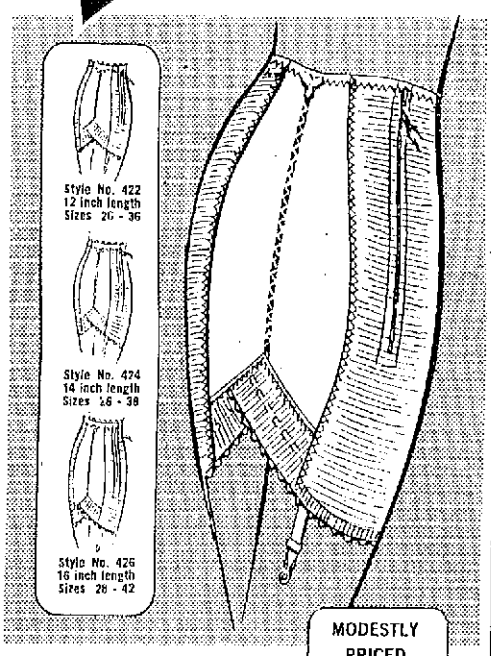

Folk dancing and Middle Eastern and European foods will be featured attractions at the Annual Festival of St. Luke Orthodox Church, 13261 Dunklee St., Garden Grove, next Sunday.

Since St. Luke is a pan-orthodox church, many nationalities will be represented in entertainment and cuisine, some of which include Syrian, Russian, Ukranian, Greek, Serbian and Romanian.

Game booths also will be set up.

The festival will be held from noon until 9 p.m. Adults will be admitted for $1 and children under 12 will be admitted free.

THE NEW ETIQUETTE

Use fingers sensibly

By MAUREEN ELENA REARDON

We've never quite come to grips with those amazing devices, the fingers. Think of all of the things your mother told you not to do as a kid, and most of them probably involved the fingers.

"It's not polite to point." "Don't scratch like that or people will think you've got some disease." "I don't know what that gesture means, but I'm sure I don't like it."

Our fingers are in such disfavor that they are almost prohibited as an instrument of conveying food to the mouth. We have been told that eating with metal extensions called the "knife," "fork," and "spoon" is the civilized way to go. The question of when we can pick up food with our fingers has been something for the gurus of the traditional etiquette to know and for us to find out.

THINK OF EATING with your fingers in terms of practicality. If you use your fingers to pick up a piece of food and something runs down your chin or arms, then you probably should be eating that food with a knife and fork. A dumpling with sauerbraten gravy comes to mind as a type of food that couldn't practically be eaten with the fingers.

Think of eating with your fingers in terms of where you are. If you are home and have lots of time, you probably won't mind having to scrub up in the bathroom after having eaten fried chicken with your fingers. But if you are in a restaurant and in a rush, you'll probably want to eat it with a knife and fork.

If you are in an informal place like home or a hamburger parlor, you might pick up your french fries with your hand. If you are like most people, you will probably eat your french fries with a knife and fork in a "nice" restaurant, despite the fact that cutting french fries can be a fork-boggling proposition.

THINK OF EATING with your fingers in terms of the type of food you are eating. I know a family which eats frozen pizza by candlelight with knives and forks. Then there is the woman who told me that during the 1940s she was forced to eat hot dogs and popsicles with a knife and fork at the women's college she attended. Pizza, popsicles, hot dogs and numerous other goodies are inherently finger foods. People who eat them with knives and forks are just making trouble for themselves.

Think of eating with your fingers in terms of how the food is served. If you're served a slice of watermelon at a picnic, you will pick it up in your hands. If the watermelon is part of a fruit compote, you will eat the whole thing with a fork or spoon.

Think of eating with your fingers in terms of the formality of the occasion. If you have on your Givenchy and your husband is cavorting in his Guccis, you probably will not want to pick up barbecued ribs in your fingers. If you have a choice, you will not order anything messy.

Don't think of eating with your fingers in terms of the people who are eating with you. If you decide you prefer to eat your corn on the cob, don't retrench when "fancy" people come over by cutting off the kernels and eating them with a knife and fork. Eating is a grand time, and not a time to prove that you are grand.

(If you have questions about the new etiquette, or want to share your comments and ideas, write to Ms. Reardon, care of the Independent, Press-Telegram.

AT WIT'S END

'First Man' unenviable role

By ERMA BOMBECK

This year, 3,000 women are running for city, state and national office.

It is only a matter of time before one of them fools around and winds up in the White House.

This is one woman who will not run if she is chosen and who will not serve if she is drafted (Or is it chose if I am drafted or run if I am served?).

Whatever, I know that politics, with all its sex scandals, graft, corruption, wiretapping and illegalities, seems glamorous but let's look at the drawbacks.

To begin with, if I ever admitted to being 35 I don't have the imagination to deserve being president.

Second, to be married to the nation's First Man would have to be weird. My husband would be in charge of 132 rooms and a staff of 100 while I sat in the Oval Room playing with a Sony tape recorder. I suspect the better part of my day would be spent listening to my husband's complaints.

"I HATE TO bug you (forgive the personal reference) but eight cooks are quitting, two gardeners are retiring, I have one maid who doesn't do any dusting, another who wants every other Wednesday off, and six who want their own TV set.

Not only that, the wax in the entraceway is yellowing, the sink is backed up, we have 600 coming for dinner, and you still haven't done anything about raising the age of menopause to 75."

Third, I'm not sure if I could stand all the dumb women jokes from the chauvinists. A picture of me at the Inauguration with a caption, "First Woman To Be Explicative In Public." Or riding along Pennsylvania Avenue and the headline glaring, "Backseat Driver Makes It To White House." Or Eric Sevareid telling his audience how Ms. President will balance the budget with pillowcase bingo ... or a cartoon of my Avon lady following me to the U.N. and the caption having me say, "For God's sake, Evelyn, not here!"

THERE ARE OTHER reasons why I'D never make it to the White House. There could be a conflict if Russia wanted to make trouble at 8:30 a.m. on Thursday. (That's my standing at the beauty shop.) It could be a real drag traveling 800,000 miles a year and each time Air Force I landed, my kids whining, "What did you bring me?"

But mostly, I couldn't go to bed with a simple marital headache without Walter Cronkite leading off with it on the six o'clock news, the bottom dropping out of the stock market and Mr. First Lady calling for an investigation of my executive privilege.

Maybe an older woman could handle it.

They've added Mrs. to their names

Duiven-Andrews

A first home in North Las Vegas, where the bridegroom is stationed with the U.S. Air Force, awaits newly wed Mr. and Mrs. David Charles Duiven (Mary Jean Andrews), who exchanged nuptial vows during a Saturday afternoon ceremony in Lime Avenue Baptist Church.

Boan-Sheets

Honeymooning in Palm Springs are newly wed Mr. and Mrs. Steven Craig Boan (Kathy Lee Sheets) after a wedding Sunday afternoon at Lakewood Village Community Church, White Chapel.

The new Mrs. Boan was graduated from Westminster High. Her husband, an alumnus of Millikan High, attended Long Beach City College.

They will live in Long Beach.

The Aces on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn:

Please settle our argument over the bidding of this hand. We reached only three no-trump and are blaming each other.

Our bidding:

Answer: Either player could have bid more but I place most of the blame on West. He undervalued the club fit. I suggest this bidding using the 5 NT grand slam force.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Please tell us how to bid this hand. Our result was not too good.

Answer: I suggest opening with 1 NT and finally closing at 4 of hearts. There are times when East's four heart bid will not succeed. However, there is no scientific way to judge the true value of such good distribution and my policy is to bid game whenever prospects are reasonable.

CELEBRATING her birthday at a party with her staff, Pat Nixon displays a cake in the aisle of the Air Force One jet bringing her back to the U.S. from Venezuela and Brazil last March. The six-day trip to the inaugurations of the presidents of the two countries gave Mrs. Nixon a respite from Watergate, which upsets and troubles her despite her cheerful appearance, friends say.

Basically a shy, private person

her privacy. It is difficult even to get information now on a typical day in her life as First Lady.

One staff member describes Mrs. Nixon's role in the White House as that of "glorified housekeeper." She's involved in everything from refurbishing and replacing antiques to approving menus and cutting out beef when the prices go up.

There appears to be little entertaining of friends by the Nixon family, and a protective staff can't — or won't — report the frequency of such occasions or who's invited.

"Meeting people," is the thing Mrs. Nixon says she likes best about being First Lady.

THERE SEEMS to be general agreement that Mrs. Nixon spends an unusual amount of time on her mail, which is said to average as much as 3,000 to 4,000 letters a week.

She works an estimated four or five hours a day at it.

Julie says her mother is "a compulsive worker" and often spends four hours at night on her mail, staying up after an official dinner party.

Some associates think Mrs. Nixon works too hard. But Mrs. Drown explains "she's a perfectionist" and she "cares about people."

When she first came to the White House, Mrs. Nixon promised to open it to as many people as possible — not just "big shots." And she has kept that promise, claiming to have entertained more Americans at social events and worship services than any other First Family.

"Meeting people" is the thing Mrs. Nixon says she likes best about being First Lady.

The First Lady sleeps only a few hours at night; is up and about at 7:30 a.m. Mrs. Drown explains that from Pat's early years — she was orphaned as a teen-ager — "she had no time to lounge around."

Reporters rarely hear of Mrs. Nixon seeing friends other than Mrs. Drown, whose husband is a publisher's distributor, and Louise Thompson Johnson, another old friend from Whittier days, whose husband for years was an oil company representative in Washington.

But Julie says her mother has "a nice circle of friends. I wish she'd see them more often."

Julie describes her mother as an "outdoor girl, who grew up on a truck farm" and would like nothing better than to work in a garden. She settles now for potted plants at the White House.

Mrs. Nixon spends little time reading, but sometimes, on a weekend, Julie reports, she will spend an afternoon at it. Recent reading: Anne Morrow Lindbergh's Diaries.

AMAZING HEALTH and what friend Drown calls "physical capacity beyond anything I know ... I've never known her to take an aspirin for a headache," have helped Mrs. Nixon through the years.

In the White House, she's had nothing worse than slight flu once or twice. Mrs. Nixon, however, does not like to go for physical exams.

Though she looks thinner, Mrs. Smith claims Mrs. Nixon has not lost weight recently and continues to be about 110 pounds. She's 5 feet, 5 inches tall.

The First Lady is a light eater. "She'd miss a meal unless someone puts it down in front of her," says Julie.

During campaign years, Mrs. Nixon used to say she didn't drink or smoke. She's hedged a little lately. Her friends affirm that she has a cigarette once in a while and joins in cocktail hour drinking at private gatherings.

Mrs. Drown is perhaps the friend who has seen Mrs. Nixon most frequently in the White House years.

They exchange visits, talk on the phone a lot, and Mrs. Nixon escapes to the Drown family home in Rolling Hills, where she can work in the garden, enjoy an outdoor barbecue and normal family life in privacy.

They laugh a lot together, Mrs. Drown says, and often exchange "gag gifts," like the bright green three-inch platform shoes she sent Pat last Christmas because she thought "she needed a lift."

FASCINATING FABRICS

Cotton characteristics, man-made toughness

By FRANCES DIETRICH

It's not only fun to hear about new fabrics, the information is a guide to shopping. Two years ago, this column announced the development of a new type of yarn by Du Pont. Now it is being widely used in ready-to-wear and is expected to be available in yard goods within the near future.

The unique quality of fabric woven with "Nandel" yarns is its lisle-like feel. Yet, with its softness, it has a subtle crispness. This accomplishment is due to the special construction of the yarn.

A multitude of finite fibers is laid down and wrapped by surface fibers. The result is a yarn which has the downy characteristic of spun yarn, cotton, for example, and the toughness of man-made filaments. The coined word, which Du Pont applies to its patented process, is "rotofil."

The bundle of fibers and its wrapper are made of acrylic, famous for its light weight and ability to take jewel-like colors as well as subdued tones. Rotofil yarns can be made with other man-made fibers and blended in various combinations with polyester, nylon, spandex.

ORDINARILY, spun yarns, which have microscopically small protruding ends, give a fuzzy look to fabric. This is not a great drawback in sweaters, blankets, socks and sportswear. But when the personality of acrylic is desired in single knits, doubleknits and fine wovens, another kind of yarn is needed that will not fuzz and pill. "Nandel" rotofil yarn is said to be the answer.

It is possible to produce tricot, which is ordinarily knit with yarn of long, shiny man-made filaments, with the aesthetics and appearance of spun yarns.

Woven cloth with fine-spun "Nandel" yarns can be cloud-soft in constructions that are supplie to crisp to firm. Twill of high quality, fine count yarn has a wool-like feel in a lightweight fabric, which drapes beautifully.

This contemporary fabric looks natural and feels like it, but has all the ease of care of man-made fiber yarns. Garments may be machine washed and machine dried. In wear, they are wrinkle-resistant, woven or knit, and have excellent resistance to shrinkage and distortion, when washed.

IT'S A HAPPY note that this fiber and fabric have been introduced in men's sport shirts, as well as in women's and children's wear. Men's sport shirts in 50 per cent "Nandel" and 50 per cent polyester in knits offer rich colors and a luxurious touch, which is a welcome change from the harsh, plastic look of some menswear.

Manufacturers using "Nandel" for winter and holiday knit garment lines include Catalina, Donegal, Hathaway, Hill Star, Lord Jeff, Manhattan, Medici and Roland of California.

Spring colors in "Nandel" are silk-like in wisteria, tiger lily orange, grenadine, pink, lemon and lime and the deeper colors of cognac, summer moss, as well as luscious lights like sweet cream, wild honey, bisque and Jordan almond.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Wheels, deals in the kitchen

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

He says, "I started out to be a loser. I was born the day before Christmas which was to short change me on gifts for years thereafter." Today's chef of the week, Kenneth J. Martinson, turned out to be a winner, however. His most recent successful operation is Plaza Bowling Lanes at Spring and Palo Verde.

Born in Minneapolis, Minn., he lived there and in Lake Mills, Iowa, until his family moved to Long Beach. Martinson is one of seven children Ripley told about in his Believe It or Not because each had seven letters in his first name.

When he was 8-years-old and a student at the old Daisy Avenue Elementary School, he got off to an early start mastering the garbled cry of the corner newsboy, selling newspapers on The Pike. He also took tickets at the Motordrome.

WHEN HIS JOB expanded to include taking care of the place, he, for his own amusement, tried riding his bicycle around the drome which was 20-feet high and 20-feet in diameter. Within a year he had mastered enough speed to stay on the perpendicular wall. It was then that his bicycle wheels began to really "spin." Reckless Ross, the owner, put Martinson in the act with him. For seven years, while at Edison Junior and Polytechnic High Schools, he was billed as "Dare Devil Kenny Martin," and rode his bicycle, and later a motorcycle, nights and on weekends. At that time, Martinson was the only person in the world to ride a bicycle in a motordrome.

In fact, his racing acclaim reached a high peak when he rode with a lion — courtesy of MGM — to add interest to the act.

After graduating from Poly, his next achievement was to build a race car which he entered at Ascot and other tracks up and down the coast.

Four-wheel cars were the next step, and following a tour at Long Beach City College, Martinson went into the service station business.

He married the former Dorris Dickerson in 1936 and they have a daughter, Linda, who made them grandparents in 1970. By the time this column appears, a second grandchild, hopefully a boy, will have arrived to keep 4-year-old Lisa company.

Martinson went into the Army Air Corps in 1942, stationed at Dallas, Tex. For a part of his service years he was with the Air Transport Command which ferried planes all over the world.

HE RETURNED to Long Beach in 1945 and organized a company which built bowling alleys. Plaza Lanes is his most recent.

Martinson is a Legion of Honor member of Kiwanis with a 25-year perfect attendance record and has served seven terms as secretary. He says, "I'm a non-joiner but I love Kiwanis and Kiwanis is my hobby."

When not having a ball at Plaza Lanes, he enjoys playing golf and swimming. He also continues his contact and friendships with many former carnival men who started The Pike.

Dorris says, "No, he isn't 'Dare Devil Kenny' in the kitchen. He rarely enters but when he does, being the perfectionist he is, he wants everything in order." That's the procedure he's following today with his Plaza Omelets.

PLAZA OMELETS

1 well-beaten egg for each omelet
1 pound grated cheddar cheese
1 can refried beans

KENNETH J. MARTINSON

Meat mixture:

1 pound ground beef
1 onion diced fine
2 fresh tomatoes, cut fine
1 teaspoon MSG
4 tablespoons chili powder

Combine ingredients and simmer 25 minutes.

Salsa:

1 can tomatoes diced fine
1 can green chilies, diced
½ onion cut fine
1 teaspoon garlic

Put onions in blender for one minute. Add to chili and tomatoes. Do not heat.

Put one well-beaten egg on medium oiled griddle and spread out with fork. Add 1 tablespoon refried beans, 2 tablespoons meat mixture, 1 heaping tablespoon cheese and 1 tablespoon salsa. Turn over and put in edged cookie sheet. Add more grated cheese. Bake 7 minutes in 400 degree oven. Serve with rest of salsa and tortillas which have been cut in quarters and fried in hot oil.

Children's choir sings

The International Children's Choir will be presented in concert Monday by Granger Dance Academy during community program in Long Beach Auditorium, beginning at 8:30 p.m.

The children range in age from 5 to 14 years and have as their theme song, "Let there be peace on earth and let it begin with me."

Community singing opens the show at 7:30, with social dancing following at 9.

The admission-free program is sponsored by the Long Beach Recreation Department.

DEAR ABBY

Entertaining parents

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My parents live in a small apartment near us. They feel lonely and neglected, and complain constantly that friends and relatives visit them only as a duty, and not very often. They are critical and quarrelsome and have no interests beyond their aches and pains and being entertained.

I've tried to interest them in senior citizen groups, but because some of their members smoke, play cards and are Democrats, my parents couldn't mingle with them.

I visit my parents every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. I take them grocery shopping, to the doctor, and out for lunch once a week. I have them to my home for dinner every Sunday and Thursday. I even do their laundry!

The problem is, they are not satisfied, and let us know about it in no uncertain terms. We've had several heart-to-heart talks with them, but they still think we are selfish for not spending more time with them.

When I'm not with them, they phone, and if I am not home, they get furious, and I get bawled out like a child for "running around all day."

I am 57 years old, and have worked for 41 years, and I am tired of running myself ragged trying to please them. Any suggestions?

RUN RAGGED

DEAR RUN: The problem isn't THEM; it's the way you react to them. As long as you know you are doing all you can for them, there is no reason to feel guilty. None at all!

DEAR ABBY: I am a bartender in a small town and quite often a customer will say, "If anyone calls asking for me, say I'm not here. And if they ask if I've been here, say you haven't seen me."

Abby, when I lie, as I often do, it goes against my conscience, but I lie anyway because I don't know how to get around it. Is there a way I can keep from lying without losing customers?

HONEST BARTENDER

DEAR HONEST: Probably not. Bartenders, like doctors and priests, are expected to keep confidences.

DEAR ABBY: My cousin had her first baby, so the other night we went to her home to see the new baby. There were lots of other relatives there.

This cousin kept looking at her watch because she had to feed the baby at 8 p.m. She could hardly wait to unbutton her blouse right in front of everybody. Then she said, proudly, "This is the first time I've ever had such a nice breast," and without even putting a blanket or diaper or anything around the baby, she proceeded to nurse him. BOTH breasts were exposed the whole time, which was not necessary. Some of the men went into the kitchen right away, and a couple of the younger kids got so embarrassed they also left.

I know there is nothing nasty about the human body, or nursing a baby, but what do you think of a woman who would take advantage of a situation like that to show off?

DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: Same as you. It's disgusting. I'd also feel sorry for her.

CONFIDENTIAL TO T.M.: When someone starts out with, "It's not the money, it's the principle of the thing," it's usually the money.

Starlight Serenade keyed to theme: music for people

be a press photographer for the Chicago Tribune, but went back as a pianist and arranger, touring the country with orchestras during the 1930s. Then it was art again, when he served as Montgomery Ward's art director. Back to music in 1945, he was a triple threat man — conductor, pianist, arranger. He played the top Chicago spots — the Pump Room, Edgewater Beach Hotel, Chicago Theater, State-Lake Theater and the Blackhawk Restaurant. At the Blackhawk, he said, chuckling, he was replaced by the Spinning Salad Bowl.

ON THE SERIOUS side, Brandon is orchestra manager of the Chicago Opera House, orchestra consultant to the Auditorium Theater, music coordinator for McCormick Place, and conductor for Ruth Page's Chicago Ballet Company.

To prove his theory that music can be both good and fun, Brandon in 1962 formed the Chicago Pops Concert Orchestra. Most of the musicians play in orchestras that accompany major ballet companies when they come to Chicago. An offshoot of this group was Brandon's Big Brass Band, a 35-piece group that performed in shopping centers. People flocked by the thousands to listen.

Not long ago, Brandon initiated shopping center concerts at the Fashion Island Mall in Newport Beach and the magic still works. Once a week, just as the stores close, Brandon begins his programs and people come to listen. The conductor also has formed the Brandon Symphonette for a series of summer pops concerts in Los Angeles and Orange County. As a result, he commutes each week between Chicago and Los Angeles. His home is in Corona Del Mar, but he has an apartment in Chicago, too.

Both in Chicago and Orange County, Brandon conducts youth concerts for students from grammar school through college.

Somewhere along the way, he wrote jingles and tunes for commercials. "I Wish I Were an Oscar Mayer Weiner" is his. So are jingles for Coca Cola, Standard Oil, Pabst Beer and a thousand others.

"A commercial jingle has to be quick and simple," he explained. You have just 60 seconds for the whole story — and Libby has 49 items, Montgomery Ward a whole catalog. You have to get the message over fast. It's got to be something you can hum, remember, and identify with the product."

Brandon admitted cheerfully that he makes use of gimmicks if they'll add to the musical effect. "Sure, why not? To get different sounds, I've used four bassoons, or two shotguns and a toilet seat, or three sewing machines."

"Writing jingles is profitable but I get more kick out of working with live audiences. The response is good for my soul. I like to communicate with people."

Brandon mixes popular and classical numbers in his programs and believes that he builds audiences for symphony orchestras. "People hear our excerpts and think, 'Gee, symphonies aren't so bad after all!'

"There still are symphony conductors who are so formal and traditional that they won't talk to audiences. Some of them will hardly talk to the musicians. But I like to talk to people, to educate them for symphonies. They hear what I say and think, 'Sure, I knew that!'

"Everything I say gives me a chance to involve the audience."

BRANDON WILL OPEN the Long Beach Starlight Serenade Tuesday with a number he composed. It will be titled, for this program, "Starlight Overture." When he played it Monday for the American Federation of Musicians, it was called the "AFM Overture." It has a lot of titles — it's an all-purpose overture.

He also will tell a musical tale, Kleinsinger's "Pan, the Piper," showing how instruments evolved, the reeds from a shepherd's blowing on a piece of grass, percussions from the clapping of hands, brasses from a chance blowing on a ram's horn, strings from the snapping of a hunter's bowstring.

Then Brandon will conduct "Pizzicato Polka" to show how Strauss used that unknown hunter's bowstring discovery to compose a gay, lively dance melody. Among other numbers will be Brandon's own "Dixie Doodle."

The program will continue with a pleasant blend of pops and classical music. "The very creation of music," Brandon said, "was an effort to please. Man first used his voice to sing. That pleased him. Then he invented instruments to make other sounds.

"OF COURSE, pleasure isn't just sweetness and light. Suspense, anger, all sorts of things are vicarious ways of appealing to the senses, of enlarging experiences, of sharing.

"It takes talented musicians to put over this kind of communication. Talented — not necessarily polished professionals. Enthusiasm is the key. I'd rather have musicians with less polish and unbounded enthusiasm than jaded, disinterested, experienced professionals who, bored, put forth minimum effort. It's up to the conductor to get the best out of musicians. First of all, the musicians must want to play, but the conductor must let them know that he has confidence in them."

Communication. That's the thing that motivates Brandon and sparks his concerts for people. "Sure, I have a flair for people. Why not use it?"

Sword tsuba are sharp art

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

A fitting weapon for the fierce samurai in Japan was his sword, admired for its hard cutting edge, flexible sides and tough, resilient core. Forged, folded and reforged again and again, it became a combination of steels in thousands of laminated layers.

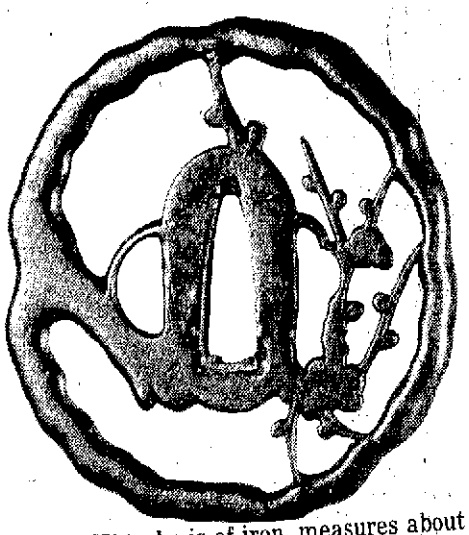

During the Kamakura period, 1185-1384, political unrest and constant warfare gave rise to the samurai warriors. To protect the hand during combat, tsuba, or guards, became essential parts of the swords. Other fittings, or mitokoromono, were added.

Owners of the swords were not content to leave the guards to their practical purpose only. The tsuba became objects of ornamental importance reflecting the status, personality and style of the owner. Made of iron, copper, gold, silver and alloys, the guards were embellished with abstract or pictorial designs created by engraved, openwork, relief or inlay methods.

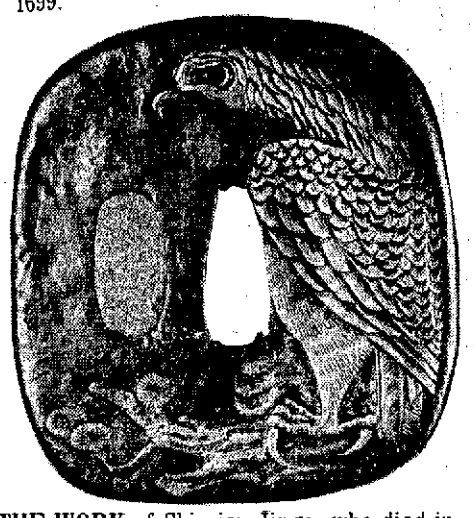

More than 70 Japanese swords and their fittings will go on exhibit on the first level of the Ahmanson Gallery of Los Angeles Museum of Art July 2 and will continue through Aug. 18. They are from the 6th to the 19th centuries.

There will be examples of openwork designs by early Katsushi masters of the Muromachi period (1392-1573) and fine specimens of pictorial decoration by such tsuba masters as Kane-ie. Others are from the Higo school of the early Edo period (17th century) and the late Edo period masters Goto Ichijo and Otsuki Mitsuoki.

George Kuwayama, senior curator of Far Eastern art, has prepared a free brochure and guided tours will be offered Thursdays. "The Art of the Japanese Sword" may be seen Tuesdays through Fridays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on weekends from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Admission is free. The museum is located at 5905 Wilshire Blvd.

'PRUNUS' tsuba is of iron, measures about 3½ in. in diameter. It was designed by Japanese artisan Hayashi Matashichi, 1613-1699.

THE WORK of Shimizu Jingo, who died in 1675, 'Eagle on a Branch' is an iron plate tsuba inlaid with brass. Both it and 'Prunus' will be on exhibit.

LOS ANGELES attorney Richard E. Sherwood has been elected president of the board of trustees of Los Angeles County Museum of Art. He succeeds Dr. Franklin D. Murphy who was elected chairman of the board.

Sherwood, a partner in the law firm of O'Melveny and Myers, has been a member of the board of trustees since 1966 and for the past four years has served as vice president, chairman of the exhibitions committee and as a member of the acquisitions committee, operating committee and nominating committee.

Daniel H. Ridder of Long Beach has been named to head the budget and finance committee.

BEGINNING Wednesday and continuing through July, Long Beach Art Association will show "The Art of Color Modulation" in its gallery, 800 E. Ocean Blvd.

The paintings were done by 16 artist members who participated in the recent four-day workshop conducted by Bill Bowne of California State University, San Diego. Gallery hours are noon to 4 p.m. Wednesdays through Sundays.

MULTI-TALENTED artists and musicians will be on hand to entertain during the free three-day 22nd All City Outdoor Art Festival Friday, Saturday and next Sunday at Barnsdall Park, 4800 Hollywood Blvd., just west of Vermont.

Visitors may browse among more than 1,300 colorful art works entered in the festival by Los Angeles artists, some of them winners of the $10,000 in purchase awards donated by Home Savings and Loan Association. Artisans will work in 28 demonstration booths. Films, marionettes, poetry readings and almost continuous outdoor musical entertainment will be part of the activity.

During award presentations and opening ceremonies, Jose Gutierrez and the Mariachi de Los Angeles will perform. They will appear again Saturday as will the Roto Rooter Good Times Christmas Band, the Paul Senia Singers, and the Ira Schulman Baroque Jazz Ensemble. Next Sunday, music will be by Rondall Las Americas, 13 musicians performing songs and music of Latin America; the Tommy Vig Orchestra, a symphonic jazz-rock group; the Beautiful Sounds of Los Angeles Chamber Singers; and Rob Morris and the Summer of '42 Orchestra, playing in the Glenn Miller style.

In addition to the outdoor musical entertainment, experimental films, including winners of the first Festival Film Forum will be shown Saturday and next Sunday at 1, 3 and 5 p.m.

Gershwin classic

Clamma Dale and Robert Mosley are two of the stars who sing the title roles in George Gershwin's 'Porgy and Bess' at the Ahmanson Theater in the Music Center. The musical classic, playing here for the first time in 20 years, will close July 7. Leona Mitchell and LaVerne Williams alternate as Bess, Thomas Carey as Porgy. Performances are nightly, except Mondays, at 8:30 p.m., Sundays at 7 p.m. Matinees begin at 2:30 p.m. Thursdays and Saturdays.

Sea stars in lecture-films

Five lecture-films about the sea will be presented in the Music Center Pavilion on Tuesday evenings Jan. 14, 21, 28, Feb. 4 and 11. Capt. Irving Johnson, "last of the great sea dogs" will appear in person for the first three events. His film description of the gruelling fight to negotiate waters "Around Cape Horn" will open the series. His documentary of circumnavigating the globe with youthful crew members, "The Brigantine Yankee" will be shown Jan. 21. On Jan. 28, Europe and its canals will be seen from the decks of his "Ketch Yankee."

Music Center Presentations is filming a special introduction with ailing Capt. Alan Villiers at his home in Oxford, England, for "Square-Riggers of the Past," to be screened Feb. 4. Final event of the series will be Capt. Dwight Long recalling the great voyage of his youth in the 32-foot sailboat, Idle Hour, in "Six Years Around the World" Feb. 11.

Season tickets are now available at discount for the five lecture-films. They may be ordered by mail at the Music Center through Sept. 30. This will be the only showing of "The Last of the Great Sea Dogs" in Los Angeles, Orange, Ventura and other Southern California counties in 1975.

Bowl schedules pre-season dates

Beginning July 3, there will be a "Festival of 17th and 18th Century Music" as a pre-season prelude to the official Hollywood Bowl opening.

Few concerts include more than two concertos but the first festival bill lists six to be performed by harpsichord and orchestra. The July 3 program will start at 8 p.m. British musician Raymond Leppard will lead the Los Angeles Philharmonic and will be a soloist in performances of concertos by J.S. Bach for one, two, three and four harpischords.

Featured with Leppard will be William Tim Read, John Steele Ritter and Susanne Shapiro.

Alternating with the concertos will be short works by John Dowland, a British composer of the pre-Bach baroque era.

Other events of the festival will be an all-Mozart program July 5 and music by 17th century composers July 6. The July 5 bill will mark the Bowl debut of American mezzo Frederica von Stade and the return of Los Angeles born, London based pianist Stephen Bishop. On July 6, Miss von Stade will sing arias by Cavalli and Monteverdi. A program highlight will be the first American performance of Cavalli's "Messa Concertata."

The Bowl box office will be open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and from noon to 6 p.m. on Sundays. Tickets also are on sale at Mutual, Liberty, Wallichs and Pacific Stereo agencies. They are $4 for box seats, $3 for other reserved seats, $2 for general admission.

THE PAUL REVERE Junior High School Concert Choir has been added to the roster of previously announced performers at Hollywood Bowl's July 4 Fireworks Family Picnic Concert at 7:30 p.m.

The group of 85 will sing a medley of songs by George Gershwin, including "Summertime," "A Woman Is a Sometime Thing," "I'm on My Way" and the rousing "Clap Yo' Hands."

In recital

French baritone Gerard Souzay will make his first Southern California appearance since 1967 July 1 at 8 p.m. in USC's Bovard Auditorium. Assisted by pianist Dalton Baldwin, Souzay will sing German, French and Spanish songs. Tickets, at $6 each, may be reserved by phoning the USC programs office or may be purchased at the door.

WATERTON PARK, Canada - There's a bit of Bavaria tucked away here in the southwestern corner of the Province of Alberta. It runs straight south a couple of miles and flows across the Montana border into Glacier National Park, U.S.A.

The view from the top is a ringer for the Konigsee in the Bavarian Alps. Dressing up the scene of sheer snowcapped cliffs on either side of the long, narrow lake is the Prince of Wales Hotel, a prodigious pile in Alpine style looming in splendid isolation on a bluff at the head of the waters.

In this case the Canadian Rockies are substituting for the Alps, and one of the Waterton chain of lakes is doubling for the Konigsee. Neither is a pale carbon copy of its German counterpart. The precipices rising abruptly from the shoreline here are more colorful because of their mineral content, reflecting red, gold and purple highlights on the sparkling blue-green water of the lake.

THE AREA ON the Canadian side of the border officially is known as Waterton Lakes National Park, and together with the larger U.S. region to the south, comprises Waterton-Glacier International Peace Park. A two-hour cruise by motor launch from the town of Waterton Lake in the north traverses the length of the lake to Goat Haunt in Montana, where the U.S. Department of Interior hosts a hands-across-the-border display.

The chief difference in accommodations north and south of the invisible border is that the Canadian government has allowed town developments within their national parks, while the U.S. has restricted such amenities to the fringes.

Up here, the community of Waterton Lake backs its motels and shops right up to the edge of the lake, with a boat landing for the motor launches and small craft in a sheltered cove opposite the towering Prince of Wales landmark.

travel

Grassy, wooded slopes with hiking paths rim the lake a few steps from the conveniences of the townsite.

MAJOR ATTRACTIONS of the town include an Olympic-sized heated swimming pool, an 18-hole championship golf course and the launch cruises, both chartered and scheduled. Nearby are saddle horse concessions and miles of trails for riding or hiking.

Waterton Lake also features tennis courts, a children's playground, an outdoor theater for nature film screenings, stream or lake fishing and every variety of boating, including water skiing with wet-suit protection against a chilly dip. It must be remembered that all the water in the lake started out as snow.

Paved road side trips include the Cameron Lakes and Red Rock Canyon, two of the most scenic spots in the park. The hotel and motel rates are in the moderate $10 to $20 range for double occupancy and the season runs generally from May 1 to October 1, with the exception of the hotel, which is open June 15 through the annual holiday which in Canada is spelled Labour Day.

There are any number of ways to reach the resort. By auto from the U.S., the fast route is Chief Mountain International Highway through Glacier National Park. Within Canada, Alberta Highways 5 and 6 approach from the north and east. Waterton Lake is also served by Greyhound and Northern bus lines.

In our case, the visit was made by a combination of convenient airline connections from Los Angeles to Calgary, 250 miles north, and by coach from there. The chartered Brewster coach came equipped with a lavatory. Happiness, as travelers know, is a biffy on the bus.

THE AIRLINE portion of the trip gave us an unusual opportunity to compare Western's McDonnell Douglas DC10 wide cabin jetliner to Vancouver with Air Canada's Lockheed L1011 TriStar jumbo jet hop to Calgary. It is as difficult to distinguish the difference from the inside as from the outside. Both are roomy, quiet and smooth in flight. If in doubt, look up. The L1011 has a kind of eggcrate ceiling treatment.

Food service also was outstanding, by cooperation between the two carriers, as it turned out. Western's lunch on the return flight was the best midday airline chow I have tasted. Cold slices of Beef Wellington with a core of genuine pate, potato salad, hearts of artichoke and appropriate accoutrements.

It was prepared in Vancouver by Cara, Air Canada's catering subsidiary.

Cut corners in Europe

Europe still abounds with accommodations, restaurants, and activities that are bargains for American travelers, according to a Trans World Airlines survey.

For example, while prices at her grand hotels have risen impressively, Paris still offers several hundred less luxurious hotels, on smaller streets off the main boulevards, for an average of $20 double, well within the price range of American big-city hotels.

In Tours, center of France's chateaux country of the Loire, the auberges charge an average of $20 for two — with breakfast — which is the median price for a double in the turn-of-the-century tourist town of Galena, Illinois.

Although inflation has caused hotel prices in first class hotels on Portugal's Algarve beaches to soar from about $16 to $18 for two, it's still far less expensive than comparable luxury in American beach resorts.

THROUGHOUT Portugal, travelers can find pousadas ranging from converted castles and palaces to modern inns, usually in charming countryside settings, for around $7 — including three meals a day.

Next door in Spain, a wide range of accommodations are still bargains by American standards, with hotels in the cities available in the $15 to $17 range, and comfortable accommodations in the countryside averaging even less.

Splendid meals are widely available through the Iberian peninsula at modest prices, with three course dinners, wine, coffee and brandy for two available for $9.50.

At least one European country still gives Americans about the same amount of local currency for the dollar as last year. You'll get 29 drachmas for each U. S. dollar in Greece, where a full-day cruise from Athens to the Saronic Islands and back, including a snack, costs only $8.

Nor are all the European bargains found ringing the Mediterranean.

The London theater, which features many plays, both musical and dramatic, which first appeared on Broadway — and many which will eventually move from England to the United States — still costs roughly half the price of American theater.

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE

Orient's last big bargain

By STAN DELAPLANE

Seoul, Korea

So we flew out to Korea for a week — Choson, the Land of the Morning Calm. If you fly to Hong Kong or Bangkok, you get a stopover here free.

Seoul must be the cleanest city in the Orient. They wash and polish it every day. At 8 in the morning, all show windows are emptied. Windows washed inside AND out. Sidewalk and street swept AND sprinkled. Up to 10 you should wear rubber-soled shoes.

It's a cool 70 degrees now. Air is clean — industry is out of town and most of it is smokeless textiles. Good looking people. Many colleges. High literacy rate.

This is the last bargain shopping in the Orient. Their fabrics are excellent. A tailored suit cost $80 in wool. Sport coat in synthetic: $50. Shirts made to order, $7. ALL better than Hong Kong or Singapore.

One huge block has nothing but made-in-Korea camping equipment. Excellent stuff at cheap prices. Tourists here are 70 percent Japanese — I walked four hours without seeing a Caucasian face or a sign in English.

Japanese buy the camping gear, go out and climb mountains.

Taxis are cheap. There's no tipping anywhere. Food is like Japanese. Roast beef on the Hotel Choson menu turned out to be a kind of sukiyaki cooked on a hot plate built into the table.

Kimchee — pickled cabbage — is treated like a national monument. Everybody says: "Have you tried Kimchee yet?" So you'd better try it or they'll push it down your throat.

GOOD night clubs with gorgeous girls. No girls allowed in men's room after 10 o'clock. They've got a guard to snatch them out of the elevators. But the night clubs on the roof of the hotels URGE you to hire a hostess at $12 for three hours. The Choson must have fifty of them.

What's wrong with it? Language is a real barrier. NOBODY talks English. No WAY of operating in town restaurants because you can't read the menus. No WAY to talk in stores except the hotels.

BUT — these hostesses speak English. Lock one up to take you around town.

"Should we take cigarettes with us to the Orient?"

Yes, for Japan and Korea. Hong Kong has plenty of our cigarettes at our prices. Korea has a law forbidding Koreans to have foreign cigarettes — a fine of $15 a pack. So it's a BIG status symbol to put American cigarettes on the coffee table and all important Koreans have them. (Sold by GIs from the PX.) They make a good present.

"Is there any place in the Orient where we will need a car?"

You don't need one in Hong Kong. Maybe one day for a drive in the New Territories to the China border. But I'd hire a car and driver. I wouldn't drive in Japan. Tokyo taxi drivers kill each other. You might be a special prize. There aren't any rent cars in Korea.

It's a long haul out here — 17 hours from Los Angeles. An Orient trip should be a month or more. Stopovers (at no extra cost) in Korea and Taiwan. Taipei has the BEST Chinese restaurants in the world. Refugee cooks came from every province so you get EVERY kind of cooking.

Seoul is best for tailoring and silks. Topaz and silver and lacquer work is good and cheap. Taiwan has GREAT teak tables. Beautifully carved. Hong Kong is getting too expensive for their famous tailoring. The reason being the landlords gouge shops for enormous rents. Japan is just too expensive to visit.

This kind of talk blows the Japanese tourist officials out of their minds. They will send you lists of cheaper restaurants and hotels — they do their best. But you probably can't read the menus. And nobody will speak English and all you can find in your pocket phrase book is, "This is a fine view of Mount Fuji."

Conclusion: Korea's absolutely worth the stopover. People SMILE at you — they like you. Prices good. Choson Hotel (the best) $22 single, $27 double. You need a visa. At the Korean Consulate (in San Francisco) the American woman treated me as though I'd walked into her shop wearing a booster coat. But once you get by her, it's a nice country. So, go.

The Hawaii you see is only as good as the tour you see it with.

It takes more than a free lei and a free drink to make a good vacation.

In fact, to really show you the islands, we think it takes all this.

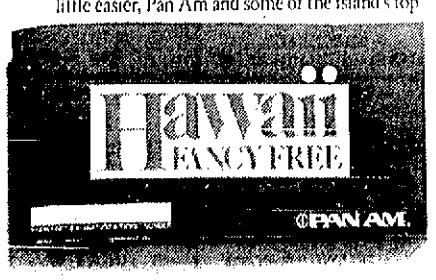

Waikiki One-Wecker, 8 days, $298.

Price includes round trip economy air fare and 8 days and 7 nights at an air-conditioned hotel.

And transfers between airport and hotel and tips to porters. And a Pearl Harbor cruise with transportation to and from hotel. And a travel wallet. And a beach bag. And a Hawaii Pocket Guide.

"Hawaii Fancy Free."

Sometimes it's hard to get your money's worth in a place you've never been. To make it a little easier, Pan Am and some of the island's top restaurants, night spots, and stores have put together this booklet of certificates so you can get two meals for the price of one, free entertainment, free gifts, free greens fees and more.

You can also get a deal on a Chevrolet Vega or similar car with unlimited free mileage on Oahu. You pay $11.95 a day for as many days as you like. Gas, tax and insurance not included. Reserve ahead, or bring your ticket to Budget Rent-A-Car in Honolulu.

If this is the kind of vacation you get for $298, imagine the vacation you'll get for $336 (8 days on 2 islands, Island Combination), $378 (12 days on 3 islands, Hawaii for a Song), and $482 (15 days on 4 islands, Island Kaleidoscope).

In fact, you don't have to imagine. You can ask your travel agent for our free Pan Am's World Hawaii book and find out about all 13 of our Hawaiian vacations.

All tours based on round trip GIT economy fare (not including tax) for groups of 40 or more, which we help you join. If group is not formed we'll try to arrange an alternate date. Hotels based on double occupancy. Reservations must be made at least 7 days in advance.

PAN AM.

GAL-IVANTING

This city's a 'crafty' traveler's dream

By CHORAL PEPPER

Senor Francisco Xavier Silva is a tall man of strong character who works for love. His thing is a tiny park on Plaza de la Bandera in Guadalajara, Mexico.

It is no ordinary park, though. It is an imaginative zoo of sculptured cypress conceived and executed by him alone.

It all began when he was employed in the city as a gardener. When he worked overtime developing this little patch of ground into something that attracted the attention of the community, the city let him move into an underground vault adjoining a pump house that supplies the plaza's fountain so that he could man the fountain and devote full time to his shrubbery zoo.

The city can only afford to pay him for part-time, however, so Senor Silva shines shoes on the side to help meet the expense of supporting his family.

FRAMED by old adobe Colonial houses and ruins that were once the gates to the city, the Plaza de la Bendera zoo features lions, tigers, and elephants along with a few animals that even their sculptor hasn't seen. Each one takes at least five years to form inside of a frame designed to outline the shrub's ultimate shape.

The Plaza lies at the edge of the city where it adjoins the suburb of Tlaquepaque, a place where the city's most exciting shopping takes place.

travel

You may hear that Tlaquepaque has become a tourist trap, but don't believe it. This fascinating craft center has the most interesting and original merchandise that I have found in Mexico.

In fact, one of the most unusual antique shops I have been in anywhere is the Antigua de Mexico located on Independencia in an old summer palace built by a French nobleman during the French Intervention in Mexico. Its former elegance is enhanced by the superb decor and antique displays of its present owners.

In addition to Spanish colonial pieces like a conversation bench, carved armoirs, a great coffee table made of an iron-studded old door ($360), an elaborate carriage dated 1585, shutters painted by primitive artists that make fascinating headboards, and room after room of beautiful light fixtures and furniture, there are paintings by some of Mexico's outstanding artists.

The general manager, Roberto Elias, was educated in the U.S. and speaks English, so ask to see him for special information. Even if you are not interested in buying, visit this wonderful old building that still reflects its romantic past.

ANOTHER interesting shop is Los Kristian on Avenue Juarez. This is a good place to take your husband first because the proprietors, a husband and wife team, meet you at the door with a tray full of margueritas to put him in a buying mood.

Los Kristian specialize in original fashions designed by Senora Kristian, ceramics and paintings done by her husband and hand made rugs of vibrant yarns that are made in their studio from their own designs.

Her stunning long skirts with tops of hand-painted fabrics run about $60; rugs from about $150, and the ceramic sculptures overcoated with metal from $15. This technique for treating ceramic is most interesting. Their figures look far more expensive than they are.

Other ceramics are marketed at the Tlaquepaque Regional Ceramic Museum opposite the big glass factory on Independencia. Displays here feature all of the typical types from nearby villages. Not only has each village its own distinctive style, but no two pieces are alike, even when made by the same artisan.

IN THE center of the village, or suburb, is Parian Court filled with sidewalk cafes under shady porticos. This is the place for a beer or cup of coffee while you listen to strolling mariachis crying their Mexican "blues."

On Sunday evenings, the promenade takes place, with girls and boys circling the plaza in opposite directions in order to stimulate a little romance. It has to be "little" because always the chaperone sits nearby with watchful eyes.

Although I enthusiastically recommend a city tour of Guadalajara for orientation and background information, when you go to Tlaquepaque, go without a guide. No matter what they tell you, shopkeepers feel obligated to take care of them later and it is you who pay the price.

As for a city tour, Hecht Travel Service has the most informed guides. Try to get Senor De la Rosa if you can. He is an excellent driver, speaks flawless English and is brilliantly informed.

See Sequoia – with reservations

THE SENTINEL TREE, SEQUOIA PARK

travel

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Staff Writer

"Come to Sequoia and Kings Canyon National Parks," ads and commercials for the two Central Sierra resorts urge, "and find peace and tranquility missing today from urban living."

But at a recent press briefing in the parks, officials warned of a special need this season for advance reservations at most, if not all, privately owned and operated lodges and cabins dotting the twin mountain playgrounds.

Crowds numerically greater than existing public camping facilities would be turned away, rangers cautioned, adding that for the first time, reservations may be needed for at least two of these campsites in the Sequoia, Lodgepole and Dorst areas. These exceedingly popular locales are 21 and 29 miles, respectively, uphill from the southern entry port at Ash Mountain.

Come to Sequoia-Kings Canyon and find peace, tranquility—and bumper turnouts of nature lovers, tourists and just plain vacationers in search of something new. Contradictory statements? Not really.

LARGE CROWDS long have visited a playground only 240 miles and four easy driving hours from Long Beach. Thus was it ever in the memory of oldtimers, even in a time when thoughts of potential gasoline shortages never crossed a carefree vacationer's mind.

Now, with a gnawing fear that fuel supplies suddenly could diminish, leaving the unwary stranded far too many miles from home, the parks now are putting on a major campaign to attract Californians. It's the same situation at every Southland resort, including the Queen Mary here, places where today they're updating an old phrase by changing a few critical words to make it read: "Keep California Green—Stay in Your Home State and Spend Money."

EVEN IF autos should line up bumper to bumper, however, peace and tranquility still may be found within its 1,300-plus square miles of gray granite mountain peaks, deep canyons and magnificent forests.

The trick, of course, is to break away from the mob-if there is one-to indulge in pleasurable short walks or longer hikes along marked trails. With something less than 100 paved miles of highway, true wilderness abounds and may be reached without excessive difficulties.

Major attractions, the General Sherman sequoia tree, largest living thing in the world, and the General Grant, second in size only to the first giant, are readily accessible by auto.

With a minimum of effort, as recalled by a sedentary reporter who just made the course, are the Moro Rock climb with its panoramic view from the crest of the really High Sierra country, and on a clear day, the great Central Valley or the Coast Range itself; and Roaring River Falls high in Kings Canyon.

EARLY SUMMER usually is considered the finest time to explore these natural paths and trails; but don't forget autumn, when the forests of dogwood, quaking aspen and oak flame with brilliant seasonal colors, or winter, when snow blankets the area and neophyte skiers flock to gently rolling Wolverton Resort to learn a skill.

Both Sequoia and Kings Canyon feature a wide assortment of outdoor activities off the beaten trail: Back-packing trips along marked trails; hiking over 900 miles of self-guiding paths; fishing for trout in well-stocked lakes and streams, horseback riding; naturalist-guided trips to important scenic points; campfire programs featuring illustrated talks by Park Service rangers and more.

Available in both parks are overnight accomodations ranging from primitive to near-luxurious. The National Park Service itself maintains more than 1,300 free campsites with at least minimal water and sanitary facilities. Although there is a small daily charge for visiting and using the parks, there presently is no fee for camping.

WATCH CONGRESS for later developments; a bill now under Congressional consideration could levy such a fee.

Sequoia and Kings Canyon Hospitality Service, one segment in the privately-owned Government Service, Inc. organization, operates lodgings on a scale descending from deluxe cottages or motel units to rustic cabins and finally to the most basic, woodstove-equipped units. Double occupancy rates range from $22.50 to $9 daily.

A special toll-free number, 800-742-2070, is available until Sept. 15 to contact the private entrepreneurs. The park superintendent may be reached for further information on non-commercial activities at National Park Headquarters, Three Rivers, Cal. 93271.

THE ISLAND PRINCESS

Comfort for all seasons

What the Astrodome is to Houston, the Island Princess is to Alaska cruising.

Princess Cruises' 600-passenger luxury ship is equipped with all of the latest innovations. One that is particularly significant while cruising north to Canada Alaska, is a huge convertible glass dome that, with the push of a button, slides over the main pool area on the ship's "Sun-Deck" in cool weather.

With the dome cover and the heat lamps on, passengers can bask and swim in a tropical atmosphere while viewing passing glaciers and snow-capped mountains.

The Island Princess, which is the only ship cruising to Alaska with this facility, will make 11 sailings north this summer. Ports of call are Victoria and Vancouver in British Columbia, and Ketchikan, Juneau, Skagway, Haines, Glacier Bay and Sitka in Alaska.

For those interested in combining a cruise on the Island Princess with more extensive land arrangements in Alaska, Princess Tours, the tour division of Princess Cruises, offers attractive sea-land-air packages.

Full information on Alaska cruises and tours can be obtained from travel agents or Princess Cruises, 3435 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90010.

Across the border

Many American motorists will drive to Canada this summer and will find our neighbor to the north one of the easiest and most pleasant foreign countries to enter and visit.

According to the National Automobile Club, citizens or permanent residents of the United States are not required to have visas or passports and can cross the border without delay. However, here are a few tips that should be kept in mind:

In order to assist Canadian immigration officers, native-born U. S. citizens should carry with them their birth certificate, their voter registration certificate, or similar identification showing their citizenship in order to speed their crossing. Naturalized U. S. citizens should have their naturalization certificate handy just in case they are asked for it.

Permanent U. S. residents who are not citizens are welcome in Canada as well. It is advisable though, for permanent residents to have their alien registration receipt card with them during their Canadian stay.

The similarities in Hawaiian vacations end with the price.

A $378 Hawaiian vacation is as good as ours only if it gives you all this.

PENNY-WISE TRAVELER

Budget inns include a variety of sins

By JANE MORSE

travel

My good instincts should have snapped to attention the instant I spotted the "no refunds" sign at Kelly's Motel in Phoenix, but no, they slumbered on.

Did a little voice say, "Go look at the room before you leap"? No, it said, "Let's hurry. I'm hungry." Did I ask any questions at all about my $10 room with TV and air conditioner? Oh, no, destiny's kid was happy to bestow the sunshine of her smile and full payment in advance.

Well, there are times you get what you deserve, and what I got was a particularly cheerless room, frayed at all edges and smelly. There was an air conditioner, all right, but my hosts forgot to tell me it didn't work.

If I could pass the blame I would, but there's almost no excuse these days for buying your way into a four-star disaster like Kelly's when there's so much good stuff available at the lowest priced end of the accommodations line.

FROM SEA to shining sea (except for New York and a few other major cities), budget motels are the hottest things in inn keeping today — a trend accelerated by rising prices everywhere. There are now upwards of 50 budget motel chains, some old, some new, many of them astonishingly good.

How do you find them? Well, not the way I went about it in Phoenix. The term "budget motel" covers a multitude of inns, some offering fewer frills than others. But if you use your head, you can land something like the Imperial 400 Motel I stayed at in El Paso. It was so good I still don't believe it; but I had done my homework and knew some of the things to expect.

I was a fly-in rather than a drive-in customer, so the motel paid my taxi fare from — and later back to — the airport. When I signed in, the motherly clerk sweetly asked if I was traveling on business. When I said yes, she announced (without further questioning) that my room would be $9 instead of $11 — and then, for temporary lack of anything smaller, assigned me to an immaculate jumbo room with two double beds.

THE BATHROOM had both tub and shower, soap bars and soap powder; there was color TV, wall-to-wall shag carpeting, good lights, large mirrors, paper shoe shiners, facial tissues, matches, plastic glasses, ice bucket, chest with four drawers and considerable counter space, two chairs and "blackout" curtains at the windows.

A notice said that all local phone calls were 20 cents (boo!) but there was 24-hour direct dial service to stave off nighttime panic (rah!).

There was also free coffee, same-day pressing, laundry and dry cleaning, a discount at the restaurant next door and vending machines that ground out almost everything but diapers. And all mine for a mere $9.

SO GOES the nation? Obviously not entirely. There are variations in quality and sometimes variations in price even within the same chain. The currently classic definition of budget motel is an inn with single rates of under $10 a night and up to four persons for $1 to $3 apiece more.

Motel 6, the West Coast trailblazer chain that began it all, still charges only $6.95 a night for one person, one bed, only $12.95 for four persons, two beds. However, there's been some upward movement, and outfits like Imperial 400 now have singles all the way to $18, with fewer and fewer at the old bottom $11 rate.

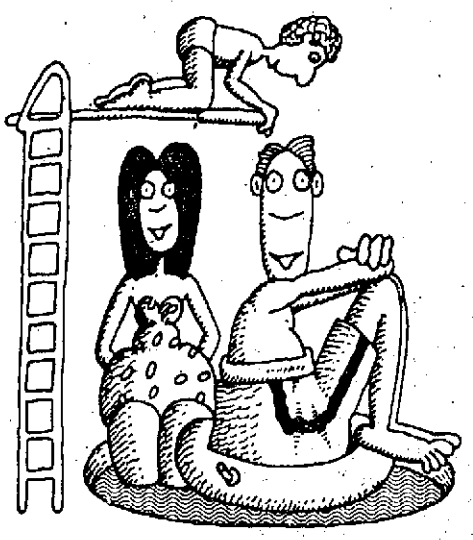

Never mind. Along with Motel 6, you can still generally count on such biggies as Days Inn, Econo-Travel, Chalet Suisse, Regal 8 and Scottish Inns to stay well under the $10 mark everywhere. Days Inn, Scottish Inns and Econo-Travel also have centralized reservations systems with toll-free 800 numbers.

The others tend to count on customers contacting the individual motel where they want to stay at their own expense. Some also cut overhead by declining credit cards and taking only cash.

IT'S IN the itsy-bitsy department, though, that the customers can see how they cut. While for the most part crisply clean and generally well maintained, even some of the kingpins have rooms that are small and sparsely furnished. Locations may be less than wonderful. If there's a pool, it may not be heated but will most certainly be small.

Luxurious lobbies are nonexistent, and restaurants, though usually "next door," could be well beyond. Motel 6, for one, has kept showers but done away with tubs and offers black-and-white TV — at 25 cents for two hours. Bellhops and room service are nowhere to be had, and a few places have phones connected to switchboards that close down at bedtime. Some will charge extra for cribs; others have no rollaways.

So what do you need to live and what can't you get along without? You can do vastly better getting what you want if you ask questions ahead of time. Put them in the same letter in which you ask a budget chain to send you its directory. Yes, they almost all have them, though once you're on the road check for more options because new units break out almost as fast as kids with measles.

$517,252 refund demanded

Misuse charge surprises school chief

By MIKE JELF
Staff Writer

The man who heads special education in Long Beach schools said Saturday he was surprised and perplexed by the release of an audit report which said the district should refund to the federal government $517,252 of compensatory education funds which allegedly were misused.

Dr. Robert N. Hart, supervisor of compensatory education for the Long Beach Unified School District, said he hadn't seen a copy of the report which was released Friday, and therefore was hampered in trying to answer its allegations.

The report was one of several done on California school districts by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW). The aim of HEW was to see how well the state had administered money for education of disadvantaged children under Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

On Monday, HEW released an audit report which said the Pasadena school district should refund $356,429 of Title I funds because of claimed irregularities similar to those listed in the Long Beach audit.

Release of the Long Beach audit was "quite a surprise to me," Dr. Hart said, and accounts of the audit in Saturday newspapers left him perplexed.

For example, he said, the report claimed $220,320 was spent for facilities which weren't used for disadvantaged children.

"Title I equipment was located at non-Title I activities even though it was needed at target schools," the report said, going on to claim 11 of 18 bungalows bought with Title I money weren't being used for Title I students.

On the contrary, Dr. Hart said, "I do know all of our bungalows are used at ESEA Title I schools."

During the four years of the audit period, which ended Aug. 31, 1972, the Long Beach district received about $5 million in Title I money, the report said.

However, the report continued, use of about $4.5 million wasn't adequately accounted for, and some of that money, in addition to the $517,252 already noted, may also have to be refunded after the federal government gets complete records.

A major charge of the audit report was that money earmarked for low-achieving students benefited children who didn't meet federal eligibility requirements under Title I.

For example, the report said, $296,932 was spent for construction and remodeling of facilities to provide integrated programs at several Long Beach schools.

Money also was spent for operations, transportation of pupils, and equipment in connection with these programs, the report said.

However, the audit report claimed, in both cases children not qualified for Title I assistance took part and benefited from the programs.

Whether the allegedly misued money must be refunded depends upon a decision by U.S. Education Commisioner Terell Bell.

There was one part of the news accounts of the audit which he fully understood and with which he agreed, Dr. Hart said.

That was the section which mentioned that children in the district's programs for disadvantaged children achieved at nearly twice the rate of those not in the programs. "Our youngsters have really achieved fine growth," he said.

Serving vital need

Day care centers 'grow up'

By ROBERT GORE
Staff Writer

Day care centers for ABC school district youngsters are beginning to grow up, according to Early Childhood Education program officials.

The need for centers to serve the school-age and preschool children of working single-parent families is a long-standing one.

For example, Cerritos, the major city served by ABC, has a full 30 per cent of its population at age 12 or under.

ABC, like Long Beach and Paramount, offers day care facilities for preschool children and extended day care for school-age children.

The idea, explains Dr. Helen Fried, ECE chief, is to enable poverty level mothers and fathers to be trained for an occupation or to get a job and to keep it.

The road to child care services has not been a smooth one for ABC, and the bumps are not yet over.

The district is awaiting word from the state on a grant application for an infant care center at El Dorado High School. There, teen mothers would learn how to care for their infants under the close supervision of certificated staff, she said.

A day care center just finished its move to new headquarters at Artesia High School. The state-funded center accommodates 45 children and teaches the high school students about the world of children.

The center, according to Miss Fried, began in October, 1973, in a cramped classroom with six chairs and two tables.

Another center for parents enrolled at Cerritos College is open at Neimes Elementary School and a center will open this fall at Gahr High School, although the Regional Occupational Program will sponsor that one, she said.

Long Beach, according to ECE Director Helene Rose, has offered day care since 1946 "when husbands went off to war and wives went to work in the factories."

Fifteen extended day care centers and 11 nursery schools are now open, Mrs. Rose said.

"Every activity has an educational objective," Mrs. Rose said, "the centers have a fully scheduled day leading to regular school curriculum."

Talks also are underway with Lakewood to open a center at a park, "but nothing has been approved yet," she said.

Miss Laura Rigo, the director of the center at Artesia, said that four teachers and one aide watch the 45 pupils. The center has a capacity of 100, but is only funded for 45 with an $86,000 grant, she said.

An active parent group is organizing fund-raising projects in order to pay for playground equipment, Miss Rigo said.

The young pupils, ranging from 3 to 5 years old, receive instruction in premath, prereading, cultural areas and science projects. They also visit high school music classes and athletic events, she said. The center was funded under an innovative grant in order to serve as an observation point for high school students. The program administrators were delighted when males began to take the "Child and Its World" class.

Miss Fried said that the five years of work it took to get the centers in the district were worth the effort.

"When the state evaluator saw our centers," she said, "he was ecstatic."

100-plus 'guinea pigs' try to reverse heart deficiencies

By RALPH HINMAN Jr.
Staff Writer

In fire engine-red track suits emblazoned with garish Valentine hearts, we 100-plus middle-aged volunteers probably resemble hilarious caricatures of Superman as weekly we walk, jog or bike around Rancho Los Amigos Hospital's green and spacious grounds in Downey.

It's serious business, though, for all these tall or short, lean, fat, gaunt, paunchy, gray or balding guys who survived what primly is labeled "premature coronary heart disease." Sometime between the ages of 40 and 49, we each suffered a medically provable case of myocardial infarction, an "M. I." in the jargon.

Now, through regular weekly sessions at Rancho, we guinea pigs — who have nothing to lose and everything to gain — systematically attempt to accomplish what once was considered impossible. With exercise and diet, as prescribed in a federally funded, USC medical school-directed and county hospital-based research project, an effort is being made to halt or — given any luck at all — reverse the usually inevitable course of coronary deterioration.

"We should have some definite data in another year," Dr. Ronald H. Selvester, wearer of three medical hats, commented last week in Long Beach after a presentation to cardiac service staff physicians at Memorial Medical Center.

"Please don't overstate or exaggerate this point," cautiously continued the project codirector, chief of cardiology at Rancho and USC professor of medicine. "But, clearly, the key here is in the collateral circulation...and that's what this study is all about."

Although the heart's internal blood supply generally travels though three coronary arteries, there is, in addition, a network of smaller vessels crisscrossing the vital organ. When an attack occurs, this smaller collateral system often — if the victim is lucky — substitutes for newly pinched off main arteries.

Regular sustained exercise is believed by some physicians to be a significant factor in developing this larger, stronger, life-saving collateral system. Which was Selvester's point: It's precisely what his 100-plus volunteers are attempting to determine through controlled exercise and diet.

The study group is dubbed "USC SCOR," for the Southland university now operating under government contract— one of about two dozen "Scientific Centers Of Research" across the continent. Although difficult to document there are those who firmly believe SCOR was one of President Lyndon B. Johnson's final legislative acts, creating and funding a research program to systematically delve into causes of heart disease, the nation's largest killer.

Other aspects of heart disease are being studied at UCLA, Stanford and UC Berkeley, along with additional selected medical schools across the nation. Perhaps in this decade, some observers predict, a giant computer in Washington or perhaps at one of the participating campuses will pull together all interrelated findings and spew forth some definitive answers, possibly a cure for this modern scourge.

Meanwhile, the USC study focuses primarily on exercise, diet and weight, and, in Selvester's view, is shaping preliminary answers while awaiting the final answer.

One of these could spell new hope for thousands of cardiac victims who, through lack of detailed knowledge, beleieve they must lead sheltered and restricted lives. Early evidence from evaluations of 94 SCOR participants indicates that not all who suffered a myocardial infarction received permanent artery damage.

Presence of "Infarcts (narrowing of arteries caused by lesions within them) do not necessarily mean (irreversible) coronary disease has occured," Selvester said.

Or, as SCOR tests often reveal, a heart victim may have suffered a smaller degree of damage than first believed.

The key in making these determinations, Dr. Selvester pointed out, is a sophisticated combination of tests, among them cardiac catherization, in which X-ray motion pictures of the heart in action are taken, and a femoral angiogram, using Jet Propulsion Laboratory-developed techniques, which looks inside the leg's largest artery and measures how far the artery-narrowing disease has progressed, and others.

Two days and nights of testing at Rancho are required before Selvester and his team can "sketch" a profile of the survivor's heart action.

As part of this study, Selvester and codirector Dr. David H. Blankenhorn, with colleagues Drs. Paul K. Hanashiro, Miguel E. Sanmarco and H.P. Chin, have evaluated and reported on risk factors in coronary disease.

Cigarette smoking ranked highest as a risk factor, followed by a family history of coronary disease, followed by borderline diabetes, overweight, high levels of certain blood chemicals such as triglicerides and cholesterol along with elevated blood pressure.

"Although the prevalence of heavy smoking was highest," the researchers reported, "it was always observed in combination with other risk factors. This was also the case for the family history of coronary artery disease, hypertension (high blood pressure) and overweight.

"Thus," it was concluded, "no one factor was an overriding one with most patients having multiple risk factors in varying combinations."

For at least a year, SCOR participants ("SCORcards" might be an appropriate name) must follow a regimen set by the staff: Cut the weight, quit smoking, watch for cholesterol—and triglicerides—heavy foods (forget about eggs and shrimp and other such goodies) and exercise, always exercise.

There will be quarterly stress tests on treadmills or stationary bikes through the year. Progress will be charted.

But that's all preliminary to the "main event." What's important is the second (and succeeding) year's detailed exam. Will improvements, deterioration or merely a no-change situation be recorded when that snakelike catheter leaves your heart?

It's the big question for SCOR people. And many of us now are nearing that crucial first replay.

Local officials eye revenue sources

By LARRY LYNCH
Staff Writer

After the federal revenue-sharing experiment, what's next? A new round of federal meddling? Or will the spigot dry up altogether?

These were questions local-government executives tossed back and forth Friday in a seminar at Long Beach State University.

There were few solid predictions, because too much depends on elections this fall and in two years.

The consensus was that the federal government is likely to begin tying a few more strings to its money, but revenue sharing will probably continue in a form that puts more responsibility in the hands of local officials than the categorical grants of the 1960s ever did.

Discussion at the seminar on "Survival of Local Governments in an Unstable Economy" centered as much on insights that are coming into play as on predicting what is to come.

Gaylord Knapp, the city manager of Cerritos, suggested that whatever new rules come along, the more aggressive and better-run cities are likely to do well.

For example, Knapp said, "With the Better Communities Act still under consideration, I know of some cities with just under 50,000 population that are already talking to the Local Agency Formation Commission about areas they can annex."

The Better Communities Act is expected to provide block grants to cities to initiate projects in generally defined areas—like housing or urban renewal—but only for cities with 50,000 or more population.

At Friday's conference, both federal and local officials said they expect the trend in revenue sharing to be toward more emphasis on such block grants and less on the across-the-board, no-strings aid.

While implying that Cerritos would do all right, no matter what, Knapp was strongly critical of proposals to equalize sources of revenue. For example, he said, recent court decisions aimed at equalizing school financing on a per capita basis could encourage a similar move on the state sales tax.

Sales taxes are now returned to the cities on the basis of where the sales are generated, and Cerritos with its large new shopping center has jumped out ahead of other cities in use of this revenue source.

"We think this is because of our good planning and willingness to invest in streets and related improvements," Knapp noted.

He urged that effective city management not be penalized.

With equalization "we would become a have-not city," he said.

Knapp and fellow city manager William Kraus of Norwalk helped lead a panel discussion on trade-offs in revenue sharing and taxes. Both were critical of the bureaucratic waste inherent in routing tax monies through the federal government.

"Maybe revenue sharing is nothing more than another way of getting 10 cents back on the dollar," Kraus said.

Later Knapp added, however, that it is important that federal revenue sharing continue at its existing level because the federal government will find another way to spend the money if not.

Richard Nevins, a member of the State Board of Equalization, suggested that the federal income tax may not be all it is considered in terms of fairness. The tax falls most heavily on salaried, middle-income persons, he observed.

Sales and property taxes may be more progressive than has been thought because the rich can't avoid them, he suggested.

Nevins urged cities and counties to look to local sources for revenue rather than to the federal government.

"Cities have raised their standards as to what they think their functions are and what their services should be," Nevins said. "There is no evidence local sources (of revenue) are declining. They will gain with inflation. And there is no widespread revolt of taxpayers against the current tax level."

He cited the state's exemption for senior-citizen home owners as one way of making the property tax fair.

"My friends in Congress tell me that revenue sharing will survive in some form...(but) general revenue sharing has a doubtful future. I believe California is an island in the sea and can stand alone. The state could survive and survive comfortably without revenue sharing."

Experts disagreed on whether revenue sharing is producing more reponsibility in leaders at the local level.

"It remains to be seen whether local and state officials truly welcome and can stand the test of making hard decisions," Graham Watt, the director of the U.S. Office of Revenue Sharing, said.

Louis Garcia of the League of California Cities noted that there have been some breakthroughs. City and county officials are cooperating as they never have before, he said. One reason is that several federal programs have offered the local entities 10 per cent more money if they would pool some projects.

Manager recommending 8% L.B. salary boosts

Salary increases for the 4,700 Long Beach city employes which average 8 per cent and which will cost taxpayers $4,872,430 will be recommended Tuesday to the City Council by City Manager John R. Mansell.

Agreements on the pay hikes for the 1974-75 fiscal year have been reached with all employe organizations except the Police Officers Association, which numbers about 650 officers, Mansell said.

The city manager has recommended an increase of 7 per cent, effective July 1, plus 2 per cent on Jan. 1, for the police officers — the same raise he has proposed for firemen.

Councilmen have scheduled a special meeting Thursday at 9 a.m. in the City Hall council chamber to hear presentations from employe organizations relative to salaries, and the Police Officers Association is expected to make such a presentation.

For nearly 3,000 of the city's 4,700 workers, Mansell has recommended a pay raise of 8.1 per cent, effectuve July 1. Job categories covered range from custodian to assistant superintendents of the various departmetal divisions and from typist-clerk to the executive secretary to the mayor and City Council.

Other recommended increases range from 5.4 per cent on July 1 plus 2.7 per cent on Jan. 1 to a combination of 18.9 per cent on July 1 plus 2.7 per cent Jan. 1. These involve comparatively few employes, however. The 18.9-2.7 combination, for example, is for one job only, housing negotiator.

Mansell said his staff and the Department of Personnel and Employe Relations held numerous meetings with various employe groups on their proposals for wage hikes before making a final determination on his recommendations.

"This year the city has reached final and bilateral agreements with approximately 4,100 of the city's 4,700 employes," Mansell said.

He said letters of intent have been signed and exchanged between the city and Long Beach Fire Fighters Local 372, the Long Beach Lifeguards and the Long Beach City Employes Association.

The CEA included major sub-group representatives of engineers, building inspectors, clerical employes, crafts and trades, white-collar employes, professionals and blue-collar employes, the city manager said.

"The expanded involvement by employes this year has resulted in more information of better quality being reviewed, with attendant salary adjustments being reflected in these recommendations," Mansell said in his letter to the council.

The recommendations are subject to confirmation by the City Council.

On being snookered

Assistant Atty. Gen. Henry E. Petersen supervised the early Justice Department handling of the Watergate break-in — and let matters drop with convictions of the men who were caught in the act.

When Sen. Sam Ervin suggested to him that he should have looked deeper into the case, Petersen exploded. "You are being unfair," he said. "You have to give us a break."

"Get your sweet disposition back," Ervin urged.

"I don't have a sweet disposition when my integrity is questioned," Petersen responsded.

NONE OF US does. But it was not necessarily Petersen's integrity that was in question. At question was Petersen's canniness as an experienced criminal prosecutor.

While deploring Ervin's "God-like hindsight," Petersen appeared to admit his gullibility himself.

"You know something?" he asked Ervin and answered his own question: "We were snookered."

AT A minimum, that was the case. And Petersen was not the first to recognize it.

When James McCord Jr., one of the original Watergate defendants, asked to speak to Judge John Sirica he wrote to the judge to say:

"Since I cannot feel confident in talking with an FBI agent, in testifying before a grand jury whose U.S. attorneys work for the Department of Justice . . . such a discussion with you would be of assistance to me."

Maybe Petersen would have believed McCord rather than the aides at the Committee for the Re-election of the President. But the record is clear that Petersen had no spectacular ability to sniff out lying.

"Do you mean did we accept the lies of all those people who lied?" was the way Petersen rephrased a question Ervin put to him. And he answered it by saying "I guess we did."

NO WONDER McCord was skeptical. No wonder Ervin was skeptical.

No wonder, either, that Petersen was angry. But surely part of his anger was directed inward — at his own failure to perceive that those bright young men with their impeccably polished shoes and manners were snookering him all the while.

An ethical act upheld

Los Angeles reporter William Farr spent 46 days in jail without telling the judge who sent him there what he wanted to know.

Judge Charles Older had cited Farr for contempt of court and jailed him. Farr would get out, the judge said, only when he disclosed which attorneys in the Manson murder trial had provided him with copies of a statement made by a woman who was to be called as a witness. Farr had told the judge he got the statement from two attorneys who were covered by a court order barring them from furnishing such material to the press.

AFTER A SERIES of court actions, Los Angeles County Superior Court Judge William H. Levit noted that 46 days in jail didn't break Farr's determination, as a matter of moral principle, not to reveal his sources. Sending Farr back to jail indefinitely would not coerce him into violating his ethical responsibility to the men to whom he made his promise and to his profession, Judge Levit concluded, although Farr remains subject to a possible five-day jail term and $500 fine as "punishment" for violating the court order to disclose the attorneys' names.

The judge noted that the uncontradicted testimony of Jack Nelson of the Los Angeles Times Washington bureau, of Walter Cronkite of CBS News, and of Thomas Brokaw, NBC's White House correspondent, was that the ethical principle involved — that a newsman must never betray a promise of confiedentiality — "is a widely held and deeply felt responsibility of professonal journalists."

We have reservations about the professional judgment that led Farr to publish a story based on hearsay information he should have known was unlikely to be allowed in court as evidence — as indeed it was not.

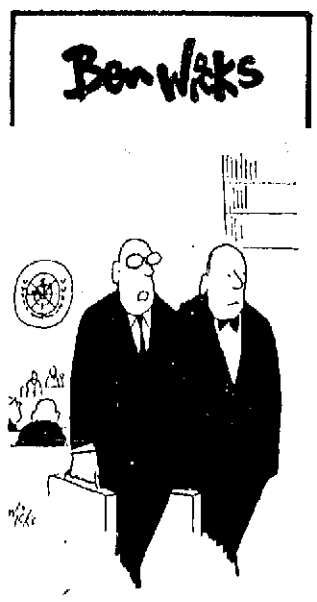

With the wisdom of hindsight, it is easy to see that Farr should not have told Judge Older that the information came from persons who had been specifically ordered by the court not to divulge it. If Farr had done that, under California's newsmen's shield law Judge Older would have had no basis for a contempt citation.

BUT WE SHARE the pride of American journalists generally that Farr remained true to a principle that is a cornerstone of freedom of the press and of the public's right to be informed. We are pleased, too, that apparently no journalist of reputation could be found to deny the validity of the principle.

As Judge Levit noted, "there is an established articulated moral principle in the newsman's profession that once a newsman has made an assurance of confidentiality to a news source he has an ethical responsibility to his profession and to his source to honor his promise, even in the face of a valid court order to the contrary."

A JOURNALIST should not offer the pledge of confidentiality lightly. But he must offer it sometimes if he is to do effective investigative reporting. When he does offer it, he should keep it.

The Farr case demonstrates that when he does he will at worst not have to spend a lifetime in prison as punishment.

'Now to get a buffer zone between the White House and Washington Post.'

Are our legislators underpaid?

SACRAMENTO — Big story last week about the generous pensions legislators get. Particularly those legislators whose retirement might not be entirely voluntary, because of reapportionment.

Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, the story stated, will get $691 a month for life, starting in January. He is now 38 years of age, so if the about-to-be-ex-speaker lives his three-score-and-ten, the total will be $265,344.

THAT IS, to be sure, not bad.

It is the easiest thing in the world to whoop and holler every time the lawmakers vote themselves a pay increase, and people do whoop and holler so the lawmakers rarely do it. Instead, they put the money at the other end, receivable after they leave politics.

They do it that way because retirement benefits attract less attention than pay increases, and they are more than a little timid about stirring up the folks back home.

BUT SOMEWHERE along the line, the folks back home should ponder whether their complaints about legislators' salaries are justified.

Starting in December, legislators' salaries will be $21,200 a year. The figure is now $19,200.

There are other sums involved. Each legislator gets $30 a day for expenses, which adds up to something like $8,000 a year, tax free. Each is provided a car which costs the state $225 a month, or another $2,700 a year, plus a gasoline credit card, which costs taxpayers an average of $50 a month, or $600 yearly.

Next year, then, a legislator will get $21,200 in taxable salary, plus about $11,300 in tax-free expenses and transportation value.

DOES THAT add up to a lot of money? Not really.

First of all, legislators are required by law to maintain a residence in their district. For some, their district residence is their actual home and their Sacramento "home" is a hotel room or a small apartment. For others, their Sacramento residence is their actual home and they maintain an abode in the district simply to comply with the law.

Either way, two residences must be maintained, and that is a personal cost.

Balancing that, however, is the fact that a legislator's expenses over a year's time are not as great as those of other people in the $30,000 income range.

HE DOES NOT always buy his own meals. He does not always pay for services. If he moves, for instance, the moving or trucking industry might cover the cost. If he buys a boat or a television set or a case of wine, chances are he gets a pretty good deal on the transaction.

Jess Unruh once said the value of the total benefits received by a legislator is about $150,000 a year. That is high, by three times at least, most legislators will argue.

But for the moment ignore all of the above. How much should a person receive who, in essence, shares in the direction of an enterprise with yearly operating costs in excess of $10 billion?

The legislature should find a way to have the value of the services expected of them assessed. Civil service employes have their jobs compared to private sector jobs when salaries are set. Perhaps legislators and members of the executive branch should be subject to the same comparisons.

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

IF THE SURVEY indicates that an equivalent position of responsibility in the private sector pays $50,000 or $60,000 a year, perhaps that is the salary legislators should receive.

Then the restrictions of a Proposition 9 can be vigorously applied. Even tighter restrictions can be imposed.

No outside income allowed, except from investments open to public view and, perhaps, speaking engagements.

NO GIFTS from lobbyists or commercial enterprises having an interest in legislation.

It should not be big news that a legislator gets $691 a month for life, starting at age 38, when he leaves the legislature after 10 years' service. It is, and should be, news that legislators lean on lobbyists for any reason other than the obtaining of information or positions of the interests represented. The present salary structure might have something to do with that.

Kissinger fears tough inquiry

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Dr. Henry A. Kissinger's emotional threat to resign as secretary of state has many earmarks of a clever play to force a formal vote on his integrity in the friendly Senate Foreign Relations Committee before the question comes before a less friendly committee.

The secretary of state knows he may never be in a better position to force the issue than in the wake of his phenomenal diplomatic victories in the Middle East.

HE ALSO realizes his vulnerability to criticism concerning his testimony about his role in wiretapping of government employes and newsmen.

The results which may follow from incomplete testimony are shown dramatically in the case of former Attorney General Richard Kleindienst, who entered a plea of guilty after failing to answer fully the questions of the Senate Judiciary Committee in his confirmation hearings.

Kleindienst's misrepresentations and misstatements, made in April 1972, were all but forgotten until the question came up on the fringe of the Watergate investigations by Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski.

In his Senate testimony, Kleindienst left the impression his only contact with the White House concerning the ITT antitrust case had been with Special Assistant Peter Flanigan.

Senator Marlow Cook, R-Ky., had said, "As I recall there was no discussion concerning the (ITT) report other than perfunctory remarks regarding delivery and an expression of appreciation for the assistance rendered to Mr. (Assistant Attorney General Richard) McLaren?

Kleindienst said, "Yes."

IN ALL HIS replies, Kleindienst overlooked very pointed discussions in which President Nixon protested McLaren's actions on the ITT antitrust matter. These discussions were hardly ones Kleindienst would have forgotten, for they caused him to threaten to resign as deputy attorney general.

Some members of the special prosecutor's staff believed Kleindienst should have been prosecuted for perjury for failing to relate the involvement of President Nixon in the ITT controversy.

Kleindienst initially had felt protected in the controversy by his friendly relationship with Judiciary Committee Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss. However, he saw that protection collapse under a three-way pressure from the House Judiciary Committee, the Senate Watergate committee and Special Prosecutor Jaworski.

THIS IS not unlike the current position of Dr. Kissinger, who already has made an explanation on his wiretapping note that satisfied his friend, Chairman William Fulbright, D-Ark. But that involvement is now coming in for closer scrutiny in several other forums.

At the request of the Nixon administration, Chairman Fulbright locked up the transcripts, of Dr. Kissinger's latest "clarifications" on his knowledge of the activities of David Young, a former National Security Council staff member and a member of the notorious "plumbers" of the Ellsberg break-in case.

UNTIL THE House Judiciary Committee started investigating the questionable domestic surveillance practices, documentary evidence relevant to Dr. Kissinger's purported contradictions remained buried in the Foreign Relations Committee safe, the FBI files and in State Department records directly under Mr. Kissinger's control.

The central question on Dr. Kissinger's integrity does not involve the legality of the wiretap or whether it was justified for stopping security leaks. The main question is: Did Dr. Kissinger, under oath in his confirmation hearings, deliberately misrepresent or misstate his role and responsibility for 17 specific wiretaps?

THERE IS no doubt that he seeks to avoid any role of "initiative" and picture himself as only "going along" as a conduit between President Nixon and the late J. Edgar Hoover.

In what Dr. Kissinger has referred to as "the poisonous" atmosphere created by Watergate, the secretary of state had seen that even a Cabinet officer might be held accountable for misstatements at some future time.

RATHER THAN take a chance with serious damage from the Senate Watergate committee, the House Judiciary Committee, Special Prosecutor Jaworski or in one of the several trials in which he may become involved, Dr. Kissinger chose an early showdown when his reputation was at its peak.

Members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee are friendly to Dr. Kissinger and flattered by the special attention he gives them from his celebrity pinnacle as a Nobel prize winner and diplomat par excellence in foreign affairs.

Add to that the record of past reluctance of the committee to do the kind of tough investigations that deal with foreign aid frauds and other scandals and it is easy to see why Dr. Kissinger demanded an early investigation by that group.

Letters to the editor

Political humor

EDITOR:

I am writing in response to a letter from Samuel LeBow of Long Beach printed in the June 11 Press-Telegram. I take umbrage at his statement that your paper has "a very insenstive and unappreciative readership."

It so happens that I have been making a humorous political scrapbook, which contains cartoons, articles, Graffiti, etc. Most of these have come from your paper. I find that I have 12 cartoons done by Wallmeyer. I have many others by Wicks.

Mr. LeBow contends that yours is strictly a Republican paper. I had though it to be Democratic! (For a long time, I thought my favorite "man in Washington," Del Clawson, was a Democrat; he got quite a kick out of that.)

In my scrapbook of political humor I have articles written by Arthur Hoppe, Russell Baker, James Reston, George Robeson, Erma Bombeck, Arnold Sawislak of UPI, Tedd Thomey and many short paragraphs written by Earl Wilson and Sydney Harris — and one clever comment made in "Dear Abby." There are even several letters to the editor. All of these articles and letters agree with my own personal Democratic thinking.

May I suggest that Mr. LeBow take a second look. I'm sure he has no idea of what he has missed.

Find the traitors

EDITOR:

What a shame that our President who is being received abroad with such acclaim has to return to Washington, D.C., to be crucified!

As a nation we are very immature, and in our teen-age development lack both wisdom and judgment. What we really need are more statesmen and fewer politicians.

It might also be well to look for the snake in the grass, for surely there is a Judas organization out to get the leaders of our Republic.

Palestinians angered by Nixon

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's triumphant tour of the Middle East has already produced a backlash, which could upset the peace Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has labored so hard to fashion.

Secret intelligence reports warn that the Palestinians are deeply disgruntled over the President's failure to come to grips with the Palestinian problem. This is almost certain to encourage the extremists to step up their terrorist activities.

ISRAEL CAN be expected to respond by retaliating against guerrilla bases in Lebanon and Syria. Indeed, President Nixon had scarcely left Israel before Israeli warplanes hit back at Palestinian raiders by pounding the Lebanese border villages where they hole up.

Commando strikes against Israel and Israeli retaliation raids would only polarize Arab opinion and prevent a peaceful settlement. This plea was made to the President, according to diplomatic reports, by both Egypt's President Sadat and Saudi Arabia's King Feisal.

Emotionally, Sadat pleaded with the President to bring the Palestinians to the peace table in Geneva. The Egyptian leader promised to use his influence to persuade them to negotiate their future borders and relationships with Israel.

IF THE Palestine problem isn't settled by negotiation, he warned urgently, the extremists would seek their own solutions through violence and terrorism. The President received similar warnings at every stop in the Arab world.

Yet in Israel, he joined Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin in a joint statement condemning "armed bands" and "mercenaries" who invade "the territory of another state." The emotional Palestinians took this to mean that President Nixon was siding with the Israelis against the Palestinians. Even moderate Palestinian leaders joined in the angry denunciation of the President.

The extremists are expected to express their displeasure more emphatically by launching new guerrilla attacks upon Israel. But Israel security is getting so tough to crack, intelligence analysts predict, that the terrorists will have to seek other targets.

HIGH ON their list, intelligence reports warn, will be U.S. targets, including airliners, embassies and consulates around the world. "It just doesn't look good for the United States," one analyst told us bluntly.

Ominously, Palestinian extremists are armed with sophisticated, Soviet-made Katyusha and Strella rockets. These have been furnished to the terrorists, according to intelligence reports, by Libya's strongman, Col. Muammar El-Qaddafi.

At least one commercial plane already has been destroyed by Arab terrorists using Strella rockets. And Israeli police discovered three Katyusha rockets, one of them aimed at the sacred Wailing Wall in Jerusalem. The rockets were found moments before they were to be exploded by automatic timing devices.

Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., during a trip to the Middle East, learned from intelligence sources that Arab terrorists have also adapted a new arsenal of makeshift, terrorist weapons from everyday American products. These weapons, Murphy told us, include the following:

—"Pig bomb": This is a cardboard tube, usually a toilet-paper tube or kitchen-towel tube, packed with black powder and 22-caliber bullets. It contains a fuse which is actuated when the hand releases its grip on the tube. This nasty device can be gift-wrapped and delivered to an assassination victim. The time fuse gives the messenger time to get away before it explodes.

—Aerosol flame thrower: This is a simple, lacquer-base aerosol can with a Zippo or butane lighter taped to its side. The lighter is ignited, the spray button pushed and a spurt of flame shoots out 12 to 13 feet.

Refrigerator bomb: Narcotics or other valuables are stashed in a refrigerator, which is wired with a gigantic explosive charge. A detonator blasting cap is inserted in the refrigerator's light socket. The terrorists simply unplug the refrigerator when they want access to the stash. Police or soldiers, raiding their hideout, would be blown to bits.

—Pen gun: This is an Italian-made weapon, which looks exactly like a chrome ballpoint pen or pencil. But it fires a 22-caliber shell and is exceedingly difficult to detect at airports.

Murphy points out that these weapons are already known to the terrorists, who are expected to use them for hijackings, assassinations and sabotage. A victim marked for assassination, for example, could have his refrigerator turned into a bomb, or the aerosol flame thrower could be used to set off a sabotage charge from a safe distance, suggests the congressman.

Intelligence reports warn that the terrorists might provoke incidents against Egypt, Jordan and Saudi Arabia, because of their pro-American policies.

THE EGYPTIANS stressed to President Nixon that a Palestinian solution would end most of the terrorism and put the Palestinians to work building their own nation. President Sadat, however, didn't define the borders of the proposed Palestine state. He preferred to leave the specifics to be negotiated at Geneva.

Our sources say that Kissinger, in his secret talks, promised U.S. support to the moderate Palestinians. Presumably, this would include CIA backing. But the moderates, angry over the President's statement in Israel, are now in no mood to deal with the United States.

Protecting the Publishency

WASHINGTON — Senator Goldwater wants the Washington Post prosecuted for printing government information the government doesn't want published. At first glance this seems like a good idea if you are one of those people who would just as soon not know what the government is up to — and considering what it has been up to lately, only a masochist would want to be even slightly informed.

Only brief reflection, however, is required to see that the senator's proposal is unsatisfactory. Mr. Goldwater has not thought the thing through. Let us do it for him.

LET US assume that the Post receives in the mail a typical government document classified "secret." It arrives in the mail room where a clerk empties the mail bags and puts it in a batch of envelopes for delivery to the news room.

A copy boy sorts the news room mail and sends the document to a clerk on the city desk. The clerk, observing that the document is written in typical government gobbledygook and that it deals with, say, the price of butter, assumes that it is another routine press release and routinely sends it to the reporter covering the butter beat.

In due time it is printed in the paper, having been checked by a reporter, processed by a copy reader, read by an assistant city editor, reread by the city editor, okayed by an assistant managing editor, approved by the managing editor and mentioned casually to the publisher, Mrs. Katherine Graham, at an office lunch the day it goes to press.

NOW, THE crime having been committed, the government swings into action. A grand jury is convened. The Justice Department sets up a three-man prosecuting team to insure that the perpetrators of this hellishness will pay for their sins.

Russell Baker

New York Times News Service

In no time at all the mail-room clerk who received the forbidden document and passed it on to the copy boy is convicted of receiving illegally circulating federal papers and sentenced to 3 to 7 years at hard labor in Leavenworth.

He has implicated the copy boy who took the document to the news room, and the copy boy, facing 5 to 10 years in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, begins plea bargaining with the special prosecutors.

IN RETURN for telling them to whom he handed the forbidden document — the clerk on the city desk — he is allowed to plead guilty and is sentenced to one year in Danbury.

The prosecutors go after the city-desk clerk, but they are really after Mr. Big, so they make a deal. They let the city-desk clerk plead guilty and get off with nine months in Lewisburg; in return, he agrees to identify the man to whom he passed the secret paper. It is the reporter who covers the butter beat.

After plea bargaining the reporter identifies the copy reader who processed his story and the assistant city editor who read it, and is sentenced to six months in Lewisburg.

The copy reader gets off with four months for agreeing to testify against the assistant city editor, who gets off with two months in Allenwood, where he will be taught to groom radishes, in return for implicating the city editor.

THE CITY EDITOR pleads guilty and is sentenced to 30 days at an I.T.T.-Sheraton motel in suburban Washington.

In exchange, he agrees to testify against the assistant managing editor.

More plea bargaining ensues. The upshot is that the assistant managing editor agrees to testify against the managing editor, and after pleading guilty he is sentenced to pay a $10 fine, which is suspended.

Confronted with the assistant managing editor's testimony, the managing editor pleads guilty, weeps before the judge and throws himself on the mercy of the court. He is given a one-month vacation in Venice with all accommodations prepaid on the Lido.

AT THIS point the prosecutors are ready to nail Mr. Big, or in this case, Mrs. Big — Katherine Graham, the publisher.

Now, however, higher policy considerations must be taken into account. Would it be good for the country to have a publisher haled into court? Would it not do irreparable damage to the institution of the Publishency to press things too far?

Urgent high-level conferences are held and their transcripts classified "secret" so that the mail clerk of any paper daring to publish them can be sentenced to hard labor at Leavenworth.

Yes, someone points out, if Mrs. Graham were just any publisher justice should be served. She should be sentenced to a three-month winter vacation in the Caribbean. But she is a woman and, moreover, a widow. It would be bad for the administration's image to send women to the Caribbean unescorted.

THUS IMAGE'S demands confound determination to do justice; and the case is closed. The mail-room clerk will be eligible for parole from Leavenworth in only two more years.

That is how justice works, Senator Goldwater. If you read the papers instead of confining yourself to what the government wants you to know, you would have known that all along.

Upturn for U.S. in world economy

Less than a year ago the United States seemed to be in bad trouble in the world's economy. There was an active upsurge in the economics of Western Europe and Asia. Our dollar value was in deep trouble as it lost much of its value in comparison to that of Japan and Western European currencies. Our balance of payments showed a deficit in virtually every month.

Today there is a great change in how we are looked upon by those nations that were gleefully forging ahead of us. The change has largely come about since the Arab oil embargo and the cost of oil being almost four times what it was a year ago. We had been suffering from poor grain crops and smaller exports to these countries.

WHILE WE are suffering from Watergate scandals and spiraling inflation many of us overlook the great progress we have made in world opinion — and in the improvement in our economic dealings with these other industrial nations.

What has happened is that we have suffered less from the energy crises because we are not as dependent on imported oil as are those other nations, many of which are dependent on Arab oil for 90 per cent or more for their energy, fertilizers and other oil products.

This year's wheat crop is expected to be the largest ever harvested in this country. In 1970 it was 1.4 billion bushels; a year ago it was only 1.3 billion. The crop now being harvested is estimated to total in excess of 2 billion. That assures of us of ample supplies for our own use and a larger amount to export than ever before. It is not enough to feed many of the starving nations. But it will help many of them as it will help the industrial nations.

A CHART by the Agency for International Development gives an idea of how well off we are. It shows the Gross National Product of the United States as $1.2 trillion compared with all of Western Europe $1.1 trillion. It is more than twice the amount of the Soviet Union.

In addition to the economic leadership we enjoy the last year has brought us a greatly enhanced political standing in world opinion. The achievements of our government and the marvelous ability of Dr. Kissinger have opened up the Mid-East to a prospect of peace rather than continued war. The meetings with China have brought about the opportunity of trade with that vast country with the greatest population of any nation. The meetings with the Soviets give hope that armaments may be cut and the danger of wars greatly decreased.

These changes occurring in the last year have given a new world image of the United States compared with what it was a year or two ago. The United States has been given credit by the leaders of these other countries for providing a more stable world. This has resulted in our dollar being stronger in other countries and those leaders are hopeful that the peace-making achievmeents will be extended.

THE GREATEST danger to the economy of all these nations is inflation. It has raised the cost of living in Britain 51 per cent in the last five years. In Italy by 45 per cent, France by 40 per cent. It is up 33 per cent for the United States in the same period. It is recognized by leaders in all the countries as the greatest danger to their economies. It is a dark picture in the United States. It is a danger to every nation where it continues. If permitted to continue it will end in a worldwide depression.

There is hope inflation will be considerably decreased in the balance of this year. If it is not in the United States our world leadership may again drop to the low level of a year ago.

THE KILLDEER
The Bare Ground Is Just Fine

Harbinger of woe

Killdeer—always an alarmist

By DICK EMERY

There's something disconcerting to reporters about the noisy bird named the killdeer.

No matter what's happening, the killdeer and his pals take flight in wild alarm, flapping back and forth over the beaches or fields, shrieking all the while their Page One shocker: "Killdeer! Killdeer! Killdeer!"

Not long ago a pair of the calamity criers set up housekeeping in a dusty field near a harbor channel between Wilmington and San Pedro.

Killdeer don't demand fancy nesting places. Bare ground suits them fine.

This pair got as far as the third egg when bulldozers scraped the field barer than ever, for a highway rerouting.

"Killdeer! Killdeer!" screamed the frustrated birds.

The pair nested again—so says security guard Robert F. Langworthy, on the evidence a pair chose the same spot. In due time, after innumerable alarms, the parent birds escorted four chicks into the hazards of the Outer World.

"Killdeer! Killdeer!" shrieked the parents at every visitor parking a car in the police lot. Far and wide, over the popular killdeer rookery, other birds picked up the cry.

"What's going on out there?" visitors asked the security guard.

"Parenthood," Langworthy would answer.

Baby killdeer are mouse-size infants which can't fly but which can run at mouse-like speed. They get their running orders from the parent birds, standing guard duty on a post or wall.

One evening Langworthy heard prolonged announcements of calamity from the killdeer parents. Investigating, he found one of the chicks stranded in a hole in a concrete tire-bumper in the parking lot.

"This little guy had fallen in and couldn't get out. I picked him up very carefully and set him loose."

No thanks, though.

"Killdeer! Killdeer! Killdeer!" the parent birds screamed.

Another rescue was made by the station's gardener, George Davis. A killdeer chick had enmeshed itself in iceplant where the field borders the station grounds.

"You would have thought, from hearing all the fuss, the world was coming to an end," Davis said.

The gardener and the security guard did the best they could to help the bird family out of its distressing fixes, but at night the cats came.

"There are always cats around here at night," Langworthy said. "It must be cats that get the birds. I saw a cat here one night trying to catch a rabbit. So I figure that's what has happened to two of the four chicks."

Over the remaining half of their progeny the two killdeer parents were keeping determined vigil.

They had taught the two surviving babes how to hide by holding still, how to nip bugs and worms from the police station's lawn, how to run, and probably how to start flying lessons.

Vocal training will start soon, if the chicks outlast life's countless hazards so long, and it will be, "Killdeer! Killdeer!" Page One news! Calamity galore! "Killdeer! Killdeer! Killdeer!"

Jail teaches something about the human race

By MARK CLUTTER
Staff Writer

Have you ever spent a half day in jail?

If not, perhaps you should. You will learn something. You may even come out with a better opinion of the human race.

I'm not going to write this story in the usual newspaper style but as an account of the half day I spent in my favorite jail, the Southern Reception Center and Clinic of the California Youth Athority, 13200 Bloomfield Ave., Norwalk.

My guide was Mrs. Erma Savage, coordinator of special activities. Mrs. Savage is about the most gentle woman you can find, and she has a deep concern for young men in trouble.

We walked past the swimming pool. Bronzed young fellows were splashing and scuffling in the water while others lay on the grass improving their suntans.

"It doesn't look very much like a prison, does it?" Mrs. Savage said.

But a prison it is. Many of these young men who look remarkably like college freshmen have done terrible deeds. Some of them will spend the rest of their lives in penitentiaries.

MRS. SAVAGE took me to Superintendent Victor Mack, who began our interview with a question:

Would you hire a 20-year-old man with a criminal record?' he asked.

He answered his own question. "In most cases you should," he said. "For one thing, you can learn his record. We know as much about him as anyone can know about any human being. The probation officer can tell you his strengths and weaknesses and what you can reasonably expect of him.

"When a young man walks in off the street and asks for a job, you don't know anything about him. He may be a much worse criminal than a young man who has been in trouble.

"Society must begin to take responsibility for these young people. The California Youth Authority, and therefore the Reception Center, has changed in the past two years.

The officials used to brag that two thirds of the wards eventually matured into employed, law-abiding adults. This is no longer true because of a change in California's policy toward young offenders. The youngest now are usually put on probation, much to the disgust of some policemen.

It is argued that the problems of very young offenders can be more adequately dealt with in the home and community environment.

A couple of years ago the average age of wards was 16 plus. It is now about 19. And their offenses are much more serious with many felonies.

IT IS EASIER to change the life style of a 13 year old than of a 19 year old.

Mrs. Savage took me to the library, which is her pride and joy. A couple of years ago the boys had nothing to read because the state had no money for such frills.

By artful begging Mrs. Savage persuaded civic groups, school systems and individuals to supply books. The library could use a lot more books, but it is no longer necessary for a ward to sit in a locked cell counting his fingernails until he can go to sleep.

"What do these boys read?" I asked Katherine Save, a retired Los Angeles teacher who serves as librarian.

"You won't believe this," she said. "The most popular subject is philosophy. I don't mean popularized philosophy. They read Aristotle and Nietzche. They are also very interested in Eastern philosophy. And psychology. They want to know about the meaning of life and who they are.

"We had one young man who read everything by the Russian novelist Dostoevsky.

"THEY ALSO read about vocations. They want to earn how to make a living.

"We can't get enough poetry or enough art books. Strangely, they are not too interested in fiction or biography.

"This also will surprise you. Many of them love classical music. They come here with the usual taste for rock and they get hooked on Beethoven and Mozart.

"We need recordings, all we can get. The Downey public employes gave us a listening center. We would especially like to get Spanish records for Mexican-American boys.

Of course, not all the boys sit around reading literature. For many, reading at all is almost impossible. Along with the constant examining, testing and counseling the wards go to school where they try to catch up on the literacy they missed in public schools.

Mrs. Savage took me to lunch. First we inspected the mess hall and the spotless kitchen. The young men in their white tee shirts and blue jeans looked remarkably like sailors as they went through the mess line.

The Staff in their dining room eats exactly the same food. It was very good — a huge broiled hamburger, mashed potatoes and gravy, a vegetable, bread and butter and a big piece of cake.

There is a reason for this good fare. Malnutrition is often a factor in youthful crime and delinquency. Some of these young men never had a balanced diet until they got into trouble. It is not unusual for a youth to gain ten pounds in the 30 days or so he is at the center because of the diet, the exercise and the disciplined living.

The center's administrator is Edward R.Futch Jr. Staff members are Gary Bodner, Curtis Booraem, Bruce Tapper, Sharon Kelly and Joachim Seckel.

Remedy urged for distrust of doctors

By GLENN LEIBOWITZ
Staff Writer

Doctors must combat feelings of mistrust and suspicion by their patients that apparently stem from general consumer dissatisfaction, a group of physicians and hospital trustees and administrators were told in Long Beach last week.

Charles M. Jacobs, associate director of the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals, said consumer unhappiness may be an outgrowth of the work of consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

Detroit automakers were regarded as experts before Nader's work, Jacobs said, just as doctors presently are in the medical field.

"Merely because you're a physician doesn't mean you're trusted any more," he said. "Today, the more expertise and status you have, the less trusted you are."

Jacobs spoke aboard the Queen Mary as part of a program sponsored by Pacific Hospital of Long Beach, St. Mary Medical Center, Long Beach Community Hospital and Memorial Hospital Medical Center of Long Beach.

He attributed the problem of patient distrust of the medical establishment to a lack of a "viable, accountability system" and consumer disenchantment.

He said that presently a malpractice suit is the most common form of patient feedback a doctor receives.

A system whereby a patient could feel the community has direct input into how a hospital is run would alleviate the need to resort to malpractice suits, Jacobs said.

He admitted, however, that the problem may be more than simply consumers' being kept in the dark about medical policies.

"There are 250,000 to 280,000 practicing physicians in the United States," Jacobs said. "In the last 5 years, less than 120 license revocations were made annually.

People doubt that there are only 120 doctors deserving license revocation, he said.

He said he suspects that "the people in this room could personally come up with 30 persons who don't deserve to be practicing."

Jacobs said the present review procedures set up by the accredidation commission have sometimes been ineffective in singling out those doctors who deserve to have their licenses revoked. He cited one case in which a physcian inadquately performed a certain operation for eight years in a hospital found had review procedures as good as those in any other hospital.

The operation that particular doctor performed left his patients crippled for life, Jacobs said.

The absence of an internal quality-control mechanism is one reason such a state of affairs could go on, Jacobs said. The present control, he said, is malpractice.

Doctors, he said, would rather confront malpractice suits than accept external regulation from the government.

"We realize that malpractice is not quality control, though," Jacobs said. "There is no feedback route in malpractice."

Suits, he said, allow judges, jurors and lawyers to "determine the standards of medical and hospital practice."

"Professionals staffing those services should set those standards," Jacobs said. "Society realizes this."

The answer, he continued, is regulation or a viable voluntary response, a viable accountability system.

"That's the only choice left. If we don't do that, we'll have to sit back and let ourselves be regulated."

Jacobs said an accredidation commission program, called a TAP Institute—since it is comprised of hospital trustees, administrators and physicians— works toward achieving this accountability.

Five floor plans at Huntington Landmark

Hundreds of viewers turned out at the grand opening of Huntington Landmark's second phase of condominium homes in Huntington Beach.

The all-adult garden condominium community features five floor plan arrangements from one to three bedrooms, and one or two baths. All units, except the Dunes (Plan 11) are available on either the first or second floor of the 2-story buildings.

A variety of recreational amenities are available at Huntington Landmark, and center around the million dollar recreation center. Facilities for social activities are provided in a large clubhouse that features dining and card rooms, a billiard room, art studio, photo lab, pottery and wood shops and all purpose rooms.

Other recreational amenities include a swimming pool, hot swirlpool bath, gymnasium, putting green and two tennis courts.

ONE HUNDRED EIGHTY units comprise this second building phase, representing a value of approximately $6 million. Prices within the community will range from $27,490 to $37,990. Conventional financing is offered, with first move-ins scheduled in late September.

Each Huntington Landmark unit is allocated an enclosed garage with built-in storage, as well as an additional parking space. The sales prices include low cut shag wall-to-wall carpeting in the living room, bedrooms and hallway, and efficient forced air heating.

Other features are walk-in closets in most models, deluxe equipped all-electric kitchens, and utility rooms within each unit that include a washer-dryer.

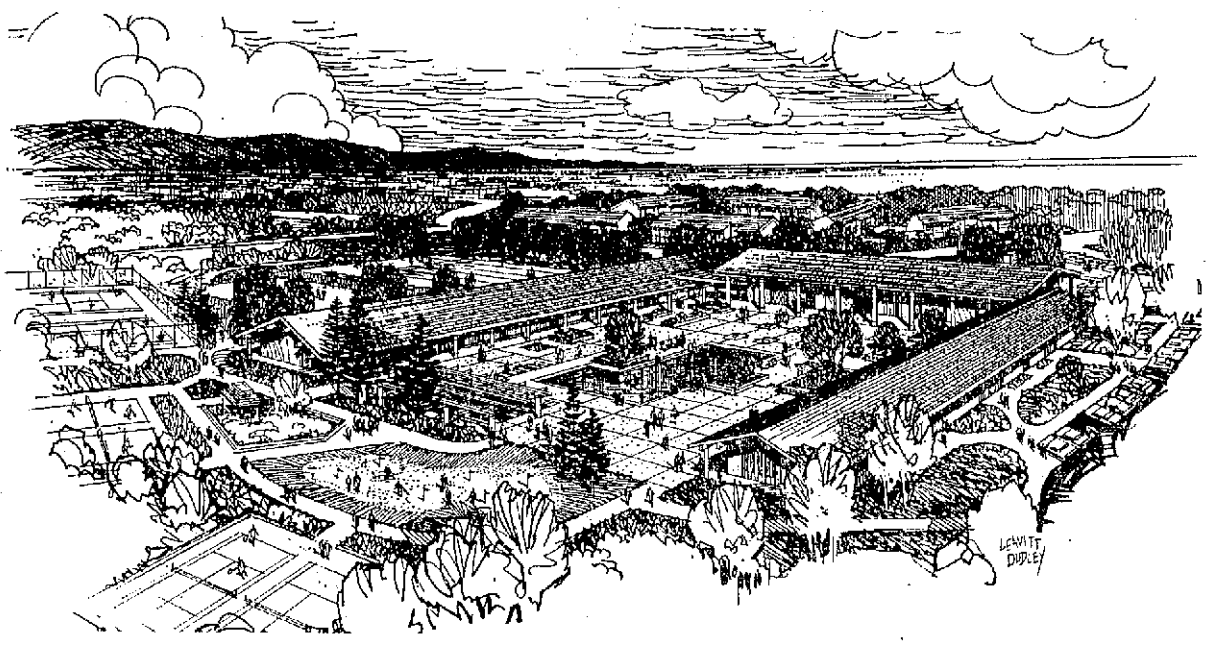

Lower level homes have private enclosed patios, while upper level units enjoy view balconies overlooking the expansive greenbelt areas.

The condominium concept of carefree living is provided, with exterior maintenance, landscaping and care of the greenbelts and recreational facilities provided by a professional firm retained by the homeowner's association for a monthly fee. The completely walled community has a 24 hour security guarded entrance.

The all-adult nature of the community will be preserved by the requirement that all residents be at least 40 years of age, except that one spouse of a married couple may be under 40 if the other is over 40. Complete details of the age requirements are contained in the Delcaration of Covenants, Conditions and Restrictions for the community.

When the entire Huntington Landmark adult development is completed, it will total more than 1500 units valued in excess of $40 million. The total project will cover more than 160 acres of land. The first 2 phases now developed, stretch from Newland Street to Magnolia Street along the north line of Atlanta Avenue.

The models, located at 8644 D-14 Portola Court, are reached by entering the community from Greenfield Lane, midway between Newland and Magnolia Streets. The complex may be reached from the San Diego Freeway by taking either Magnolia Street or Beach Boulevard south to Atlanta. The sales office and decorated models are open daily at 10 a.m.

Phase VI homes at Beachwalk opening

The grand opening of Phase VI of Beachwalk, a master-planned family community of townhouse condominiums in the exclusive Huntington Seacliff area of Huntington Beach, has been announced by the builder, A. J. Hall Corporation of San Diego.

"Buyers are delighted to find they can still afford family homes within walking distance of beautiful beaches, plus many other recreational and social facilities within the project itself, and nearby in the community," said Mathew Loonin, executive vice president and general manager of A. J. Hall.

Loonin said Beachwalk features single-family privacy with the convenience of no yard upkeep.

Five floor plans are offered, from two to five bedrooms, and from 1226 to 2404 square feet. Each home has a two-car garage, entry atrium, fully-fenced patio and extensive landscaping.

WITHIN THE DEVELOPMENT itself there are seven swimming pools, two clubhouses and other leisure-time facilities, as well as landscaped open areas and winding pathways.

Nearby there are golf courses, night-lighted tennis courts, all grade schools through high school, and major shopping plazas.

"New residents at Beachwalk have the advantage of an established homeowners' association and many social activities. In other words, 'you can move in and start living'. There is a community life for both youngsters and adults," Loonin said.

Beachwalk homes are priced from $43,950.

The project is at Golden West Street and Mansion in Huntington Beach, reached via the Golden West turnoff of the San Diego Freeway. Model homes are open daily from 10 a.m.

Gas shortage may tempt some to buy sight-unseen

AP Newsfeature

The gas shortage has curtailed another favorite winter pastime — searching for a second home — vacation house or whatever.

In the past couples would take long weekends looking for winter real estate bargains — a bit of land, an old barn, a shack by a mountain stream, a beach house.

In addition to providing short vacations, the theory was that such places were likely to be less expensive out of season and the layout of properties was more easily determined without brush or foliage hiding the view.

Now potential buyers are reading newspaper advertisements, telephoning owners or writing to them. Some of these places seem to be sold even more quickly — a temptation to browsers who are frustrated that they can no longer browse.

One young couple claims to have lost a number of interesting possibilities that were "snapped up" by others, sight unseen. Their question is: should we be more trusting and risk the small amount of money involved in binding such a sale?

FEW places are really bought sight unseen. Most people have some sort of trusted go-between even though a deal might sound superattractive, a "how could you lose" investment.

You could lose, one man points out, no matter how big the person or the company, and sometimes there are unforeseen reasons such as he experienced.

On the verge of clinching a deal by transferring funds to an owner, he decided to fly to see the five-acre place with small cabin and swimming pool that was advertised.

The swimming pool — the major inducement at the price of $15,000 — proved to be a small puddle of water with a sign in the middle of it that read "swimming pool." He soon discovered that the man who had offered the property was a bit addled. The "cabin" was an old chicken shack, and the only attractive features of the deal might have been a grove of pine trees and a potbellied stove in another outbuilding. In a telephone conversation the owner had given the impression of complete rationality.

THIS HOUSE shopper pointed out that certain words — mountains, streams, ocean, lake shore, view — are the euphonious catch words that hook the potential looker. He likens it to restaurants that flash signs with gustatorial inducements — lobster, steak, fried chicken. You are lucky if you can get a good plate of beans in some such places. It is no guarantee that the food is there, he says.

As for the real estate advertisements, in one instance an ocean proved to be 15 miles away, a mountain "wasn't even an anthill" and a stream proved to be a trickle of water.

It is perhaps better to be 15 miles from the ocean than 115 miles from it, he says. But one should query these points if the proximity makes a difference.

One woman's system in house looking goes like this:

She spends the week cutting out advertisements in the general area she likes. She also contacts real estate people in that area. When she locates enough places to be seen, she and her husband take off to see them by bus, train or even by plane. They are serious house shoppers, looking for something inexpensive for their retirement.

Century 21 in Michigan debut

Plans for the opening of a new region have been announced by Art Bartlett, president of Century 21 Real Estate Corp., which has reached the 650-office mark 27 months after introducing its program of services to independent real estate brokers.

The new region, the corporation's 16th, will serve brokers in Michigan from offices in Southfield, a suburb of Detroit. Offices to be established by mid-June will provide training, recruitment and other services to independent brokers coming under the Century 21 umbrella of services.

The nationwide real estate franchising company is headquartered in Santa Ana, where it introduced its services to 17 Orange County Realtors in February 1972.

Member brokers enjoy the benefits of a national referral service as well as other merchandising programs.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Purchasing house not totally infallible move

By DON CAMPBELL

There are good times and there are bad times. But which is which?

You really have to look back over your shoulder to tell one from the other.

And when you are able to do this, of course, it's entirely too late because the moment has passed — be it good, or be it bad.

MR. CAMPBELL:

How does one know when it is a good time to buy a house? I have saved for years for the down-payment and now when I make up my mind, I am being talked out of it because of the forthcoming "depression."

Do you have any comments to make? Mr. A. V. (Indianapolis)

ANSWER: Samuel Taylor Coleridge had a wise word about advice: "Advice is like snow: the softer it falls, the longer it dwells upon, and the deeper it sinks into the mind."

You well-meaning friends, in other words, have gotten to you and it is virtually impossible for you to tell — at this point — whether they are right, or wrong, in their warnings about a forthcoming depression.

I can't tell you, either. There very well may be a depression (or, at least, a recession) in the future.

A disturbing number of economic indicators suggest the possibility of this although — over the past 20 years or so — real estate has shown a stubborn tendency to run counter to dips in the stock market and the other popular yardsticks.

Through good years (for the stock market) and bad, residential real estate has still managed to plow ahead and appreciate at the rate of about 8 per cent, compounded, a year.

No one can promise that this is going to continue in the future and I have personally run into considerable abuse from time to time for suggesting that some people might be well advised to hold off for two or three years in the expectation of lower mortgage interest rates.

I have been told that I am grossly in error for suggesting that real estate prices, in the future, might slump because, historically, this has never been the case.

And I say: hogwash. There is no such thing as a completely fool-proof investment and real estate is no exception.

In the 1930s houses that were bought for $15,000 (a fabulous price at the time) went on the block for $4,000 and in my own rural homeland farm foreclosures were running at the rate of 25 per cent.

So, please, let's not traffic in this nonsense that an investment in a home — or real estate of any kind — is an "open sesame."

You have to let your heart be your guide in a situation like this. When you talk about buying a "home," it's not quite the same thing as a mere investment in "real estate." If it's a home you're after then I would say hang the consequences and go ahead and buy it (price and conditions of sale being equitable) and take your chances on the economy, generally.

If it's purely a real estate speculation you're talking about, then think carefully about it and weigh the pros and cons against the possibility of an economic slump that could chop 25 per cent off its resale value.

You can make money in any investment (real estate), stocks, have-what-you-will) and in virtually any economic climate if you are careful, invest wisely and ride with the times.

In the matter of buying a home, you can relax your vigilance a bit and figure X percentage of the risk as being offset by the enjoyment of home ownership.

Get the price you can manage and dicker for the best mortgage rate — but, beyond that, don't worry too much about the "depression" talk.

With a sensible equity in the property it shouldn't be that much of a sweat.

MR. CAMPBELL:

I am a widow and live with my mother who is also a widow.

We own half of a double house which is much too large for us. The house is in fairly good condition, but in need of minor repairs and, in a matter of time, it will need major repairs, especially on the outside.

Should we sell what we have and invest our money in a smaller home with everything on one floor for convenience? We also have been thinking about renting an apartment. Mrs. V. S. (Summit Hill, Pa.)

ANSWER: You didn't give me any details of your economic situation, of course, but I think it is fairly safe to suggest that you bail out of this too-big, too-expensive home.

I detect that the house, economically, isn't too much of a drag at the moment, but that you expect it to fly apart like a $9 watch in fairly short order.

I recommend that you not wait around for even the minor repairs (much less the major ones), but bail out now before you have to start discounting the house's fair market price to offset these expenses.

You'll be much happier, I'm sure, in either a rental or in a lower-priced condominium where the monthly maintainance cost relieves you of these awesome responsibilities.

MR. CAMPBELL:

I live in a relatively expensive apartment house and pay well for my two-bedroom unit. But what do you do about a superintendent who stubbornly refuses to fix anything that goes wrong until months later after you've threatened to sue him about it? Mrs. T. G. (Tucson, Ariz.)

ANSWER: Get your fellow tenants together — with similar complaints — and submit your case to the management company in charge of the property. The super is the management company's employee and he's easier to replace than 10 or 15 tenants.

Failing there, chronicle all of your complaints, hire a lawyer and suggest that he begin action to set aside all of your leases on the grounds that you have been "constructively evicted" by the super's negligence.

Legally, it's debatable as to whether you have a case, but it should jar the super.

Remodeling job termed 'worth it'

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Would you pay $7,500 for a dilapidated second house that might turn into a $22,000 remodeling venture? Probably not. But if you didn't suspect the ultimate cost of shaping it up, you might. And, like author Jo Coudert who took on such a risk, you might not be sorry. She admits she was startled when the cost was tallied.

But the money had oozed away in driblets, she explained, and "It would have gone for other things anyway." Meanwhile her investment has doubled in value and she has bought out her less enthusiastic partner in the real estate venture.

"Remodeling costs more than you would think and somehow the expenses are in unexpected directions. You find a nice window and it costs $500. Or suddenly a front door is $100. Hardware is expensive. Lumber costs a lot."

It is all worth it "If you honor the integrity of an old house. You can wind up with something beautiful," she insisted in an interview. She was discussing her newest book, "Go-Well," the story of her efforts to buy the house and remodel it.

SHE EVEN managed to get beautiful mileage out of scraps. For example, broken marble pieces picked up at old buildings were used on the floor of a bathroom (in flagstone-like patterns with cement in between), on a terrace (with gravel in between) and on some table tops. Another terrace was made from bricks of the old chimneys by setting them on cold ashes and sort of raking the ashes in between. A hands-and-knees job, the brick terrace didn't even heave in winter, she said.

Chunks of plaster were used to make a driveway — they made an excellent surface after they were driven over and rained upon. And old bridge planks were pressed into service for many things, including becoming forms for the brick terrace.

They had been quoted some "fantastic prices" for heating systems and eventually chose electric heat on the advice of the carpenter who saw to it that they were properly insulated for it. A well was drilled, a septic tank system was installed and a bathroom was added to the house.

A "GREAT discovery" was the material that rejuvenated their nail-ridden floors that couldn't be sanded successfully. They used a heavy yellow liquid "ground coat" with a varnish stain for a beautiful finish.

Getting along with workmen is another key to a smooth remodeling venture, in Miss Coudert's opinion. A charming, low-key type, she had no difficulty keeping the good carpenter she had enlisted. Old carpenters, "who have worked hard all their lives are terribly healthy and want to keep busy," she observed. They are better workers and may have more respect for older houses than younger men, in her experience. In fact, one young man had even suggested that they tear the house down.

"My carpenter was avid for praise and I obliged him. I would ask him how he did something and he enjoyed telling me. He was interested, too, in letting us do what we could do to save money."

FORTUNATELY, there is a lot a do-it-yourselfer can do. Painting, stapling (insulation), taping (sheetrock) and the like can help cut costs. She even learned to reupholster furniture from a paperback book.

Crisis alters designs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The energy crisis is changing some once strongly held views about office buildings.

Architects are being asked by clients to design buildings which will require less energy for lighting, heating and cooling.

When energy was abundant, there was little stinting. In many instances, lighting, heating and air conditioning were overdone.

"A building that conserves energy might be more expensive initially but it will be less expensive in the long run," said Donald H. Nack, a Pasadena consulting engineer. "The technology is availasble. Builders just need the motivation to use it."

He believes that clients will start considering the total costs of operation when they are planning a building.

Nack points out that buildings consume 50 per cent of all the electricity produced in the United States. For example, the 110-story twin towers of the World Trade Center in New York use as much electricity in a year as a city of 100,000 population.

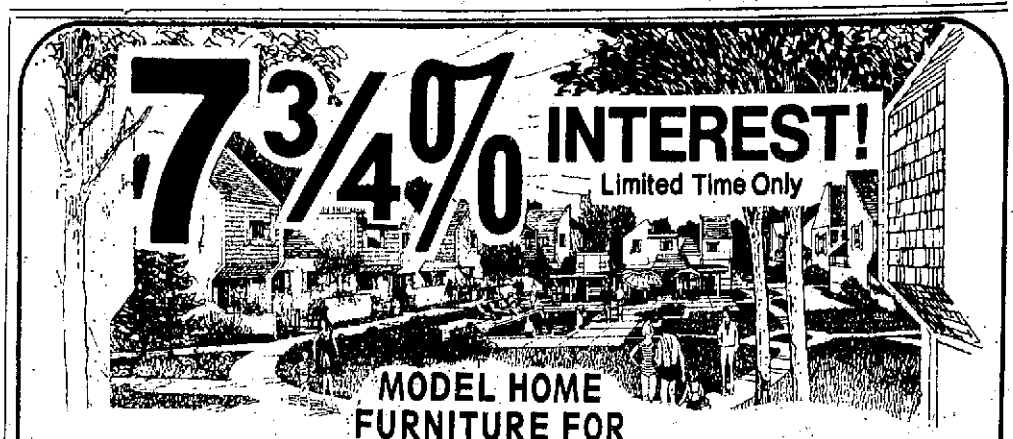

A casualty of the energy crisis may be glass buildings. In recent years they have sprung up in profusion in cities all over the country. But in coming years they may not be built because glass is the least efficient insulator of heat and cold. That makes them difficult to heat in winter and to cool in summer.

"We've been fighting against glass for years," said Nack.

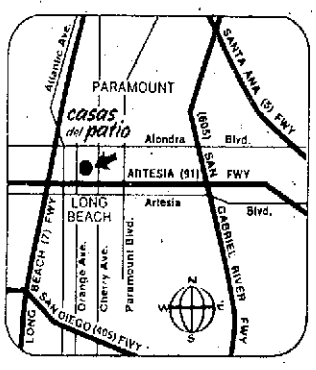

He contends it is nearly impossible to control the temperature of such buildings economically.

Nack deplores the insistence on sealed windows by many builders. He conceded sealed windows are cheaper and that they don't interfere with the design but he urges clients to install windows that open.

If the energy crisis were to become so severe that comfort could not be maintained in windowless glass structures, they would become architectural atrocities, Nack maintained.

CC&F units rising in OC

Four new "inventory" buildings, representing a combined total of more than 350,000 square feet of floor space, are under construction at the new $50 million CC&F Orange County Industrial Center, announced John J. McPhillips, marketing manager for the 221-acre complex Santa Ana and Costa Mesa.

When completed, there will be 14 buildings on the site, representing a total of over 800,000 square feet, after just nine months of development, he said.

The center is being developed by a subsidiary of Cabot, Cabot & Forbes (CC&F Orange County Properties, Inc.).

Heading the list of new facilities is one covering 141,000 square feet — the largest inventory building ever constructed in an industrial center in Orange County.

It will be located, with expansion land available, at the corner of Segerstrom Avenue and Susan Street.

OTHERS cover 112,000, 60,000 and 40,000 square feet, respectively, and are located at or near the corner of Yale Street and Garry Avenue. The three largest of the four structures are served by a Southern Pacific spur line.

The concrete, tilt-up buildings, designed for light manufacturing, warehousing and/or offices, will take approximately 20 weeks to construct, McPhillips said. They are built ahead of demand, he pointed out, so thatprospective tenants may move in without delay and have the advantage of knowing in advance what their final construction costs will be.

ALSO nearing completion is a 69,675-square-foot multi-occupancy inventory building, suitable for offices, light manufacturing, showrooms and other similar uses.

Fronting on Harbor Boulevard, with individual Harbor Boulevard addresses for all tenants, it is designed for leasing modules as small as 1,600 square feet.

Four inventory buildings, ranging from 31,000 to 127,000 square feet, were built when the center first opened last Fall. All but one covering 80,000 square feet have been leased or sold.

"Orange County was obviously ready for a quality, master-planned industrial park such as ours, judging by our progress in our first nine months of sales," McPhillips commented.

"New buildings have been going up at the rate of about one per month."

INCLUDED among purchasers and lessees are American Hospital Supply Corp., Boise Cascade, Guerdon Industries, Reo Plastics, Designs Alive, Inc., Lem Finley Sales, S&S Headers and others.

Aberthaw Construction Co. isprime contractor for the CC&F Center.

PLATFORM BEDS FOR DIFFERENT REASONS

DESIGN FOR LIVING

Platform beds may be making comeback

By EMILY MALINO

Hundreds of years ago people placed their beds on platforms. For generations the French kings slept two or three steps above the floor!

In those days, of course, it was for other reasons. Floors were often damp, from poor ventilation, and rooms were even colder without central heating.

Today, we use platforms for our beds for totally different reasons. One is aesthetic. The look is spare and lean, in keeping with the best of new design in the modern home.

Another good reason is health. It is a well-accepted fact that a hard mattress has a therapeutic effect on the sleeper.

FOR decades we have been brainwashed by advertisers for the bedding industry, who one day discovered that it was more profitable to sell a box spring with a mattress than a mattress by itself, although for hundreds of years folks slept soundly on a simple mattress supported by wood slats, a steel frame or steel coil springs.

The box spring, an overblown affair of nothing more than springs imprisoned in a padded box, can often lessen firmness of the sleeping surface.

Visually, it makes a large bulky mass hardly in keeping with today's small rooms.

THE platform bed, on the other hand, constructed of plywood and stock lumber, not only looks elegant and trim, it also provides a firm, sturdy base for a mattress, whether innerspring or foam.

In a home I am designing right now I am converting a mattress from a conventional box spring base to a simple plywood platform.

This will be lacquered white and a contour cover in a simple beige and white herringbone tweed will cover the mattress.

Platforms can also be versatile. In a small room, a platform can be designed to hold two roomy storage drawers for extra bedding or for bulky clothes like sweaters.

A wide variety of platform beds are sold ready-made in stores, in sizes for twin or double or queen or king size beds to satisfy any taste.

IN A room I designed for a young couple, I started out with a double-size foam mattress and placed it on a platform which I designed with thick square legs and a recessed frame.

Fitting neatly under the mattress and between the legs are two deep drawers. All the bed linens this couple owns plus towels and an extra blanket, fit neatly in the two drawers, freeing their linen closet for other much-needed clothing storage.

Purchasing power also problem in housing field

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — While the future of housing may already seem as forlorn as an abandoned cellar excavation, still another dismal report has been issued by an important mortgage banker.

The nearly impossible situation faced by the industry is exemplified by a massive outflow of funds from mortgage lenders, by rising mortgage rates, and by materials costs that are rising at an unpredictably swift rate.

But a report by Advance Mortgage Corp. of Detroit suggests that still another factor adds to the pummeling being administered to housing. In spite of pay increases, that is, customers are literally unable to buy. Advance Mortgage summarized the predicament this way: "Homebuying costs have been rising some 3½ times as fast as their customers' income." This indicates that, even if they can borrow, many customers won't do so.

"IN THE past 12 months," the report continues, "average new home prices have increased at least 18 per cent, and mortgage interest rateson a ,90 per cent mortgage are now in the range of 9½ per cent where usury laws permit, compared to 8¼ per cent a year ago.

"That adds up to a 28 per cent increase in the monthly payments on a typical home mortgage — compared to an 8 per cent increase in average personal income."

And the sales prices might go higher still. Irving Rose, president of Advange Mortgage, a subsidiary of the First National City Corp., notes that while raw land costs have leveled off, total development costs have risen.

Cost increeases are said to be especially severe in petroleum-based components such as asphalt paving and shingles and plastic pipe, and metal items such as sewer pipes and reinforcing bars.

"BUILDERS are complaining they don't know what their houses will cost," Rose relates. "In Florida, some single-family home builders are completing entire tracts in advance of any attempt to sell so they will know their complete costs before setting a price. Others are preselling but with escalation clauses."

Advance Mortgage concludes: "The housing recovery projected for this year has died in its cradle."

Warehouse site bought by Mape

Purchase of an 8½-acre warehouse site on Cerritos Avenue, just west of State College Boulevard in Anaheim, was announced by Vance Mape III, vice president of Mape Industries, Inc., the Palo Alto-based development and general contracting firm.

EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTUNITY

How would you like to live on this magnificent Estate with a thoughtful & courteous staff at your service & never again worry about losing your independence or paying a major medical bill?

Opening May, 1975

If you are 62 or older and "senior citizen" tracts hold little charm for you—and far-away places mean breaking too many ties—you should know about a remarkable development now under construction in Montecito, the charming village that adjoins Santa Barbara.

Casa Dorinda, one of the great private estates in California, will be a community where you can live independently in your own apartment or cottage, in an aura of gentility and courtesy and never worry about the availability of medical care or problems caused by loneliness or financial reverses.

The plan combines luxury housing, three meals a day served in a hotel-style dining room, and an outstanding health program complete with on-site medical facilities.

The 48-acre estate centers about an 85-room Mansion, one of the most elegant and romantic of its day. The first floor salons where royalty was entertained and Paderewski played for private soirees, the Oriental and Napoleon Rooms, the gracious halls and courtyards are being restored to their original lustre and will be shared by all residents. A handsome new dining room and kitchen have been added.

Residents can choose between a dozen residential apartments on two upper floors of the Mansion itself, 19 cottages clustered about the Great Lawn or the 231 apartments built in one or two story structures that blend with the Main House and open to arcades or central corridors. Vine covered arbors connect the buildings and parking is close to your own front door. More than 90% of the estate grounds has been preserved in gardens, meadows and wooded glens.

Developed by Retirement Residence, Inc. (RRI), one of the nation's most respected independent consultants and developers of retirement housing, and Stolte Inc, an international contracting firm, Casa Dorinda will be operated by the Montecito Retirement Association, a non-profit corporation and managed by National Retirement Residence.

The Casa Dorinda program includes:

ESTATE LIVING. Your own apartment or cottage—a studio, alcove or one or two bedroom home—with either a patio or balcony, each with views of the ocean, mountains or gardens and woods. Carpeting, draperies, wood-encased kitchenette are included and housekeeping services and linens are provided.

DINING. Three meals a day are served in the handsome new dining room overlooking the Great Lawn. Residents sit where and with whom they choose and order from a selective menu.

LEISURE ACTIVITIES. The elegant lounges and reception rooms, the wood panelled library, are for you to enjoy or to entertain friends. There is a large activities room for lectures or parties. Shopping areas and the cultural and recreational facilities of Montecito and Santa Barbara are within easy reach. And you enjoy one of the most delightful climates in the world.

SECURITY AND SERVICE. Should you need help, it is as close as the flip of a switch or a phone call to the switchboard. A complete staff is available to assist you.

MEDICAL PLAN. Doctors keep regularly scheduled office hours and are on call for emergencies. Registered nurses supervise the on-site medical facility 24 hours a day. The Casa Dorinda plan covers virtually all physicians' and surgeons' costs as well as hospital, nursing, convalescent and rehabilitation care.

ELIGIBILITY. You must be at least 62 and in a normal state of health for your age (an exception can be made to the age of husband or wife).

COSTS. Casa Dorinda's fees vary according to your age and the accommodations you choose. There is an Entry Fee, which is paid in increments before you move in, and a Monthly Fee. These cover the entire Casa Dorinda program —for life!

For example, an Entry Fee for one person (age 75 at the time he or she moves in) could range from $19,000 for a Studio Apartment to $30,000 for a typical one-bedroom apartment with Monthly Fees of from $405 to $520.

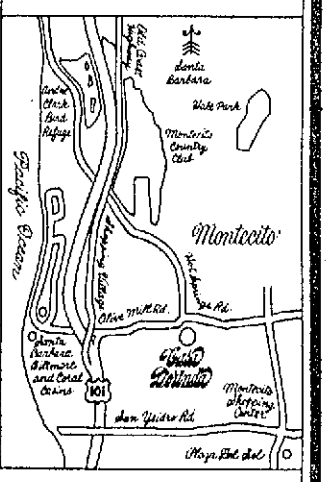

Typical Entry Fees for a couple (if both were 75 at move-in) range from $37,500 for a one bedroom unit to $57,500 for a two bedroom, two bath apartment, with Monthly Fees of from $840 to $960.

If you would like more information, fill out the coupon, or write or call Casa Dorinda, 300 Hot Springs Road, Montecito, CA 93108. Telephone (805) 969-3251. The Information Center in the Gatehouse on the estate grounds is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Projects developed by RRI in Northern California include Canterbury Woods, Pacific Grove; St. Paul's Towers, Lake Merritt, Oakland; The Tamalpais, Greenbrae, Marin County and Los Gatos Meadows, Los Gatos. All medical and residential facilities are operated on a non-discriminatory basis and afford equal treatment and access to services to all persons regardless of race, color, national origin or religion.

TAKING part in the groundbreaking ceremonies were Richard B. Smith, president of the homebuilding firm; Larry Lizotte, a vice president of the company and project manager, and Philip Peter, San Clemente city engineer and director of public works.

Valuation of the project on completion is estimated at $13.5 million by Rod Gilliland, marketing director for Broadmoor Homes.

Four single-story floorplans will be offered, ranging in size from 1,900 square feet to 2,330 square feet. Three and four-bedroom plans will be available, all with two baths.

Dunn complex in third phase

Construction has started on the $3.6 million Carson-Belshaw Business Park, the third phase of Dunn Properties Corp.'s business-industrial complex in Carson.

The business-industrial development is part of Dunn's $55 million business center at the Avalon exit of the San Diego Freeway, which includes the Carson Mall and regional shopping center as well as office buildings and related commercial developments.

Due for an October completion, Carson-Belshaw Business Park contains 204,000 square feet of office and warehouse space in 10 buildings.

Leasable space is available from 6,710 to 31,699 square feet.

The 13.4-acre development provides immediate access to the San Diego, Harbor and Long Beach freeways, and is within 15 minutes of the ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach and the Los Angeles International and Long Beach airports.

Project architects Corum-Tapley of Laguna Hills have made liberal use of exposed aggregate and wood to give the building exteriors an "earthy" look.

Building activity dips in Anaheim

A slight decline in overall building activity was reported in the City of Anaheim during the month of May, according to Daniel Van Dorpe, chief building inspector.

In a monthly summary, Van Dorpe revealed 391 permits were issued for a valuation of $7,672,807 — down from May, 1973, when 547 permits were issued for $8,493,564 valuation.

Permits issued last month included two for single family residences; 128 for non-residential uses — including 34 for industrial buildings and 72 for structures other than buildings; 254 for additions and alterations; and eight for demolition of residences and other structures. Total new construction amounted to $6.8 million of the monthly valuation, Van Dorpe noted.

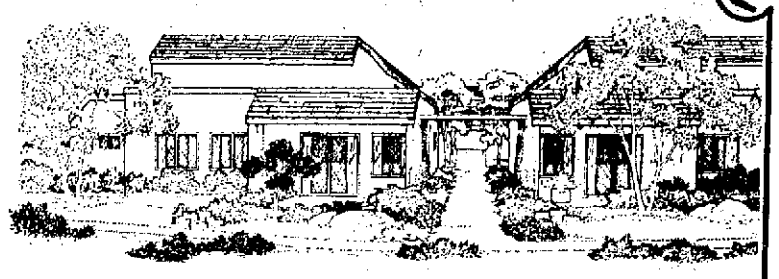

Largest single major construction, according to the summary, was issued to Grove Industrial Properties, $1,380,600, for seven industrial buildings.

Other major developments include 11 tennis courts for Anaheim Hills, Inc., $143,000; Vern Trider auto agency, two structures $278,000; Host International, Inc., a restaurant, $400,000; and the City of Anaheim, police department addition, $134,000.

Play it again, Sam! Dodgers triumph in 10

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

It is small wonder that after only 35 playing dates the Dodgers' attendance soared past the one million mark Saturday night.

The Dodgers keep coming up with one unbelievable script after another.

Saturday night, in a replay of their come-from-behind win of the night before, the Dodgers nipped their arch rivals, the San Francisco Giants, 3-2, on Joe Ferguson's home run leading off the bottom of the 10th inning.

Friday night Bill Buckner, like Fergie a product of the San Francisco area, homered in the 10th to beat the Giants, 4-3. Both blows came on 1-0 pitches thrown by Elias Sosa.

Jimmy Wynn improved his major league lead by slamming his 18th and 19th home runs, the second dramatically tying the game, 2-2, with one out in the ninth.

Another wildly enthusiastic crowd—45,538—cheered the Dodgers to their 27th victory in 36 games at Dodger Stadium. The congregation jolted the season's gate total to 1,032,187, nearly 290,000 ahead of last year's pace.

"There is no doubt," manager Walter Alston said, "that these crowds are inspiring us."

Ferguson is a man who needs nothing more than the Giants to be inspired.

"There are a couple of them I actually hate," admits Ferguson, "and they know who they are. It always means a little more to beat San Francisco. We all try that much harder. It is an intense rivalry."

The victory enabled the Dodgers to increase their lead in the National League West to six games over Atlanta and seven over defending champion Cincinnati.

As important as the victory was the return to form of Don Sutton, who pitched better than he had since May 14th even though he wasn't involved in the decision.

"I got my act together," Sutton said after yielding only two runs and six hits—only three after the second inning—while working eight strong innings.

The win went to relief ace Mike Marshall—his second in as many nights. Marshall pitched the final two frames.

"Sutton pitched a great game, the best in more than a month," said Ferguson, Sutton's catcher. "He was the guy who kept us in the game."

Wynn hit his first homer in the first inning, collecting his first RBI of the season against the Giants in the process, but the Giants tied the score in the second on three singles.

San Francisco went ahead, 2-1, in the sixth when Garry Maddox coaxed Sutton for a two-out walk after Steve Garvey and Rick Auerbach had let his foul pop drop untouched. Ed Goodson then doubled Maddox home.

Jim Barr, the former Lynwood High and USC star who had pitched shutouts in his two previous starts, protected the 2-1 lead into the ninth before Wynn stung him a second time, homering deep into the centerfield pavilion.

"The first homer was a changeup at the eyes," said Wynn. "The second one was a fast ball right down the middle. I was just trying to get on base and let the guys behind me drive me in."

Ferguson, he said, was thinking home run when he stepped in against Sousa, who has thrown four pitches in the series

JIMMY WYNN homered twice and added two singles and JOE FERGUSON homered in 10th to beat Giants, 3-2.

Ryan puts life into listless Angels, 7-4

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

ARLINGTON, Tex. — In recent weeks, the Angels have been described as a team with the pallor of a dead man — or at least one in intensive care.

Rigormortis, the experts pointed out, could not be far behind.

It was another way of saying the Angels were lifeless. Like an accident looking for a place to happen, they were a team looking for somebody to beat them.

"It's not gonna be that way any more," vowed Nolan Ryan Saturday night, moments after he put the brakes to a four-game losing streak by turning back the Texas Rangers, 7-4, with a 10-strikeout, 3-walk performance.

Ryan was one of the orators at a pre-game meeting as the Angels fortified their already healthy American League lead in team meetings.

"I just expressed my opinion," Ryan said. "I pointed out that we need to take more pride in ourselves and that even if we do get beat at least we're gonna hustle all the way.

"In the past the other team would get a lead in the sixth or seventh inning and it was like the end of the game."

Ryan said he went out to the mound determined to try and do something about turning it around for the lethargic Angels, a team which had dropped 15 of its previous 19 games.

"It's depressing to continually get beat," he said.

Manager Bobby Winkles shared the podium at the pre-game conclave and cracked the whip slightly.

During the second game of Friday night's long and disastrous double dip, announcer Dick Enberg verbally pictured an unhappy portrait of the Angel dugout.

During the ninth inning of the second game, Enberg reported, at least four Angels seated in the dugout turned their backs to the field and gazed into the stands, apparently disinterested in what their teammates were doing.

"I put a stop to that," Winkles reported. "I also heard they were having

Wohlhuter sets U.S. 800 record

By KEN PIVERNETZ
Staff Writer

Rick Wohlhuter is one 26-year-old insurance executive who has all the "coverage" he needs.

Track's hottest commodity added the U.S. 800-meter record to go with the world 880 mark that he set two weeks ago, running 1:43.9 to highlight Saturday's second-day portion of the 86th AAU championships at UCLA.

A capacity turnout of 12,100 watched Wohlhuter win by 15 yards and equal the second-fasted metric 800 run, only two-tenths off Marcello Fiasconaro's world record.

Wohlhuter ran 1:44.1 at Eugene two weeks ago to lower his 880 record, which had first been set when he burst into national prominence a year ago.

Under ideal conditions Saturday, there was plenty of speculation of how fast Wohlhuter would run.

There was no challenge from the other seven runners.

ONLY Keith Francis, the NCAA runnerup from Boston College, made a bid, almost pulling even to Wohlhuter's right shoulder at the 200 meter mark. But at the same instant Wohlhuter broke away from the pack.

John Walker of New Zealand was second in 1:45.3, James Robinson of Laney junior college in Oakland third, another four-tenths back.

Wohlhuter, timed in 51.3 at 400 meters, wasn't disappointed at missing the record.

"I know I'm capable of getting it soon, but if it had come right now it would have put too much pressure on me.

"I was happy for the fast pace. I just ran from there."

Although selected the two-day meet's outstanding athlete, Wohlhuter was by no means the only quality performer Saturday.

FOUR AAU meet records were broken to go with two Friday. It was the first time running events had been held at meters in other than an Olympic year.

Two of the meet records went to athletes representing the Pacific Coast Club of Long Beach.

Al Feuerbach muscled the 16-pound shot 70 feet, 9¼ inches on his first attempt, which was enough for the world record holder to defeat PCC teammate George Woods (70-2½).

"But then I had to wait around while they measured for a meet record and I lost the edge you need for the big throws," shrugged Feuerbach, who tailed off after that, exceeding 70 feet again only on his second throw (70-4½).

Jim Bolding of the PCC by way of Oklahoma State controlled the 400 intermediate hurdles, running 48.9 to defeat three-time AAU champion Ralph Mann, who was out in lane eight.

It was Bolding's second AAU championship in a row. Mann was timed in 49.5.

GUEST competitor Rod Dixon of New Zealand accounted for the other meet record, winning the 1,500 meters in 3:37.5 when he sprinted away from John Hartnett of the New York AC on the final turn.

Ohio State freshman Tom Byers, who won the national AAU junior championship to qualify for the meet, was second in 3:37.9, equivalent to a 3:55 mile.

A day after he won the 100 meters in 9.9, Steve Williams was relegated to fourth place in the 200 Saturday, Don Quarrie running away from the field in 20.5.

Quarrie, who shares the world record holder with Tommie Smith at 19.8, ran away from the likes of Williams, Reggie Jones, and James Gilkes in such a fashion he was able to slow down at the end and glance over to see who was second.

A notable casualty in the prelims was Munich silver medalist Larry Black, who ruptured a tendon in his heel running the curve and took a hard fall.

Other champions Saturday were Maurice Peoples in the 400 (45.2) for the second year in a row, Sam Colson (80-8) in the javelin, Dave Roberts in the pole vault (17-6), Steve DeAutremont in the hammer (226-6), Frank Shorter in the 10,000 meters (28:16.0), Jim Johnson in fun out in the bullpen so tonight I sent Tom Morgan (pitching coach) down there."

With the Angels paying rapt attention, Ryan withstood nine Ranger hits to run his record to 9-6 and his major league leading strikeout total to 113, actually putting him slightly ahead of his record-setting pace of last year when he struck out 383.

"That's hard to believe," Ryan reacted. "Looking back, you'd think I'd been struggling."

It was a struggle only in the first and third innings when the Rangers scored twice. After the third, Ryan fired blanks at Texas, restricting the Rangers to three singles.

The Angels won it with five runs in the second to chase Jim Bibby, 10-9. They were treated to five walks in the inning and also received a two-run bases-loaded double from Mickey Rivers and an RBI single from Paul Schaal.

The final two runs of the inning scored on Bibby's wild pitch which got Ellie Rodriguez home from third and Rivers scored from second when Bibby dropped catcher Jim Sundberg's throw at the plate.

Schaal hit his third homer in the fifth and the Angels added their final run in the ninth on a pair of singles and another Ranger error.

Jeff Burroughs had three of the nine Texas hits and drove in three runs to give him a prodigious 62 for the year. Burroughs doubled home a run in the first and scored on Mike Hargrove's triple and then singled across a pair in the third.

That's when Ryan got stingy.

"We'll have a meeting before every game if that's what it takes to win," he said.

So will Bobby Winkles.

ANGEL ANGLES: Nolan Ryan carried a lead into the eighth inning on 41 occasions and has never lost. His 10 strikeouts marked the 61st time in his career he has equalled or surpassed that figure and the seventh time this season. His complete game was the first by an Angel since June 1 when Ryan was also the pitcher of record...The five-game set concludes tonight with Andy Hassler matched against Jackie Brown...Hassler is still searching for his first major league win. He's lost eight times...Tom Egan spent the afternoon riding a 6,000-pound whale at neighboring Seven Seas amusement park. "I was so scared I didn't care how cold the water was," Egan said, grinning.

Freitas-led West romps by East 36-6

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — Jesse Freitas' deadly passing, Joe Barnes' electrifying scrambles and Dickey Morton's clutch touchdown dashes ignited the West to a 36-6 victory over the East Saturday night in the 14th Annual Coaches All-America football game.

Freitas, from San Diego State and the nation's leading passer in 1973, rifled touchdown passes of 12 and five yards to Southern California's Lynn Swann.

Freitas guided the West on another drive climaxed by Arkansas' Morton, who slashed four yards for a touchdown.

Barnes of Texas Tech, who shared the quarterbacking duties with Freitas on Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer's West squad, dazzled the hometown crowd of 42,368 with a zigzag 26-yard touchdown run in the third quarter. Barnes left tacklers strewn all over the field on his jaunt which gave the West a 22-6 lead and put the game out of reach.

Freitas completed passes of 17 and 25 yards to Oklahoma State's Reuben Gant to set up a two-yard scoring run by the swift Morton.

The East squad of Pittsburgh Coach Johnny Majors made only one serious threat in the nationally televised game.

The West built a 9-0 first-quarter lead on the first Freitas-to-Swann connection and a 48-yard field goal by Berl Simmons of Texas Christian.

The East stormed back in the second quarter to make it 9-6 on a 47-yard pass-and-run touchdown shot from Mississippi quarterback Norris Weese to tight end Paul Seal of Michigan.

DODGERS WIN—

and had two of them wind up in the seats.

"I was looking for a ball to hit out of the park," Fergie admitted. "I didn't hit it that good, but it was good enough."

The dramatic finish was almost too much for Sutton, who was still shaking his head half and hour after the game.

"These finishes are unbelievable," he said. "There's no other way to describe them.

"As for my pitching, I'm happy about it. I wasn't the least bit concerned in the third inning (when the Giants got three hits). I know I've got to make a contribution and I'm just not a very good cheerleader."

DODGER DOPE: Angel coach John Roseboro, the former Dodger catcher, at the Oldtimers luncheon on the state of the Angels: "The Angels are in Texas...sort of a disaster area the last few days. But, really, I think attitudes have changed. The players of today don't have the drive, determination and competitive spirit the teams had years ago. I'd like to see the attitudes of yesterday in players today"...Tom Lasorda, the Dodgers' third base coach, issued this rebuttal: "I don't know about the players he's been watching (the Angels) but I couldn't be prouder of our guys. I couldn't disagree with Rosey more"...Attendance note: On the night the Dodgers soared past the 1,000,000 mark at the gate, on their 35th home date, it should be pointed out that the Giants have drawn 812,475 home AND away in 62 dates...They've played to only 259,230 at Candlestick...Asked to comment on a quote from former teammate Willie Davis that "the Dodgers will fold, they always will," Steve Garvey said, "The last guy who said that (St. Louis' Pete Richert) was released a week later"...Pitching today's game, beginning at 2 p.m. after the 1 p.m. Oldtimers Game, will be Tommy John (10-2) and John D'Acquisto (5-6).

Giants, Dodgers— Bitter rivals in '51, pals in '74

BY GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

A youngtimer keynoted the Oldtimers luncheon Saturday at the Dodgers' Stadium Club.

"The biggest thing you fellows have done," 25-year-old Steve Garvey told the gathering of former Giants and Dodgers, many of them from the Brooklyn—New York era who play their Oldtimers Game today, "is to create a rivalry that will never be matched by anyone, anywhere.

"The Dodgers and the Giants have that rivalry. Our game Friday night was indicative of that rivalry."

There they were, the Dodgers and Giants of old, laughing about their bitter struggles of yesterday, most of them staged on the opposite side of the continent decades ago.

The stories were fresh, as if they happened just last week.

Prominent, as one would expect in any gathering of formmer Giants and Dodgers, was the famed "shot heard 'round the world," Bobby Thomson's historic pennant-winning home run off Ralph Branca in 1951.

Branca, who will sing the national anthem today, was with his wife, Ann, and two daughters.

"It's been a long time since I threw that pitch," Branca said, "but its's going to be a long time before it's forgotten. People still come to me and tell me what they were doing and where they were doing it Oct. 3, 1951.

I remember where I was," said Don Newcombe, the former Dodger pitching great and the first Cy Young Award winner.

"Who do you suppose set it up for Ralph?

"I had gone to the clubhouse after Ralph came in to relieve me. I couldn't even get to my locker. All the newspaper and radio guys were in there, all figuring we had won it. I went into the shower and was all soaped up thinking about the win.

"All of a sudden there was a stampede to the Giants clubhouse. I asked what happened. They said Thomson had just hit a homer, the Giants had won the game, 5-4 — and the pennant!

"I just stayed in the shower."

Big Newk then turned to his former batterymate and roomie, Roy Campanella.

"Here's a great guy," Newk said of Campy. "We had a lot of fun for a lot of years.

"Boy, when we were having years, we would get calls from all over. . .from Istanbul, Tokyo, everywhere. But if were were having a bad year, wow, we couldn't even get the hotel switchboard operator to give us a wakeup call."

Carl Erskine, the man who pitched the Dodgers' first game on the West Coast, in the Coliseum against the Giants in 1958, was on hand.

"A typical Erskine win — a 15-hitter," he said, also recalling the day Sal Maglie, the fearsome New York Giant pitcher, became a Brooklyn Dodger.

"It just wasn't possible to see Maglie with 'Dodgers' across his shirt," Erskine said. "But when I saw Campy, who had been flattened a hundred times by Maglie, walk out with his arm around Sal, I said, 'Nothing I ever see again will surprise me.'"

Dodger manager Walt Alston welcomed many of his former players, saying, "I owe you a lot. We haven't won a pennant since."

Alston told the Oldtimers about some of the changes they'll see when they show up at Dodger Stadium for their 1 o'clock game today.

"We have salt tablets and vitamins, not one but two trainers and even two doctors. Show up for a rubdown, don't forget that.

"Oh, and get in the clubhouse to be fitted for your batting glove. If you get on base you pull off the batting glove and slip on a sliding glove.

"That's something we have a lot of around here — sliding gloves — because we haven't been getting on base much lately."

Phillies sweep Met twin bill

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bill Robinson homered and singled to ignite a pair of four-run innings and the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the New York Mets 8-5 for a sweep of Saturday's twi-night doubleheader.

Mike Schmidt tripled to key a three-run first inning and lead the Phillies to a 5-2 triumph in the opener behind Ron Schueler's five-hit pitching.

Wayne Twitchell, with relief from Jesus Hernaiz, picked up the win in the second game as he made his first start since injuring his knee late last season.

The second game had to be delayedd in the seeeond inning after firecrackers were thrown onto the field and into the Met bullpen from the left field stands. Met manager Yogi Berra cleared his players from the bullpen and a warning was given to the crowd that the game could be forfeited.

New York took a 2-0 lead in the second inning of the nightcap when Ken Boswell followed a walk to John Milner with his first home run of the year. Milner hit his 12th in the sixth.

Robinson opened the bottom of the second with a solo homer and the Phils added three more to tag George Stone (2-6) with the loss.

NCAA SLEUTHS VISIT MOSES

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Moses Malone, the nation's most sought-after schoolboy basketball player, has told National Collegiate Athletic Assn. investigators one college coach offered him $1,000 under the table to sign, the Richmond Times-Dispatch said Saturday night.

The Times-Dispatch, in a story for its Sunday editions by executive sports editor Bill Millsaps, reported that two NCAA investigators have started an inquiry into the recruiting tactics used by hundreds of colleges that sought the 6-foot-11 Petersburg, Va., High School star.

NCAA investigators arrived in Petersburg Friday, 24 hours after Malone signed a basketball scholarship to attend the University of Maryland, whose coach, Lefty Driesell, has said: "They can investigate us all they want. Any school would be foolish to do anything illegal about Moses because he's been the No. 1 guy and there's been so much attention on him all along."

The investigators, Len Nance, a former FBI agent, and Bill Hunt, a former Texas sportswriter and a graduate of Southern Methodist University law school, spent most of Friday morning with Malone and his mother, Mrs. Mary Malone, The Times-Dispatch said.

Malone refused to disclose the conversation, just saying, "It was personal stuff."

Mrs. Malone, however, told friends about the conversation and one of the friends told the newspaper Malone had given Nance and Hunt some damaging information on the recruiting methods of at least two schools. The source did not identify the two schools but said Maryland was not one of them.

The source was quoted as saying, "Mrs. Malone said one coach offered Moses $1,000, which would be delivered to him through an intermediary. She also said that another coach provided him with a rental car for a period of time. I understand he paid for it with his school's athletic department credit card."

Neither coach was identified.

Hicks upsets

AAU meet closes in agony, ecstacy

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

It was a night of ecstacy and agony at the National AAU Wrestling Championships Saturday night at the Long Beach Arena.

Gene Hicks, second in last year's Senior freestyle competition, scored the biggest upset of his 13-year career when he decisioned Olympic silver medalist and defending tournament champion John Peterson in the 180.5-pound division finals.

"That's the first time I've ever beaten John and it certainly ranks as the most satisfying win of my life," the 27-year-old North Carolina State graduate said following the grueling nine-minute match which ended, 6-4.

The win ran Hicks' three-day tournament record to 8-0 while Peterson, of Comstock, Wis., had to settle for third place and the bronze medal. Earlier, he lost to Ed Vatch, Madison, Wis., who was second in the final standings.

"I don't think Peterson was feeling good," said Hicks who also serves as team director for Athletes in Action based in Lancaster, Pa. "He looked tired. One thing I know, I was fading at the end and John was coming. I kept praying the clock would run out."

The most heartbroken athlete had to be Carl Adams of Ames, Iowa, the defending cahmpion of the 163-pound division.

Unbeaten after six matches, the assistant coach at Iowa State had to forfeit in the tournament when he sustained a torn muscle in his left shoulder and lost to eventual champion Stan Dziedzic of New York Athletic Club.

It was at this moment that Ed Adams informed his brother that his grandfather had died two nights earlier. "We kept the news from Carl because we felt his grandfather would have wanted it that way," said Ed. "We were all very close to him." The Adams brothers left immediately for Florida to attend funeral services.

Last year's wrestler of the year, Don Behm of East Lansing, Mich., stepped up 11 pounds in class but still won the 136-pound gold medal by defeating defending champion Dave Pruzansky of New York AC, 4-0. The win was Behm's eighth in a row.

Mack McCrady, 310-pound battler from Watsonville, Calif., clinched the heavyweight title by flipping 275-pound opponent Jeff Epperson, Middletown, Ohio, in 2:10.

McCrady, who plays defensive tackle for San Francisco State, emerged with a 5-0 record, including three pins. The 21-year-old wrestler automatically qualified for a berth on the U.S. team that will compete in the World Cup Games at the Canary Islands next month, as did all 10 division champions.

One wrestler declined the invitation in order to conduct three wrestling camps in the Southland this summer. Sergio Gonzalez of Venice is the reigning 114.5-pound champion after decisioning Heikichi Adegawa of New York City, 9-5. Sergio finished 7-0 but the 1972 Olympian gold medalist asked AAU officials to select another wrestler which will be determined by a wrestle-off.

Gene Davis, who resides in Lakewood, ran his perfect record to 7-0 by pinning Neil Duncan, Hicksville, N.Y., in the finals of the 149.5 division.

A crowd of 210 paid admissions were recorded during the evening session, while the afternoon count was 185.

. . . 'and in this corner, the Abominable Snowman'

You will recall past suggestions here to organize expeditions to bring back the Abominable Snowman of the Himalayan and the Lock Ness Monster and establish them as challengers for the heavyweight championship of the world.

From a standpoint of appearance, the two figure to fit in quite nicely.

The Abominable Snowman has huge feet and arms which hang to the ground and his vast body is covered with hair, except for his head. He communicates by gutteral sounds and is constantly accidentally crunching things, like door knobs and floor lamps and human beings.

The Snowman, you see, is a dead ringer for George Foreman, who is recognized by the heavyweights as their main man.

The Loch Ness Monster is characteristically a mammal. He is fair of complexion and his underbelly is round and ample. Not unlike Kilroy looking over a fence, his nose is soggy and spread, his eyes are closed and from a frontal approach he resembles a creature who has been punched repeatedly in the face.

The Loch Ness Monster, obviously, is the spitting image of Jerry Quarry.

The important value of our guys, of course, is to cloud the issue. As matters stand, the heavyweight tournament thing is entirely clear for the first time in several decades.

This state of affairs was created the other evening in New York when Joe Frazier encountered Jerry Quarry and punched his lights out. This match was made according to a couple of theories advanced by authorities who said that (a) Frazier finally could no longer fight and (b) Quarry finally could.

Listen to Bud Tucker on KABC (79) Sportstalk, 3-5 p.m.

To make a succinct story even shorter, Frazier rendered Quarry punchier than old Joe Louis, who refereed the bout, and Jerry contributed further to an incredible career of exiting the current championship pairings. This leaves Frazier around to challenge the winner of the next masterpiece on canvas which is George Foreman and Muhammad Ali, who used to be Cassius Clay and a quick and talented fighter.

He was also the greatest salesman the pastime has ever known, but there are many who fear this is the only ability Ali has retained. It is the opinion of the fist fighting experts that Foreman will reach out with one of his clubs and rock a dancing Ali into limbo.

Next, it will be Frazier's turn to get hit on the head and the heavyweight division will again be reduced to a drag.

You readily appreciate the need for new faces. Entirely refreshing would be the Abominable Snowman of the Himalayas and the Loch Ness Monster waving limbs and yelling and screaming from the fringe areas.

What any good heavyweight division needs is complication. Furthermore, even the most popular figures fade with the relentless years crowd in.

There is quite likely significance in the fact Ali is taking his sales presentation out of the country. Despite being the ring's foremost huckster, Ali will next unload his razzle dazzle on the uninitiated population of Zair, which is an area of the Belgian Congo.

It is not in the least likely the folks of Zair will be any match for a pitchman of Ali's calibre. I mean, this guy is major league. This is not a party selling cure-all out of a wagon or bangles and beads out of a valise.

Still, it is only so long this sort of pitch will be able to operate in Zair. Once the tar and feathers are mixed, the heavyweights will have to return to these shores and there should be sufficient competition waiting to restore interest.

As you know, the heavyweight champion is something special in this country. When he appears with his entourage, he should be worthy of his robes and his anthem:

Lo the conquering hero comes,
Followed by a bunch of bums.

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

The Gold Cup: Whit's delight

Hollywood Park offers the 35th running of the Gold Cup today and knowing that happy events have been known to repeat themselves, Charlie Whittingham will saddle a trio in quest of $150,000 in prize money for this mile and one-quarter invitational affair.

A year ago the Gold Cup proved a delightful lark for Whittingham as his task force of Kennedy Road, Quack and Cougar II collected the first three prizes, giving the Bald Eagle 10 percent of $138,000. Not bad for one minute, 59 and two-fifths seconds of running.

The previous two years, Whittingham had to be satisfied with only first money ($90,000) as Ack Ack and Quack took turns hurrying home in front. The latter is Whit's main reliance for Gold Cup '74. He'll also send out Tree of Knowledge and El Rey. Of lesser status than Quack, they merit a look and with $30,000 to second, $18,000 to third, $9,000 to fourth and $3,000 to fifth, it's better than letting them stand around in their stalls tearing at the hay rack.

HOLLYWOOD PARK CHANGED the Gold Cup format from an open handicap to an invitational three years ago and this delighted the owners. Under invitational conditions it costs nothing to enter or start. All you need is that invitation.

By contrast, Santa Anita's top race, the Big 'Cap, costs an owner $2,100 to get into the starting gate. It cost an owner $7,500 to start in the Kentucky Derby this year. Thus, as such things go, Hollypark is offering a real bargain.

In employing the invitational formula, Hollywood Park hoped to lure larger and better fields. But it came up short last year with only six entered, just three with a chance. After Whit's task force took the big money, there was $9,000 left for Briartic and $3,000 for Queen's Hustler. Only El Extrano (sixth and last) failed to earn a buck. He didn't come close, finishing 12 lengths behind fifth place Queen's Hustler.

THIS YEAR HOLLYPARK TRIED to lure Forego west from New York for the Gold Cup, but failed when it was decided to keep Forego there for the Suburban Handicap. He was given top weight of 130 pounds for the Gold Cup, which is four pounds less than New York gave him last time out when he was defeated.

The high weight honor (?) now falls to Quack at 128, with Ancient Title next in line at 125. They are considered today's Big Two and they get a three-pound shift in weights from when they last met in the mile and one-sixteenth Californian.

At equal weights of 126, they finished 1-2, Quack flying through the stretch to win it going away. The win was the first for Quack in a year. In fact his last previous win was in that same Californian in '73. As usual, Don Pierce did the riding. On that day Ancient Title had Howard Grant. Today Ancient Title will have regular rider Laffit Pincay. That, fellow racegoer, is quite a difference.

Following his win in '72, Quack missed by a nose to stablemate Kennedy Road last year in a Gold Cup that stands alone in histrionics and hysteria.

A CROWD OF 47,613 TURNED OUT that Sunday to cheer for Bill Shoemaker and jeer Mary Jones. Mean ol' Mary had the affront to take poor ol' Shoemaker off Cougar II and replace him with Pincay.

In a storybook finish, Kennedy Road won by a nose from Quack with Cougar third, five lengths back. If you had written the story for the movies, Mervyn Leroy would have told you quickly what you could do with it.

But it happened in real life and everyone went home happy—except Mary. She was chastised, deserving or not, and did permit Shoemaker to get back on Cougar for the Sunset Handicap and they won it.

IT SEEMS STRANGE, but there was no such hullabaloo two years ago when Shoe dropped Quack to ride Buskashi in the Gold Cup. Shoe had been the regular rider for Quack, but elected to ride for his good friend Marje Everett in the Gold Cup.

Whittingham then signed Pincay to handle Quack, but he was destined not to make the trip. Just days before the Gold Cup, a horse named Happy Behave fell with Pincay and Laffit was hospitalized with a broken collar bone, Pierce getting the ride. Don made the most of it, winning by five and setting a track and world record of 1:58.1. Quack and Pierce have been together ever since.

All of which could be interpreted to mean that it's okay for a jock to drop a horse, but it's unfair for an owner to drop a jock.

This year all is serene. Nobody's taken Shoe off a horse for the Gold Cup and he'll ride Tree of Knowledge for Whittingham. "Tree" is not in the same class with Quack and Ancient Title, but he's in there with 115 pounds and that might put him a notch above the Big Two. Quack failed with 127 a year ago to Kennedy Road's 120. As they say around the backstretch, weight is the old equalizer.

WHILE WHITTINGHAM SHOOTS for his fourth consecutive Gold Cup, Shoemaker will be trying for No. six. Pierce and Pincay have won it but once each. Naturally Shoemaker has had more mounts in the Gold Cup than Pierce or Pincay, having started back in 1951 with a third on Be Fleet. Remember 1951? That was the year Citation won the Gold Cup to become horsedom's first millionaire.

Shoemaker won it three years in a row with Swaps (1956), Round Table (1957) and Gallant Man (1958). He didn't get there again until 1971 with Ack Ack, although he would have made it again in 1964 with Colorado King. A five day suspension cost him that ride and Shoe spent the day watching the races in the Gold Room.

As Colorado King was being led into the winner's circle, Shoemaker turned to a friend and said: "Lunch today cost me ten thousand."

A's walk past Royals

OAKLAND (AP) — Gene Tenace drew a bases-loaded walk in the ninth inning to force home the tie-breaking run and give the Oakland A's a 3-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals Saturday.

Sal Bando doubled off the left field fence to lead off the ninth off Paul Splittorff (7-7) and Reggie Jackson sent him to third with a single to left.

After Joe Rudi was walked intentionally to load the bases, Gene Garber replaced Splittorff and walked Tenace on a 3-2 pitch.

The A's took the lead with two unearned runs in the third inning. Angel Mangual singled and, with one out, Bill North was safe on an error by shortstop Fred Patek, who dropped a double-play toss from second baseman Cookie Rojas.

Bert Campaneris doubled to score Mangual, and North scored on a sacrifice fly by Bando.

The Royals tied it up in the fourth. Rojas singled and Amos Otis doubled. Rojas scored on a wild pitch by winner Ken Holtzman (8-8) and a single by Jim Wohlford scored Otis.

Grich's 3 RBI propel Orioles

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Bobby Grich knocked in three runs with a double and a sacrifice fly Saturday, powering the Baltimore Orioles to a 7-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Ross Grimsley (8-7) scattered seven hits for his third consecutive victory.

The Orioles broke a 2-2 tie in the fifth inning after Mark Belanger beat out a bunt toward first and continued to second on George Scott's wild throw to loser Kevin Kobel (3-6) covering first. Belanger took third on an infield out and scored on Grich's fly ball.

Baltimore added a pair of insurance runs in the seventh on two walks and Grich's double.

Morgan carries Cincy

CINCINNATI (UPI)—Joe Morgan hit a two-run homer and a sacrifice fly to drive in all of the Cincinnati Reds' runs in a 3-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves Saturday as Fred Norman scored his seventh victory against five losses.

A single by Cesar Geronimo followed by Morgan's seventh home run of the season gave the Reds two runs in the first inning off loser Phil Niekro and wiped out a one-run lead the Braves had taken in the top of the inning when Hank Aaron singled home Darrell Evans.

Evans' seventh home run of the season with one out in the top of the third inning tied the score at 2-2.

Four-hits Bosox for 13th victory

BOSTON (UPI)—Even without his reknowned spitter, the Boston Red Sox would rather Gaylord Perry went somewhere else to play.

Perry, baseball's hottest pitcher, fired a four-hitter against the American League East division leaders Saturday to hand them an 11-0 defeat in a nationally-televised game. The Red Sox came back in the second game of the day-night doubleheader to defeat Gaylord's brother, Jim, 8-3.

"You just got to go as hard as you can," said Perry, who struck out eight and walked only one in recording his 13th consecutive victory.

Perry, whose only loss came on opening day against the New York Yankees, said it took a while to get used to not using decoys to disguise his spitter.

"It felt funny not doing this," he said, demonstrating some of the motions he used to decoy batters as well as umpires.

The big pitcher conducted a "clinic" for umpires in his first appearance at Boston in early April to demonstrate his forkball, which he said was being mistaken for a spitter. Although he has admitted to using a spitter in the past, Perry maintains he doesn't throw it anymore.

"I've developed a good forkball and I showed it to them."

Frank Duffy, who had four hits including two doubles and a three-run homer and five RBI, said Perry was better off not throwing the spitter.

"It's made him a faster pitcher," said Duffy. "He isn't worried about decoying anyone anymore," Duffy said.

Perry, who used to pitch every fourth day, has been every fifth day this year.

"That's one thing that has helped me throw harder—the extra day's rest," said the 6-foot-4, 215-pound righthander.

Perry's victory, his 13th complete game this season, lowered his earned run average to 1.29.

Brett records 3rd shutout of season

CHICAGO (UPI)—Southpaw Ken Brett, scattering eight singles in his third shutout of the season, survived an early, steady downpour Saturday and contributed a two-run single as he pitched the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 6-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Brett, winning for the ninth time against four losses, struck out seven men, didn't walk any and retired 14 batters in a row.

The 25-year old lefthander now has won eight of his last nine contests and pitched eight complete games this year.

The Pirates jumped off to a 1-0 lead in the second inning off loser Ken Frailing when Richie Zisk slammed a 1-2 pitch into the centerfield bleachers for his seventh homer of the season.

Singles by Willie Stargell, Zisk and Manny Sanguillen started Frailing's downfall after one out in the fourth inning. A wild pitch by Frailing sent the runners to second and third and Kurt Bevacqua was purposely passed to fill the bases. Horacio Pina, called in to replace Frailing, hit Mario Mendoza, forcing in Zisk. Brett then slammed a single to score Sanguillen and Bevacqua, capping a four-run inning.

Mets' Seaver to miss next start

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Although team officials insist there is nothing seriously wrong, New York Mets pitcher Tom Seaver probably will miss his next pitching turn.

"The doctor says I can't run for a few days," Seaver explained Saturday. "I'm the kind of pitcher who has to run between starts, so I may miss one turn."

Tigers score three runs in ninth to beat Yankees

NEW YORK (UPI)—Jim Northrup scored the go-ahead run with one out in the ninth on Graig Nettles' throwing error and pinch-hitter Willie Horton delivered a two-run bases loaded single Saturday as Detroit erupted for three runs in the final inning to beat the New York Yankees 4-1.

With one out in the ninth, Northrup walked and moved to third on Ben Oglivie's single. Bill Freehan then grounded to third and Nettles' throw home in an attempt to get the sliding Northrup was wide, allowing Oglivie to move to third and Freehan to second. Aurelio Rodriguez then was intentionally walked and Horton, batting for Jerry Moses, singled to left to score Oglivie and Freehan.

John Hiller pitched the final 2 2-3 innings to get the win, his ninth in thirteen decisions, while Dick Tidrow took the loss.

McCovey leads Padres to 6-2 win over Astros

HOUSTON (UPI)—Willie McCovey scored three runs—one on his fifth homer of the season—and Derrel Thomas and John Grubb banged out three hits apiece to lead the San Diego Padres to a 6-2 victory over the Houston Astros Saturday night.

McCovey's solo shot in the fourth inning came off Don Wilson and two innings later the Padres got two more runs on Thomas' run-scoring single and a sacrifice fly by Dave Roberts.

Randy Jones, with ninth inning relief help from Vicente Romo and Dave Tomlin, received credit for his fourth win in 15 decisions.

ABA gears for war with NBA

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — The American Basketball Assn., gearing for an all-out war with the National Basketball Assn., plans to operate a 10-team league again this season although the location of one franchise is undetermined.

Emerging from a 14-hour meeting late Friday night, commissioner Mike Storen announced the following action:

—Resolved to press their $300 million antitrust suit against the NBA.

—Approved the sale of the Carolina Cougars franchise by owner Tedd Munchak to an unidentified group that has a $500,000 deposit and has not decided on a location although Cincinnati or Los Angeles were mentioned as the most likely sites.

—Decided to let another unidentified group make arrangements for buying the Memphis franchise and keeping it in the Tennessee city.

—Approved the sale of the Virginia Squires franchise to a Norfolk group headed by banker John Bernhardt. The financially-beleaguered franchise had been taken over by the league from owner Earl Foreman.

—Learned that San Diego Conquistadors owner Leonard Bloom had obtained a lease to play in the 14,500-seat San Diego Arena instead of the 3,200-seat concourse where they played the past two seasons.

—Hoped to expand to Los Angeles and St. Louis with new franchises in the 1975-76 season.

Winless Forrest nears golf title

Combined News Services

AKRON, Ohio — Forrest Fezler is all alone—and that's just the way he likes it.

The 24-year-old Californian shot a 36-32—68 Saturday to take a one-stroke lead over Jim Jamieson and Tom Kite going into today's final round of the $170,000 American Golf Classic at Firestone Country Club. Fezler was at two-under par 208 for the tournament, while Kite and Jamieson were at one-under 209 over the par-70 1,780-yard south course.

Those three were the only ones in the surviving field of 70 able to break par for three rounds. Fezler and Kite have never won and Jamieson has taken only one tour title.

But it's nothing new for Fezler to be at the head of the pace at the end of the third round of the Classic. He held the same position last year with an eight-under 208 "but I let it go in the final round" when he had a five-over 75 as Bruce Crampton came on to win.

"I'm not going to lose it this year," he said. "I'm not going to let it go."

Fezler, from San Jose, who had a fairly poor start this season, has played well lately.

"You can't play badly every week," said Fezler, who has already won $45,526 this year. "I came into this week with a fairly positive attitude and confidence in my game.

"A lot of top names are missing from this tournament, but you don't need a Nicklaus, Trevino or Weiskopf to make a tournament anymore. We've had a lot of good, young, players come out of the school in the past two to three years and now they are starting to win some tournaments," he said.

Bob Unser wins pole for '500'

LONG POND, Pa. (UPI) — Bobby Unser of Albuquerque, N.M., captured the pole position Saturday for the June 30 Schaefer 500 United States Auto Club (USAC) championship car race at the Pocono International Raceway with a top speed of 182.5 miles per hour.

Unser was not fast man on the track as three-time Indianapolis winner A.J. Foyt turned one lap of 185.759 on his first qualifying lap before a puff of blue smoke signaled a burned piston on his Coyote Foyt racer and sent him to the garage for repairs.

A total of 28 cars qualified in Saturday's first-day runs. The balance of the 33-car starting field will qualify today.

Former 49ers head all-star contest today

Four members of the 1973-74 Long Beach State basketball team—Clifton and Roscoe Pondexter, Glenn McDonald and Leonard Gray—will spearhead a team of collegiate all-stars when they meet the Philippine World Cup team today at 3 p.m. at L.A. State.

McDonald, Gray and the Pondexters were taken in the first three rounds of the National Basketball Assn. draft after leading the 49ers to a 24-2 record last year.

Among the early entries are David Games, the 13-year-old Bellflower youth who was runnerup in the Long Beach Match Play Championship, and Jim Baber, the Moore League champ from Wilson.

UC Irvine girl in net finals

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (UPI) — Top-seeded Carrie Meyer of Florida's Mary Mount College and Lindsay Morse of the UC-Irvine, Saturday gained the finals of the National Women's Collegiate Tennis Championships.

Miss Meyer defeated Utah's Jane Stratton, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2 and Miss Morse, who also reached the doubles finals, defeated No. 2 Rayni Fox of Rollins College in Florida, 6-2, 6-3.

Eight girls in the tournament were picked by tennis officials to go on to the Wightman Cup Junior circuit. They are Fox, Jo Anne Russel, Morse, Mary Hamm of Trinity, Linda Lewis of UCLA, Sue Boyle of Arizona State, Diane Desfor of Southern California and Candy Reynolds of Southern Methodist. Two alternates for the tour were chosen—Nancy Yeargin of Rollins and Robin Kahn of Long Beach State.

A LITTLE CON GAME

Match play is tricky. You have to play your own game, but you can't ignore your opponent, either. What you see ain't always what you get.

Say you're one-down in a head-and-head battle, and your man starts rifling those drivers across the corners, taking short cuts. To stay up with him, you cut corners, too.

But I don't always hit the club that I pull out of my bag first, particularly when it isn't my honor.

It never hurts to pull a stick out of your bag, even if you know you're not gonna use it. I've whipped a driver out on a short par four, and my opponent couldn't wait to bust his driver. Then he'd fly off into the woods and I'd hit a 2-iron down the middle.

It's an advantage to hit second on par threes. If you're thinking about hitting a 3-iron, take out a 4-iron. Take a couple of easy swings and limber up while your guy makes up his mind what to hit. Odds are that he'll hit the same stick you have in your hand. Then you hit a 3-iron. If he hits his 4-iron against the flag, then you've got some adjustments to make.

Haynie charges to 3rd round lead

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Sandra Haynie, one of the top money winners in women's pro golf, charged into a one-stroke lead over Sandra Palmer Saturday in the third round of the $50,000 Ladies PGA Championship.

Miss Haynie fashioned a par-73 for a 54-hole score of 215 at the Pleasant Valley Country Club.

Miss Palmer, who fired a record 66 Friday, slipped to a 76.

Miss Haynie, who won the LPGA championship in 1965, had two bogeys which she offset with a pair of birdies on route to her round on the sun-baked 6,130-yard course.

Laura Baugh, fired a one-under-par 74 but trails Miss Haynie by 11 strokes.

OSU lass wins college golf

EL CAJON (AP) — Oregon State's Mary Budke played steady golf Saturday, firing a 75, to win the Women's Intercollegiate Golf Championship by four shots over Marga Stubblefield of Hawaii.

Rollins College won the four-girl team championship by six strokes with a four-day total of 1,281. Miami was second with a 1,287. Furman was third at 1,289.

Host San Diego State eked out a one-shot victory over UCLA for the two-girl championship. San Diego State had a 625 total while UCLA was at 626 and Oregon State finished third, 630.

Strange's clutch putt title decider

SANTEE (AP) — Wake Forest freshman Curtis Strange eagled the final hole with a seven-foot putt Saturday for a one-stroke victory in the 77th annual National Collegiate Athletic Assn. golf championships.

The eagle gave Strange an even par 72 and a four-day total of 282, six under par, and enabled him to slip past two University of Florida golfers, Phil Hancock and Gary Koch, each of whom finished a shot behind.

Strange hit a one-iron second shot to the 540-yard, par five 18th to set up his winning putt which curled all the way around the cup before dropping.

The eagle also gave Wake Forest a two-shot victory over Florida for the team championship, 1,158 to 1,160. Houston was third at 1,176 and the University of Southern California had 1,177. Long Beach State finished back in the field with a 1,193-stroke total.

Koch and Hancock each had final round 71s. It was the second time that Koch had finished second in the NCAA, but the late effort by Strange kept the Gaters from repeating as team champions.

Georgia's Bill Kratzert was fourth, getting a 66 for a 285. Long Beach State's to finishers were Tony Campregher and Beau Baugh, with 293s. Baugh shot a 73 Saturday; Campregher a 71. The 49ers' other entrants included Bob Abbey (72-301), Greg Hetzer (77-306), and Jeff Newell (73-311).

Strange had a 65 Friday which tied the NCAA low-round record and get him back into the race for the title.

NINE L.B. GOLFERS IN STATE—AM

Nine Long Beach golfers, headed by former champion John Richardson, begin qualifying Monday in the California State Amateur Golf Championships at Pebble Beach and Cypress Point.

Richardson, the 1961 winner and reigning SoCal Amateur champion, also will compete for the Southern Section in the North-South matecches today at Pebble Beach.

Other Long Beachers in the field are Peter Graves, Rick Johnson, Dave Williams, John McMonegal, Tom McCutcheon, Paul Mattson, Chuck Wallace, Steve Rhorer and Ed Bratney.

NCAA tennis to Stanford, Whitlinger

Stanford's John Whitlinger, routed in the first set by teammate Chico Hagey's big serves, took charge Saturday with his two-fisted backhand, 1-6, 6-3, 6-3, 6-1, to win the National Collegiate Athletic Assn. singles tennis championship.

Victories by fifth-seeded Whitlinger, only a sophomore, and the unranked but former all-America Hagey in Friday's semifinals clinched Stanford's second consecutive NCAA team triumph.

Stanford made it a sweep when Whitlinger and Jim Delaney defeated Southern Cal's John Andrews and Sashi Menon, 6-4, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4 to win the NCAA doubles crown. The Cardinals finished with 30 points, five more than runnerup Southern Cal.

Whitlinger, a four-time Wisconsin high school champion, succeeds Alex (Sandy) Mayer of Stanford as NCAA singles champion. Mayer quit the team this season and turned professional.

Motor Patrol tumbles Peterson, boosts lead

League-leading Motor Patrol exploded for five runs on seven hits in the first inning but never managed another hit the rest of the way while downing Peterson Post, 5-1, in Saturday American Legion action at Blair Field.

The Patrol win, combined with San Pedro's 5-3 loss to North Long Beach, gave Motor Patrol a one-and-one-half game lead over Whittier Gold, and a three game lead over San Pedro.

Larry Brown came on in the first inning and pitched no-hit relief for four-and-two-thirds innings for Peterson.

Ken Filinuk singled home one run for North Long Beach in the eighth inning. His drive went through the San Pedro outfield, allowing another run to score. Filinuk was nailed at the plate trying to stretch the error for three extra bases.

Shua leveled its record at 3-3 with a 4-1 win over Lakewood. Pat Estes doubled and singled, and drove in a run in the fifth.

Mark Badet tripled home two runs in the top of the eighth inning to lead the Whittier Golds past Carson, 3-0 at Carson High. Dan Luongo went the distance for the Golds, striking out eight.

Larry Millea struck out nine and Paul Bezart singled home the go-ahead run in the top of the ninth inning to lead third place Alamitos Bay past the Whittier Whites, 4-2. Bezart scored on a two-base throwing error.

Are you happy at the gas station?
And miserable everyplace else?

Over the last six months, one burning question has swept America: "What kind of mileage d'ya get?"

In response to it, our manufacturers have come out with a rash of small cars overnight.

Of course, it's not easy to build a small car overnight. So a number of new questions are being raised about them like: "Where do I put my legs?" "Why can't I sit up straight?" "What do I do with my luggage?" and "Must I leave half my family at home?"

At Fiat, we've been building small cars for 70 years. We worked out the problems of getting good mileage years ago. But we've also had a lot of time along the way to figure out how to make a small car that doesn't make you pay for driving a small car.

We make your legs happy.

In the Fiat 124 you see below, you won't find yourself with your knees scrunched up somewhere near your chin. By taking away some of the room normally used for the engine and giving it to the passengers, we've given the 124 more legroom than a Lincoln Continental, a Cadillac Eldorado, and a Chrysler Imperial.*

We make your head happy.

By making the 124 coupe a little boxy instead of sleek, we've given it more headroom than a Mercedes 450 and a Rolls Royce.* This height, plus exceptionally large windows, keeps you from the claustrophobia you often get in small cars.

We make the people in the back seat happy.

Most small cars promise room for a family of four. And they deliver it, if two of the four are under six years old.

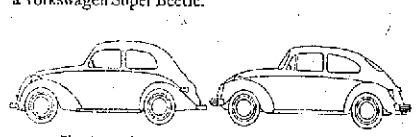

The 124 gives you enough room in the back for two children 6'6" or an exceptionally large mother-in-law and a St. Bernard.

We even make your luggage happy.

If there isn't much room for people in most small cars, there's even less room for what the people have to carry.

Here, too, the 124 is an exception. There's room in the trunk for 7 pieces of luggage.

In fact, there's almost twice as much trunk space as a Volkswagen Super Beetle.

The 1937 Fiat. The 1974 VW.
In 1939 we stopped making ours.

We make you happy to drive it.

The way the 124 handles is by far its strongest feature. It has excellent acceleration, and it'll cruise faster than you'd normally care to go. It corners flat and sits solidly on the road.

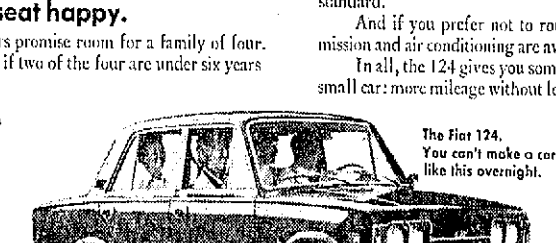

The car has self-adjusting, power-assisted, four-wheel disc brakes.

Radial tires that run $100 extra on most cars are standard.

And if you prefer not to rough it, automatic transmission and air conditioning are available.

In all, the 124 gives you something hard to find in a small car: more mileage without less everything else.

Fishing chances: albacore? Perris

The first catch of albacore by sportfishermen may come this weekend. That is strictly a wild guess, but I know that some owners of long-range sport cruisers are at San Diego—or perhaps WERE there—and were ready to travel long distances to find the longfins.

Inasmuch as this column was written Friday afternoon, all I could do was make such a wild guess. However, commercial boats had caught some albacore 335 miles dues west of San Miguel Island in water ranging around 61 and 62 degrees, what the experts consider perfect for albacore.

A spokesman at the Department of Fish and Game, who has been following the albacore migration daily and carefully recording every movement, said Friday that he believes the longfins will show at the Dumping Grounds or the Showboat Bank south of San Diego by today.

If so, the fish probably will be caught on private charters or by individuals who own and operate their own boats. Sportfishing boats at the three San Diego landings are so busy with that hot yellowtail bite that they have refused to gamble on a long run to the banks mentioned in the paragraph above.

The DFG spokesman made his projection from a close study of the hot and cold currents. One thing is certain: Albacore are not coming into the warm water where the yellows are having such a frolic, much to the delight of the sportfishermen.

NOW LET'S DISCUSS THE GREAT event of freshwater fishing—the opening of Lake Perris on Monday, July 1, and I would like to couple the good news with the bad. Sample-testing of the fishery at Perris indicates that there will be rainbows to two pounds on that opening day and even later if the water doesn't get too hot.

That's the good news; now for the other. There is room for only 1,100 cars to park at Perris and that may hold down the crowd. There are only 30 rental boats, all of which are reserved for that opening day. Those may be available later, and if you'd like to try for one, call the concessionaire, Terry Syrett, at (714) 657- 7238. With a shoreline of 10 miles, most of which is suited for shore fishing, you have a chance to try that type of angling.

The fee per car is $1 and a similar fee will be charged for launching private boats. There are two big launching ramps, but all docking facilities are primitive.

Perris has been open to water sports since last April, but not to fishing. The lake is wide open for water-skiing and just how this will affect fishing is something that must be decided at a later date. My own opinion is that there must be some division of the two sports and and an authoritative patrol system.

There were two or three large beaches that will be set aside for swimming and out of bounds to the skiers, and with the temperature running in the high 90s that may be one of the most popular sports.

PERRIS WILL HAVE SOMETHING for everybody —fishing, swimming, water-skiing, scuba diving, mountain climbing, rock-hounding, but it will be hot in the summer months. Also, here's another warning: Watch out for rattlesnakes. That entire area always has had a big population of rattlers.

Skiers will be encouraged to use the boat-in southeast shore. There are no overnight camping facilities and won't be until sometime next year when the State Parks and Recreation Department hopes to have 550 sites on the shore and on Alessandro Island, a picturesque spot in the center of the lake. There will be 175 sites with full hookups.

The subcatchable rainbow trout that were planted in Perris last October and November have grown fast and FAT on the great quantity of nutrients in the newly formed lake. Also, possum shrimp, a staple food for striped bass in the north, apparently have come down through the California Aqueduct and the rainbows have had ample food from the shrimp.

Just how soon the 50,000 catfish that were planted will shown on stringers remains to be seen. The Department of Fish and Game also planted 500 Alabama spotted bass in the hope that those remarkable fish would spawn before the July 1 opening. Kenneth Aasen, biologist for the DFG and also the California Water Project, says that the shrimp presumably are in the other lakes of the chain.

THERE ARE SEVERAL HIGHWAYS that lead to Perris, but I am listing only the two main ones. Take Highway 60 through Riverside and turn off on Moreno Beach Drive. The other: Riverside Freeway to Highway 395, then south to the Ramona EXpressway, which goes directly to the gate.

Some persons have suggested the Highway 60 route because there will be less traffic, but for Long Beach residents, I suggest the other. Traffic will be heavy no matter which way you go. If I know fishermen and I think that I do, they will get to that lake if they have to use Jeeps on cow trails.

The gate will open at 6 a. m. and close at 10 p. m., but fishing hours will be from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m.

When Perris was opened in April, more than 75,000 persons went there that month. The traffic slowed a bit in May (55,000) and June figures are not available. The Department of Parks and Recreation spokesmen say that almost three-quarters of a million will see Perris this year. Al Ulm is the area manager for the DPR.

If you reserve a boat, you will find the prices rather high, like this: Rowboats, $2.50 per hour, $6 half-day and $9 full day; boats with 4½ horsepower. outboard motors, $4 per hour, $10 for half-day and $15 for full day; with 7½ hp. outboard, $4.50 per hour, $11.50 half-day and $16 all day.

When the area is filled with cars and rigs, no other vehicles may enter until others leave.

U.S. tops Japan on 3 Huizenga homers

TOKYO (AP) — Ken Huizenga, a junior from USC, ripped three home runs Saturday, leading a touring team of American collegiate baseball all-stars to a 7-6 victory over Japan's national college team in the opening game of the third United States-Japanese Collegiate World Series.

Huizenga, a 20-year-old junior outfielder, delivered his third homer in the 10th inning, snapping a 6-6 tie.

The strapping slugger had crashed a three-run homer in the sixth inning, erasing a 2-0 Japanese lead.

Japan regained the lead with a four-run seventh that included a homer by Toshiyuki Yoshizawa. But Huizenga's two-run homer helped the Americans tie it again in the eighth.

Oklahoma's Stan Meek earned the victory with a one-hit relief job after he took over for the American starter, George Milke of USC.

A crowd of 25,000 watched the opener of the seven-game series with Crown Prince Akihito throwing out the first ball.

Saturday's Results
Brazil 3, Zaire 0.
Scotland 1, Yugoslavia 1.

The Brazilians, after going two games without scoring a goal, labored to overcome inexperienced Zaire 3-0 at Gelsenkirchen.

Yugoslavia and Scotland tied 1-1 at Frankfurt and finished even on points with Brazil in Group 2. Yugoslavia, with a 10-1 goals aggregate, and Brazil, 3-0, advanced while Scotland, 3-1, was eliminated by one goal.

In an emotional affair at Hamburg, East Germany upset favored West Germany, 1-0, in the first-ever soccer game between the countries.

The two Germanys were sure of advancing before the historic game began. Chile, the only other team with a chance in Group 1, was held to a 0-0 draw by unrated Australia on a rain-ruined field at Berlin earlier in the day.

East Germany topped the group with five points. West Germany had four, Chile two and Australia one.

With East Germany and Yugoslavia heading their groups, and Poland already sure of qualifying from Group 4, the East European countries emerged as the strong teams at the halfway stage.

The top favorites, West Germany and Brazil, were disappointing.

West Germany, brilliantly generaled by captain Franz Beckenbauer, dominated the game against East Germany but failed dismally in marksmanship.

Twelve minutes from the end Beckenbauer's men paid the penalty for poor shotling. Juergen Sparwasser chased a long ball down the middle, eluded two opponents and shot a fine winning goal for East Germany.

Harvard wins rowing 'title'

SEATTLE (AP) — The Harvard varsity eight jumped to an early lead over the University of Washington Saturday and held it over the 2,000-meter course to win the Washington Invitational Regatta in course record time.

The victory gave Harvard the unofficial but generally acknowledged national collegiate supremacy in rowing.

The Crimson had a slight advantage over the Huskies at the 200-meter mark in the choppy waters of Lake Washington. They expanded that lead to nearly one length by the halfway point and widened their margin in calmer waters near the end of the course.

The event pitted Harvard and Washington as respective winners of the Eastern and Western Sprint Championships earlier in the season.

Quack, Ancient Title Gold Cup foes today

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Staff Writer

A three-horse entry headed by world record holder Quack, and former sprint flash Ancient Title top a 10-horse field for today's 35th running of the $150,000 Hollywood Gold Cup Invitational at Hollywood Park.

Quack, Tree Of Knowledge and El Rey will go postward as an entry because of trainer Charlie Whittingham's ownership interest in El Rey. The three-pronged entry figures to be the solid betting favorite.

With Forego, considered by Eastern horse racing experts as No. 1 stakes horse in the country, having been upset in his last start, Quack and Ancient Title now figure prominently in the national race for honors among older handicap horses. A Gold Cup victory certainly would enhance their Eclipse Award status.

Quack captured the 1972 Gold Cup and equalled the world's mile and one-quarter record of 1:58.1 in the process. Last year, in a dramatic Gold Cup renewal, Quack missed by a nose to stablemate Kennedy Road.

The sizable son of T.V. Lark, who has a career bankroll of $514,400 and comes off a victory in the $115,900 Californian last month, beating Ancient Title, could become only the second horse to score more than one triumph in the Gold Cup with a win today. Native Diver won the classic in 1965-66-67.

Ancient Title, who has banked $253,700 this year and has amassed $440,470 in three racing seasons, shook his sprint label with a victory in the mile and one-half Strub Stakes at Santa Anita and a runnerup effort in the mile and one-quarter Santa Anita Handicap. Ancient Title has grabbed four added-money events this year and fought off several challenges before succumbing to Quack in the Californian.

Probable third choice in the wagering will be Finalista, a surprise entry who was to have been shipped to Nebraska for a $100,000 race there. However when trainer L. J. Brooks noted the temperatures consistently in the 90s in Omaha, he changed his mind and entered Finalista, who raced the year's fastest mile and one-eighth two weeks ago at Hollywood Park.

Another surprise entry was Kentuckian, who fooled trainer Jerry Fanning by feeling great all week and not showing any signs of the tough race he had in the Rolling Green Handicap last Saturday at Golden Gate Fields.

One intended starter, Plunk, wasn't entered. He first was named for the seventh race on today's card, then switched to the Gold Cup and just before entries were drawn, put back in the allowance race.

Chris Evert sweeps

NEW YORK (UPI)—Chris Evert scored a sweep of the Triple Crown for fillies Saturday at Belmont Park when she sped to an easy win in the 58th running of the $114,200 Coaching Club American Oaks.

The 3-year-old daughter of Swoon's Son-Miss Carmie, who previously had won the Acorn Stakes and the Mother Goose Stakes, joined Dark Mirage and Shuvee as the only fillies to win all three races since they were combined in 1961.

Fiesta Libre was second, 3½ lengths back of the winner, with Maud Muller finishing third, a half-length farther back in the field of 10 3-year-old fillies.

Solidly backed by the crowd of 30,269, Chris Evert paid $3.80, $3.00 and $2.20 after covering the distance in 2:28⅘.

MONMOUTH—Mo Bay ($16.80) upset a field of 10 grass runners to win the $28,525 Oceanport Handicap at a mile and 1-16. With Bill Tichenor in the saddle, the winner scored a neck decision over Shane's Prince with a 1:42hr5 clocking.

LIBERTY BELL—Veteran jockey Buck Tornburg won his second stakes victory in a week when he rode Ringmistress ($25.40) to a five-length upset in the $28,200 Milady Handicap. The winner clocked 1:11⅘ for six furlongs.

DELAWARE—Seven-year-old gelding Nobleman ($8.40) responded to strong urging in the stretch by jockey Wayne Bernardi and won the six furlong feature race in 1:10⅘.

DETROIT—Tom Tulle ($7.80) ran away from the field through the stretch and scored a 2½-length victory over Rastaferian in the $100,000 Michigan Mile. Ridden by Craig Perret, the winner raced the mile and ⅛ in 1:50⅘.

Sugar Ray connects with vicious right

Chicago, 1951

Chicago Stadium is again the scene of a 15 round fight to determine a championship of the world. This time Jake LaMotta is putting his middleweight crown on the line against Sugar Ray Robinson.

LaMotta is a bull-like brawler who moves in on his opponents relentlessly. He won his title in 1949 by beating Marcel Cerdan in Detroit. LaMotta, who has never been knocked off his feet, has fought Robinson five times over a period of ten years and has won only once.

Sugar Ray is a boxer. His footwork and ability to put together beautifully timed combinations have caused him to be rated one of the great ones in ring history. Robinson is the welterweight champion and will give up that title if he can win here tonight.

In the opening round, LaMotta rushes in on Robinson and scores enough to win it. Robinson takes to the offense in the second and outboxes the aggressive LaMotta through the fourth.

At the bell for round five, it's a resurgent LaMotta plunging into the fray and throwing blows from every possible angle. Robinson seems to be tiring.

In the eighth the question of Sugar Ray's stamina is forgotten as he comes out with new fire and begins to teach Jake a lesson in the finer points of boxing and punching skills.

LaMotta is being battered all over the ring but refuses to go down.

The slaughter continues into the 13th round. The champion is helpless. The ringside physician signals referee Frank Sekora to end it.

At 2:04 of the 13th round, Jake LaMotta can make the claim of having never been off his feet during his entire career. But on this February 14, 1951 the claim to the middleweight championship of the world belongs to Sugar Ray Robinson.

Aztecs take on New York

The Los Angeles Aztecs soccer team takes on the New York Cosmos today at East Los Angeles College stadium, 3 p.m.

The Aztecs had won eight in a row before being upended by San Jose last Sunday, 2-1.

"Our team learned a lot from the loss," said Aztec coach Alex Perolli. "We were taking things too easy. We had a number of near-goals in the San Jose game which should have been goals. We got a little lazy."

The New York lineup boasts nine veterans of British professional soccer.

Backus battered in Berlin bout

BERLIN (AP) — European champion Eckhard Dagge of West Germany battered Billy Backus' right eye and stopped the former world welterweight champion from Canastota, N.Y., in the third round of a scheduled 10-round fight Friday night.

Q. The way I hear it, Reggie Jackson is at the center of dissension on the Oakland A's. He is probably the biggest star in baseball today, so is his trouble the Big Head, or is it racial? — Cotton Rollins, Ft. Lauderdale.

A. Jackson is an extremely well-adjusted, carefree star with many good qualities, such as charitable work and the ability to make money as an investor. His problem with some of his A's teammates is racial, but not as you think. His black brothers think he trucks with whites too much.

Jackson, whose grandmother was Spanish, explains: "My father didn't and still doesn't know what color is. I grew up with white kids (near Philadelphia), played ball with them, went home with them. I didn't know what prejudice was until I got to Arizona State and the football coach told me to stop dating white girls."

Jackson, divorced from his Mexican-American wife, dates several white girls now. "There are 200 million people in this country," he says, "and 180 million of them are white. It's only natural most of my friends are white."

Q. What makes WFL owners put up all that money to buck an established game like the NFL when they must see it's going to take all of their bankrolls to stay in business? Maybe I don't understand high finance. — Ted Carter, Philadelphia.

A. Many money men — such as Nelson (Bunker) Hunt, Lamar's older and richer brother — look upon a WFL franchise in bargain terms. Hunt was offered the San Diego Chargers for $17 million. "What's the best buy," asks Bunker, "to put up $16 million for a franchise at Tampa, or $250,000 for a WFL franchise and spend the rest of your money building the team?" But Bunker overlooks two things: Tampa will get $2 million a year from TV, and for the WFL there is no possibility of a merger or inclusion in the NFL — ever. In any case, Bunker is not about to invest in either league. His game is racing, and he owns more thoroughbreds than any other man in the world.

Q. I had the honor this spring of playing in a pro-am celebrity tournament with Joe DiMaggio, and I realized we don't have sports heroes like him anymore, reserved and dignified and keeping his problems to himself. Why is it today's stars are always out front and experts on everything? — Joseph Reynolds, Chicago.

A. Media pressure is greater than in DiMaggio's day and, what's more, the action is coast-to-coast. But DiMaggio always was essentially the Quiet Man. The classic story on this trait is the time a sportswriter sat in a hotel lobby near DiMaggio and his taciturn friends, Frank Crosetti and Tony Lazzeri, clocking their conversation. After an hour and 20 minutes of silence, DiMaggio cleared his throat. Crosetti said, "What did you say?" and Lazzeri said, "Shut up, he didn't say nothing."

400 meter record

WARSAW (UPI)—Poland's Irena Szewinska set a world record of 49.9 seconds in the 400 meters Saturday during an international track and field competition. Szewinska, 27, improved the former record which belonged to Marylin Neufville of Jamaica, by 1.1 seconds.

Nitehawks, Manny's play doubleheader

The hungriest team in the Western Softball Congress, Manny's of San Bernardino, comes to Joe Rodgers Field this afternoon for a 5 p.m. doubleheader with the Long Beach Nitehawks.

Three weeks ago San Bernardino was tied with the Nitehawks for first place with an 8-3 mark. The visitors now carry a 9-9 record, while the Nitehawks have prospered to 16-4..

San Bernardino will be off to Hawaii on July 1 to participate in the Hilo Tournament. This will be the first time in softball history that a team from the mainland has played in an island-state tournament.

Roger Teske, former Nitehawk ace, and John Henderson will be Manny's pitchers, while Ed Bently and Bob Todd will hurl for the Hawks. A double win for Red Meairs' Nitehawks wouldn't clinch the title, but would be a giant step toward the championship.

U.S. volleyball team readies for world tour

The U.S. national men's volleyball team will engage in the first of four major international tournaments this year when 12 players leave Thursday for Japan.

"We are entered against the best teams in the world," said Burt DeGroot, spokesman and manager of the team coached by Long Beach's Carl McGown.

"Russia, Japan, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Poland and the U.S. comprise the six-team tournament which will be played in Tokyo," said DeGroot.

"We return July 8th, then leave a week later for Poland where we start a series of matches that will take us throughout Europe this summer.

"Then we go to Toronto Aug. 12-16 for the first America's Cup to be played between Cuba, Canada, Mexico and the U.S. Finally, there are the World Championships Oct. 12-18 at Mexico City. Twenty-four teams will compete in that tournament," said DeGroot.

Pepperdine College is the site of the U.S. training camp with 19 players presently working out daily. Two hail from Long Beach, Miles Pabst and Gerald Gregory.

Others on the training squad are Doug Beal, Danny Patterson, Byron Shewman, Tom Read, Joey Mica, Bill Wardrup, Kirk Kilgore, Dave DeGroot, Rick Niemi, Gus Mee, Ed Pachado, Jon Roberts, John Blair, Don Maze, Dave Schakel, Mark Fotenakes and Jim Iams.

Long Beach Community Hospital

50 years of service and medical 'firsts'

By GLENN LEIBOWITZ
Staff Writer

When Long Beach Community Hospital turns 50 next month, there won't be any long speeches or showy ceremonies.

Things will continue pretty much as they have been since the hospital first began its 24-hour-a-day, seven-day-a-week schedule July 25, 1924.

"We kind of like to keep a low profile," said Calvin Swanson, director of public relations.

The nonprofit facility which is able to make ends meet largely due to contributions from members of the community, is planning a dinner Tuesday at the Long Beach Elks Club which will feature semanticist S.I. Hayakawa, former president of San Francisco State College. The dinner is the most visible of the hospital's anniversary festivities. The dinner is sold out.

OTHER than that, and a few in-house type get togethers, Long Beach Community Hospital will continue business as usual.

"After all," said Swanson, "in a city like Long Beach 50 years is no milestone."

Luckily members of the community aren't as stingy with their donations as Swanson is about blowing the hospital's horn.

"The community has been great. We've had contributions ranging from Long Beach philanthropist Ruth Fairchild's $265,000, which went to build the hospital's Fairchild Heart Diagnstic Unit, to some as small as $5."

All are welcome, Swanson insisted.

"All nonprofit hospitals are called nonprofit because beyond running expenses and supplying the hospital equipment needed to practice contemporary medicine, you should come out even. On that premise, we lost $64,000 last year."

Thanks to philanthropic donations, the hospital makes it out of the red and breaks even, Swanson said.

In fact, contributions may very well be the prime reason Long Beach Community Hospital reached its 50th anniversary at all.

When the institution was still in its infancy in the '20s, its primary founder, Filmore Condit, would often accompany the hospital administrator to the bank and pay the staff's salaries from his own pocket, Swanson said.

ALL TOLD, Condit gave more than $100,000 to the facility during his lifetime. He also served as the hospital's first president of the board of trustees, holding the position from 1924 until 1926.

A plaque in the hospital's courtyard commemorated his contribution.

Long Beach Community Hospital, 1720 Termino Ave., is used by 100 active physicians and surgeons plus 450 doctors with privileges at the hospital, as well as a staff of 750 other persons, 48 per cent of whichare engaged in nursing services.

The multilevel facility includes 300 licensed beds, a substantial jump from the 125 beds the hospital started with in 1924.

"We've been responsible for a number of firsts since 1924," Swanson said.

One of these is "Family Centered Paternity Care," which Swanson described as allowing new parents to "establish a family unit prior to taking the baby home."

"If you had a baby 10 years ago, you'd take the baby home three days after it was born, and the father would only be able to see it through a glass wall at the hospital," Swanson explained.

FAMILY Centered Paternity Care has now been adopted by many other hpspitals, he said.

The program allows the father to be present in the delivery room during childbirth as well as paying visits to mother and child in the mother's hospital room.

Swanson credits the progam with keeping the hospital's obstetrics department in operation.

"We are rapidly approaching the 1,000th father to be a member of the program," he added.

Another first the hospital has chalked up is its "Independent Therapy Unit," which Swanson described as a bit of "country club."

The unit allows the patient who is in between acute care and the time he would be sent to a new facility or home to remain in rooms that are "just like home," and resemble tiny motel rooms.

An added benefit of the unit is that the cost is 50 per cent of what it would cost in any other part of the hospital.

"When it was first established as a convalescent unit in May of 1958, it was 10 years ahead of its time," Swanson said. "However, between 1968 and 1972, with increases in hospital costs, the unit caught on."

BUT THE hospital isn't content to live off the laurels of past successes, according to Swanson. Currently in the works is the total remodeling of the obstetrics and gynecology departments. The cost of the project is being tackled by the hospital's 250 auxiliary (volunteer) workers who plan to raise $75,000 toward the complex.

Also new, and expected to open this fall, is the heart diagnostic unit mentioned earlier.

The future of Long Beach Community Hospital looks bright, according to Swanson, but it may also promise a few surprises. "Life in hospitals," he said, "changes about every five minutes."

Nude body of man found in South Laguna

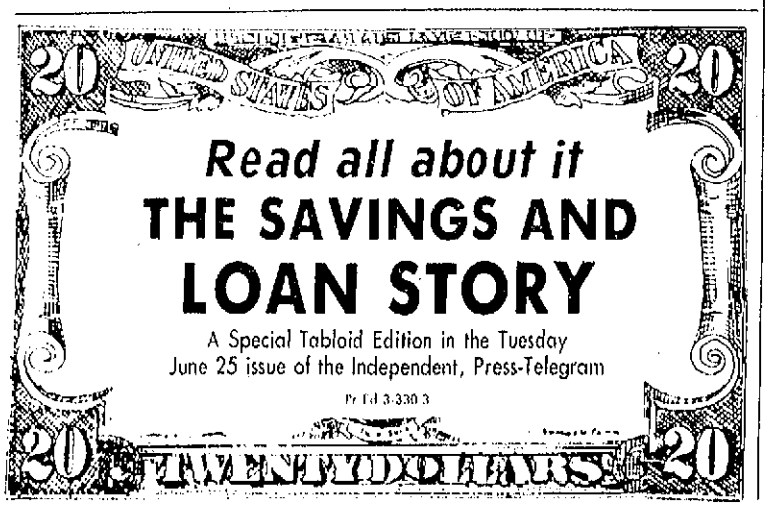

The nude body of an unidentified young man was found Saturday under bushes at the bottom of a 20-foot embankment off Ceanothus Drive in hilly South Laguna, Orange County sheriff deputies said.

Lt. John Vevereaux said there were no outward signs of the cause of death. He said the man had been dead about a day.

Police said the body was discovered about 5:15 p.m. by a passerby.

Officers said no clothes were found and the body had apparently been thrown over the side of the embankment.

An autopsy will be conducted, police said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for MONDAY

Your birthday today: You'll soon find yourself more in demand to help bring in results, increased production in whatever your field is. Administrative chores multiply, with rewards in proportion. Relations serve you well in terms of high morale, encouragement. Today's natives often have special capabilities in sensing sounds, or else a reverse limitation with a high threshold to cross.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Career matters move up steadily — be definite where possible to avoid misunderstanding about terms. It's an excellent time to enter a new home or headquarters.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Daily living habits flow so smoothly you take them for granted. Seek new contacts, learn another skill. Close friends are all busy generating schemes — let them alone!

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Attend to important issues early as your day includes many pleasing distractions. Be sure anything you write today is strictly the truth.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Amid generally good news there's an item that later comes to mean something serious to you. Correct any errors at once. Correspondence needs attention.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Temptation to speculate is strong. Projects intended to sharpen your public image do just that, but not quite the way you'd want. It's best to play it straight.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Older friends are of great help through their connections and interest. An overall successful day if you refrain from picking at trifles.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Formal agreements are favored; see that the details are correct. Settle outstanding negotiations, deal with the institutions of your life, rearrangements of family situations.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Leaving money questions to one side, consider purely human values, express your feelings for those you love. In evening you can think about new plans.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Early transactions make your day, the rest is mainly satisfactory work done at a reasonable pace. Don't be lazy, get moving while the going is good. Celebrate tonight!

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Practicality is always in season. With just a little extra push, you can establish a base for further expansion. Pause occasionally to give thanks.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): In balance with having stayed out of the financial ventures of friends, leave them out of your speculations. It's a provocative day for bright ideas, and a long one.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Your social life runs rich and full according to what you put into it. The business angles, though less amenable to fluent management, also go well.

Flames shoot 150 feet in Torrance fire

Flames and black smoke reached 150 feet into the air after a fire broke out at a Torrance garage Saturday. Fumes from the cracked gas tank of a car that slipped off a hydraulic jack apparently were ignited by the building's hot water heater, Torrance fire officials said.

Five units of the Torrance Fire Department were called to R&S Automotive, 17316 Crenshaw Blvd., and had the 10:30 a.m. fire under control in 10 minutes.

They estimated the damage to the building at $12,000.

Is this a good time to sell? Yes, yes, yes . . . Should you sell now? . . .

*CALL ONE OF THE NUMBERS LISTED BELOW . . .

Rex L. Hodges Celebrates 45 Years

May 1974, since 1929, we have been serving real estate needs in California and today, more than ever before a real estate company has to do everything well.

Sounds corney, but "We probably sold your folks their home" and with some of our family we are going into our 3rd generation of home sales.

Rex L. Hodges Realty is a people company. A company of the people, by the people and for the people.

The theme in our "45th" year is assurance. "You have our assurance that we at Rex L. Hodges will pledge to you, our customer, every possible tool of the trade available to serve your needs."

New day dawns for Tony Orlando with summer series

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

Tie a yellow ribbon 'round the old oak tree — and what do you have?

Why, an old oak tree with a yellow ribbon around it, of course.

But let Tony Orlando and Dawn record a song titled "Tie a Yellow Ribbon 'Round the Old Oak Tree," and you have the biggest-selling single disc of 1973 — a hit that has topped the six million mark.

The tune has helped to make the trio — consisting of Orlando, Joyce Vincent Wilson and Telma Hopkins — one of the most famous vocal groups in the business, and has to be an important factor in getting them their own prime-time summer TV miniseries on CBS.

Starting July 3, the hour-long variety series, called "Tony Orlando and Dawn," will air for four Wednesday nights, replacing another miniseries, "Bobbie Gentry's Happiness Hour."

"DO YOU ever get tired of doing that particular number?" I asked Orlando at lunch the other day at King's Four-in-Hand restaurant in Hollywood.

"No, not really. We do it a little differently each time," replied Tony, who says the group plays "more state and county fairs than Johnny Cash."

"The popularity of that song has really been amazing," added the singer, who says he didn't want to do it at first because he thought it was too corny for anyone to relate to. "It not only was the top record of the year in the United States and Canada, but also in places like Israel, Japan, Australia and Britain."

"Tie a Yellow Ribbon" is not the only hit song for Tony Orlando and Dawn, just the group's biggest to date. Their records — including "Yellow Ribbon," "Say, Has Anybody Seen My Sweet Gypsy Rose?," "Knock Three Times" and "Candida," all written by Irwin Levine and L. Russell Browne — have sold more than 20 million copies.

"HOW WOULD you categorize your group as singers?" I asked Tony.

"I don't like categories, but you could say we do 'top 40 pop' music," he replied.

"Is there any age group to which you don't appeal?" I wanted to know.

"Yes, I'd say we're not big with the 19-to-23-year-olds," said Tony. "At least, people in that age group wouldn't admit to each other that they listen to us. What they might do in the privacy of their own rooms is something else.

"We're popular with the youngsters and the grandparents and with most of the people in between. It doesn't bother me if the hard rock fans put us down."

WITH LONG black hair and black mustache, the 30-year-old native of New York City's Hell's Kitchen area might look more like a rock star than a favorite of the Geritol set and the state-and-county-fair circuit. But, as he points out, "This is not the crewcut era." He has been married for 10 years and has two children.

"When did you discover you had a voice?" I asked him.

"Never, really," came the reply. "I don't really consider myself a vocalist. I'm a performer rather than a singer. Oh, sure, I can sing some. But I consider myself a performer. You go out there and you bare your soul for an hour and a half — or however long. The audience reacts to the total person. At the end they say, 'I like that guy' or 'I don't like that guy.'"

Tony said he got started as an entertainer by performing for his sister "who is cerebral palsied and mentally retarded." She is 10 years younger than he is.

"I learned I could communicate with her through rhythm," he said. "I picked up the guitar and learned to play it, and I sang to her."

ORLANDO TOLD me he had only eight years of schooling. Said he: "I needed to help support the family."

At 30, he has been connected with the music industry for 16 years. He started out as a singer for demonstration records. After a couple of years, he met Carole King, then an unknown songwriter. In 1961 he recorded "Halfway to Paradise," written and produced by Miss King. It was a hit — the first for Miss King and the first for Tony.

His second single, "Bless You," was also a hit, and he continued as a recording star until near the end of 1963; he even had a variety series with the BBC in England that year.

Then came the "British Invasion" of America, led by the Beatles, and Tony's career as an entertainer came to a halt before he was out of his teens.

TONY ORLANDO & DAWN . . . Telma Hopkins, Joyce Wilson

"I quit recording," he explained. "I knew that radio makes the hits, and I knew that radio stations had to out-Beatle each other. No sense banging my head against the wall."

HE STAYED in the music business, though, landing a job with MGM's publishing company. After a year, he was hired as general manager of Blackwood Music, the publishing arm of CBS. He was there several years, becoming vice president.

"Was it a jolt to your ego when you ceased being an entertainer?" I asked.

"No, I had no ego hangup," Orlando replied. "I was happy just being involved in music. But I will say this, though, that as a result of what has happened in the past few years I have learned one thing: that I am meant to be an entertainer. I'd be an entertainer now even if it meant performing just in the corner saloon."

TONY'S SECOND career as an entertainer got started by accident.

"Two old friends came to me in 1970 and wanted me to record a number for them," he explained. "I was happy in my job at Blackwood and at first I turned them down. But they kept after me and, finally, out of friendship, I agreed to do it. The song was a hit."

The song was "Candida." Later, Joyce Vincent Wilson and Telma Hopkins, Motown session singers, did a back-up track. Tony and the two girls didn't meet until the record had become a big hit, selling two million copies.

"Later, we decided to team up," Tony said. "Some people said it wouldn't work — me teamed with two black girls. But we didn't let that stop us. The girls had been making $125,000 a year before we teamed up."

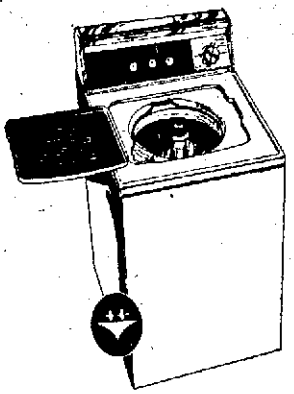

Their second record, "Knock Three Times," was even a bigger hit than "Candida," and it led to Tony's giving up his job as a music publisher and returning full-time to performing.

More hit records, concert engagements in various parts of the United States and abroad, nightclub shows in Las Vegas and New York City and TV guest appearances have followed.

And, now, their own four-week TV package. Look for the one with the yellow ribbon.

Chancellor 'colorless'? No, he's bright spot

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR
(C) 1974 New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Any discussion of a TV news anchorman's "image" is sensitive. It's a reminder of how certain aspects of the TV news business are rooted in show business.

But the discussion is also unavoidable. The anchorman who doesn't prove "competitive" in the Nielsen ratings is quietly but firmly retired from the scene of his crime.

Whatever the nobility of journalistic purpose, the ratings are crucial. That is why one of the more interesting stories of the year so far is John Chancellor.

AFTER NEARLY three years as sole anchorman on NBC's network "Nightly News," he has pulled about even with — and some weeks moved ahead of — the "CBS Evening News With Walter Cronkite."

In the 13 weeks beginning around March 1, the NBC news edition placed first in six weeks and tied CBS once. One week's lead of about 662,000 homes represented the widest margin NBC has posted over CBS since 1967, when Huntley and Brinkley ruled the ratings roost.

It should be stressed that the competition between the two organizations has always been relatively close. During one week in October, 1971, for instance, CBS News had a 12.8 rating compared with a 12 for NBC News. But, precisely for that reason, seemingly innocuous tenths of a rating point become grotesquely significant.

NBC IS understandably pushing news of the latest developments. Chancellor, whom even some executives at NBC initially thought a touch too "colorless" for long-term survival, is proving to be the brightest spot in the network's generally drab news and public affairs picture.

CBS News has traditionally been more cool and disdainful about the ratings. But when informed that an analysis of the Chancellor story was being prepared, a spokesman quickly passed along enough figures to prove that Chancellor was far from running away with all the marbles in the ratings game.

However, Chancellor's progress in recent months from an always respectable second to a virtual tie for first has been buttressed by the findings of a second annual survey conducted by Kevin R. Phillips and Albert E. Sindlinger.

A nationwide sample of 1,679 telephone calls found that although Cronkite is still the best known of TV newsmen, with a "recognition" score of 98.3 per cent, Chancellor is the best-liked and most-watched.

IN THE best-liked category, Chancellor scored 18.6 per cent. ABC's Harry Reasoner was second with 15.8 per cent, followed by his partner Howard K. Smith with 14.3 per cent and Cronkite with 14.2 per cent. In the most-watched vote, Chancellor got 57.9 per cent against 50.6 per cent for Cronkite.

If any of these results were connected with alleged biases in news presentation, other figures are surprising. The supposedly "liberal" Cronkite racked up a "striking" advance, to 42 per cent from 3 per cent a year ago, in responses saying he "presented both sides of the picture." Chancellor's fairness rating for both years was 23 per cent.

On the other hand, the supposedly "conservative" Smith fell to 8 per cent from 34 per cent, prompting the survey to conclude that "pro-Nixon administration commentators are no longer seen as presenting both sides of the argument; the events of the last year have affected public perception of what is and what isn't bias."

THIS BEING the complex world of television, however, part of the new Chancellor strength in the ratings can be traced directly to a TV event having no connection with TV news. That was the World Series last fall. Carried on NBC, the baseball games provided a massive "lead-in" audience for the "Nightly News" that followed, and a large percentage of baseball fans stayed tuned for Chancellor.

One NBC spokesman theorizes that many possi-

Children keep Cloris Leachman hopping

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press Writer

The next time Cloris Leachman stars in a television pilot they should forget the fiction.

Let a writer follow Cloris around for a week or so, and then — after he recovers from exhaustion — devise a series based on her hectic private life with her five children.

Forget "Pete n' Tillie" and all the other pilots she has made. Get the essence of this delightfully eccentric woman down on paper. Life, as she says, can be a zany scene out of "What's Up, Doc?"

"THE LAST 20 years of my life has been unbelievable," she said. "It was a TV show. The other day I was getting breakfast for the kids.

"My son had a pet rat Wendell for four years, and the cat walks in with a tail and the hind end of a rat. It was Wendell until we could check."

Cloris' life is centered around her family. For years she subordinated her career to it. It is only in recent years that she has become so much in demand, winning an Oscar for "The Last Picture Show," and Emmys for her dramatic and comedy performances.

She has become a reigning star of the TV movie, in such films as "Haunts of the Very Rich," "A Brand New Life," "Dying Room Only" and "Hitchhike," for ABC, and the CBS special "The Migrants." She has just completed "After the Trial" for ABC.

"I HATE to be categorized that way," she said, sitting in the living room of her Mandeville Canyon home.

"It should just be part of one's wardrobe, so to speak. You go where the roles are, where the colorful entertainment elements of the acting profession are.

"We can't determine what part of the medium we'll be working in. I'm an actress, not a leading lady. Not a comedienne. Not a serious actress. I'm an actress.

"There are just more TV movies available than feature films. I like making them. The tempo suits me. In feature films it's still a man's world. There were many female stars in the old days and somehow it got turned around."

AS SHE TALKED she stuffed daisies into a tiny red clay vase hanging from her neck by a leather thong. She frequently got up from the couch to answer the telephone.

She wore a blue pants suit and a straw hat. She laughed and said, "I'm wearing a hat today so I feel more capable. You have to know what to wear."

Cloris goes back and forth between TV movies, feature films — she has just finished "Young Frankenstein" — and "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

"BASICALLY," she said, "I like never to know what's around the next corner. Since I'm an optimist I always expect something interesting, exciting or beautiful. If it isn't so, I will make it so by sheer dent.

"I'm dangerously in danger of being a pollyanna or a goody goody two shoes because it isn't that we don't have problems. I suppose I feel equal to the problems. It's a challenge to keep up with the family, and the ordinary daily experiences that are interesting to me."

Then she was off to take one child to the dentist and another to buy shoes.

$50,000-a-night groups appear on tube for $300

By Associated Press

Musical groups that draw $50,000 or more for a concert work for scale on the TV rock shows — about $300. And they like it, says Don Kirshner.

Kirshner, who pioneered rock on late night television with ABC's "In Concert" and his own syndicated "Rock Concert," explained, "Although they only get scale for a show, the inducement is that the television appearance might enhance a star's record sales by $50,000.

"It exposes him to a whole new audience. This is particularly true with new talent."

Kirshner said he believes even the biggest stars will continue to work for scale.

"WE TREAT them right musically," he said. "They can use their own sound engineers with us. And the radio stations and record companies are cutting their play lists. There are no more Ed Sullivan shows.

"If they don't go on 'Rock Concert' or 'In Concert' or 'Midnight Special,' where do they go?"

Rock is fairly well established on the tube, albeit mostly in the wee hours. Besides his two shows, there is NBC's "Midnight Special," which also goes into other areas; "Soul Train," which features only black stars; and the syndicated talk show for rock stars, "Speak Easy."

KIRSHNER, 39, is a leading entrepreneur in the music business. At 24, he founded his own music publishing and record company and later became president of Colgem Records. He managed the musical publishing works for the Beatles and, since their break up, for John Lennon and Paul McCartney.

He created the musical group for "The Monkees," a TV show a few years back, and then did it again for "The Archies," an animated group on a Saturday morning cartoon show.

He is looking for a prime-time series in the vein of "The Monkees" and "The Partridge Family." But with the added realism of today's TV comedy.

CHANCELLOR SURPRISES

ble first-time customers liked what they saw. In any case, the margin between NBC and CBS began narrowing at that time.

If the lead-in element is a key factor, the Chancellor record is all the more formidable for having embarrassingly weak support in New York, the nation's major market. The preceding local edition of the news has been low show on the competition pole.

Recently, however, it has been expanded to two hours in a new format that, even with its start-up kinks, is very good indeed. It will take months, possibly longer, for any adjustment in the local ratings, but local gains can only benefit the Chancellor operation.

THE NETWORK news anchorman (Chancellor prefers to be called "chief operator," Cronkite "managing editor") is indeed a strange creature. Involved to varying degrees with the total production of the program, he is on camera only for five to seven of the approximately 22 minutes actually consumed by news in each half hour. But he sets the tone, establishes the boundaries of that crucial over-all "image."

The choice between Cronkite, Chancellor, Reasoner and Smith is a choice between equally intelligent and capable men. But the choice indicated in the ratings is not being made on general content quality. If that were so, CBS and Cronkite, with the strong supporting team of Roger Mudd, Dan Rather, John Hart and Fred Graham, would monopolize the ratings.

The Chancellor showing, then, becomes still more impressive. Perhaps his low-keyed professional manner is more compatible with recovery from the lingering trauma of Watergate. Perhaps his persistent integrity is being appreciated (typically, he was the only host of the "Today" show who refused to compromise his newsman role by doing commercials).

Or perhaps it's just that, as one prominent print journalist observed recently in a casual conversation, "he's not particularly exciting but he wears well."

Further examination of the Chancellor-Cronkite seesaw will probably have to wait until September. The early spring and summer ratings are riddled with variables. One prominent factor: the total audience for network news drops dramatically. In the first two weeks of May, it dropped to about 42 million nightly from 50 million in early January. Evidently longer days and warmer weather create a preference for, among other things, martinis on green lawns.

Amazing Ring Must Convince Everyone it's a Genuine Diamond ...or you pay nothing...

SPECIAL LIMITED OFFER

The 30 Day Free Trial Certificate below entitles you to try famous Zolatron Simulated Diamond Ring—without risking 1c.

Wear it. Prove to yourself and envious friends that the color and sparkle truly simulate natural diamonds worth fortunes. Watch their eyes bulge with excitement! After all, they have no way to tell it isn't genuine!

Phony plastic stones glued into cheap rings are easily recognized. But Zolatron is completely different. Prove it with this convincing test: (A) Drop this dense, man-made stone into acetone nail polish remover. See how it comes out unharmed! (B) Count the facets—58 in all—just like diamonds. (C) Study Zolatron under a powerful magnifier. Not a speck, crack, or bubble!

Compare with costly diamonds. Not even one diamond in each hundred taken from the Kimberly Mines can surpass it for color, clarity, or flawless perfection! That's why even experts might mistake it for a natural diamond!

PAY 1c ON THE DOLLAR

Now . . . grab a full carat Zolatron in a ladies' Solitaire Ring—fabulously fashionable—for only $10. Diamonds this same size average $1,250.00. Yet the resemblance between a Zolatron and a regular diamond is so striking, only an expert can really tell them apart!

DON'T LET LOW PRICE CONFUSE YOU!

Zolatron costs only $10—but don't mistake it for cheap, dull fakes. This hard, man-made stone is one of the world's most convincing simulations. Precision set into a Genuine Sterling Silver Tiffany Ring of rare beauty and excellence! Made by Master Craftsmen for lifetime wear and enjoyment! Zolatron is different from regular diamonds. But the most thrilling difference is that you can own it for only $10 . . . not $1,250.

MILLIONAIRES WEAR SIMULATIONS TOO!

Even millionaires wear simulated rings, but they guard their secret. Zolatrons look so genuine, that they may even fool certain experts. That's why so many rich persons, actors, and actresses wear simulations. They impress their friends and fans without burglary risk. Of course, they own costly diamonds also, but they lock them up in bank vaults!

NICE GIFT FOR SOMEONE SPECIAL

Like genuine diamonds, Zolatrons make lifetime gifts for special occasions, engagements, or just a thrilling surprise for Someone Special. She'll never know it isn't a regular diamond (unless you tell her). Yet this Gift of Happiness costs only $10. You save plenty for a down payment on a car, real estate, or business. Smart people everywhere have switched to Zolatrons. Why don't you? Our Lifetime Money Back Guarantee gives you 100% protection. Remember: if anyone can detect Zolatron from a regular diamond, or if you're not completely satisfied, return for full refund! Copyright 1974

Wells Report

One Million One and Counting

Lifeguards and police chiefs have always been among my favorite heroes. In the first place, they have this ability to turn a sand-kicking bully into a 98-pound weakling.

But more importantly, they can do a slow horizon-to-horizon scan of a crowd gathered on a public beach, or to watch a parade, or to demand that Mr. Nixon get the boys out of San Clemente, and tell you almost instantly how many people are in it.

Just how they do this is a closely guarded professional secret. The public refers to the process as "nose counting," but most newsmen who have observed it doubt that lifeguards or police chiefs actually count noses. Personally, I think they count legs and divide by two.

Whatever the method, it is a fact that you can ask a lifeguard how many people were on the beach today. He will squint his eyes in thought for a moment and reply, "Half a million."

Or you can ask a chief of police how many people turned out this year for his fine city's traditional Michelmas Eve parade. Without bothering to squint his eyes in thought, he will reply, "Biggest crowd we ever had. One million."

This ability to determine the size of a crowd is something I have always envied since my freshman year at USC when I served a brief stint taking tickets at the Coliseum for Trojan home games.

I was assured that not only was it a healthful job in the open air, but I would earn some money and still get to see about three-quarters of the game for free. Alas, it never worked out that way.

Sometimes after kickoff, a supervisor would come by my station, open a secret compartment with his key, and read the tally on the number of people that had passed through the turnstile. I was supposed to hide my eyes while he did this.

Then I took my ticket stubs to a little office at the peristyle end, where I counted them and reported the total to the supervisor. The total was supposed to be within shouting distance of the total he had recorded from the turnstile.

It never was. Every time a shout would go up from the crowd outside, I would lose count. Or my sub-piles of stubs would get mixed up with each other. I would be sent back to recount again and again. By the time I got an accurate tally, the strains of Alma Mater would be wafting into the sunset and the players would be in their dressing rooms.

Oh, there were some ticket-takers whose stub count was rapid and right on. They would be out enjoying the game within 15 minutes of the time they'd entered the little office.

Now I know that they were all criminology or recreation majors and they went on to become chiefs of police or chief lifeguards, where their talents in counting crowds would be indispensable.

Former Long Beach Police Chief Bill Dovey was one of the people who had this God-given gift of being able to tell you how many faces were in a crowd. Of course, like all geniuses he was subject to criticism by certain Wrong Thinkers.

After one Miss Universe Parade down Ocean Boulevard, for instance, he gave the spectator count as an even one million. He was immediately challenged by a wrongthinking Long Beach State math professor, who alleged that the parade route would not accommodate anywhere near a million people, even if they stood four deep.

Patiently, Chief Dovey explained that that one million figure was a total figure. People come and go at a parade, he gently pointed out. They sort of watch it in shifts.

It was a stunning display of virtuosity. The chief could not only count the number of people on the parade route, he could actually count the number of people going and coming. His eye was truly on the sparrow.

Lifeguards are not quite that talented. I have been unable to get a breakdown on their total crowd figures. They cannot tell me how many people are in the surf, how many sunning on the beach and how many playing volleyball at any given time.

Still, it is quite a talent to be able to determine that 250,000 or 450,000 persons were on the beach on a given day. I don't know how they do it.

Tom Murphine of the Daily Pilot in Costa Mesa suspects he knows how the Newport Beach lifeguards do it. It has been alleged, he says, that the Newport Beach lifeguards wait until Huntington Beach turns in its crowd figure, then Newport Beach doubles it.

Well, Newport probably has twice the beach area of Huntington Beach. And that doesn't explain how Huntington Beach gets its figure.

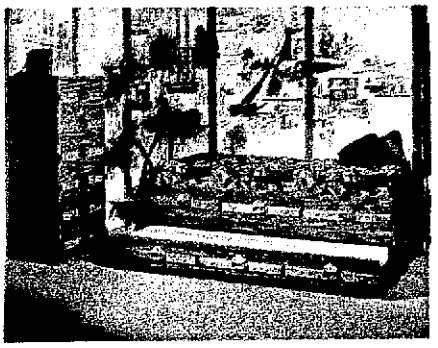

Frankly, its beyond me — even with ticket stubs to count. It only took me five games as a ticket-taker at USC to decide there was an easier way. I became a lancer with the Trojan Band. You get to see all the games free and you don't have to be able to count. Just put a small, inconspicuous mark on one shoe so you know your left foot from your right and there is nothing to it.

Liz Taylor

Jason Robards
. . . 'Thank you, doctor'

Gerald R. Ford
. . . not his real name

Barbara Walters
. . . officially co-host now

Q: I heard that Gerald R. Ford is not the real name of our Vice President. If not, what is his real name? — Mrs. Dudley S., Worcester, Mass.

A: He was born Leslie Lynch King Jr. But his mother and father were divorced before he was two years old. When his mother remarried, she renamed her son Gerald R. Ford after his stepfather. It wasn't until he was 15 that he accidentally met his real father and discovered, for the first time, that Ford wasn't his father.

Q: How come that in her films Liz Taylor looks so slender, but in news photos she seems much heavier. How does she put it on and take it off so quickly? — J. W., Ulysses, Kans.

A: It isn't dieting that affects Elizabeth's weight. Usually when she's frustrated and between films, she eats out of nervousness and puts on poundage. But when she's happy, or working on a movie, she eats very little and loses a lot. You can almost read her state of mind — marital, mental and physical — by a glance at her figure.

Q: Is Sophia Loren's sister, who married Romano Mussolini, the musician-son of the deceased dictator, still married to him?—Mrs. Fred Storms, Des Moines, Iowa.

A: No. Sexy Anna Maria Scicolone divorced Mussolini some five or six years ago. She's now seen sipping, supping and holding hands with an Iranian doctor named Tamiz Abdhiamil.

Q: This'll stump you, I'll bet you! Who was in the balcony or rear of the radio studio from which the popular Dr. I.Q. program was broadcast? I mean the person who relayed a question and, when it was answered, shouted, "Thank you, doctor!" — Dr. R. B. T., Dayton, Ohio.

A: Thank you, doctor. One of many to play that part (for eating money) was the now recognized great actor, Jason Robards.

Q: How long has Barbara Walters been on the Today show? And will she remain its sole permanent host? — Pamela Rosen, Great Neck, N.Y.

A: Barbara was officially named co-host after Frank McGee's death. She's been a fixture on the NBC series for a decade, meaning she's had to awaken every weekday for ten years at 4:30 in the morning. As this is written, a number of the network's newsmen are rotating in the slot while the search for a successor to McGee goes on.

The Long Beach Rescue Mission
A place of last resort

By ROBERT EMBRY

Downtown Long Beach with night coming on. The sun has just settled in orange majesty over the Palos Verdes Peninsula. The rich browns, greens and blues of the day city are fading into the dark grays and hazy blacks of night streets ... lean streets, mean streets, streets into which a black-and-white police car seems not out of place either by reason of camouflage or purpose.

Imagine yourself standing there on those suddenly darkened streets. You have no money, no friends and no place to spend the night. It's beginning to get cold and you are beginning to worry.

Think before saying, "It can't happen to me." It happens to a lot of people and for a lot of valid reasons. To whom do they turn?

The Department of Public Social Services — the "welfare department" — doesn't put up people overnight until the paperwork has completed its languorous journey through the byzantine mill of the state.

The Salvation Army only takes in men on 90-day rehabilitation programs. The YMCA sells its room for $5 a night. The YWCA has no room at all. The Travelers Aid Society prefers to deal with those who are traveling from A to B in a reputable manner for a reputable purpose. The Long Beach Police Department perversely hoards its bunk space for people who don't want to be there.

All these agencies refer the homeless to the Long Beach Rescue Mission. It is the place of last resort.

But the image of soup lines and a flop house doesn't fit. The Long Beach Rescue Mission is a real joy to behold. A man dying of thirst hopes to find a mudhole over the next sand dune. The mission looms up to the needy like a full-scale Technicolor oasis. Its director calls it a "miracle." He may be right.

Robert Embry is a long Beach freelance writer.

INTERLUDE: Marvin of the Star Police

There seems to be a front door and a back door to everything in life. At the back door of the Long Beach Rescue Mission you will usually find Marvin.

Marvin is an old salt. The view from the back door is a comfy one for him. He looks from the alley behind 540 W. Broadway across weeded fields, across some gracefully architectured highway overpasses and toward the deep blue chop that used to be his home.

It is impolite to ask exactly why Marvin was discharged from the Navy or Merchant Marine. Suffice to say he is on government disability, psychiatric.

"I'm a PK man for the Star Police," informs Marvin, with casual confidence. In science fiction, PK stands for "psychokinesis," the ability to move physical objects by mind power. Marvin's eyes jump all around you when he's talking. They lock on yours only to make a point. Belitting a Star Policeman, one imagines.

PK man? "Yeah, don't you read Saga magazine? Ted Owens, he writes for Saga. He's a PK man, too. Owens' got a PK bone in the back of his head."

Marvin lifts both hands to the back of his head, near the base of the skull. "I've got a telepathic sending and receiving unit back here, just like Owens. But me, I'm with the Earth Colonization Group.

"I don't know about Owens," Marvin muses. "He may be a double-crosser." Marvin stares out to where dark blue and light blue meet at a line sometimes called "the horizon" and other times called "infinity."

Marvin spends his night bunked for $2 a night at the Fleet Locker Club nearby on Ocean Boulevard and his days at the back door of the mission, sitting next to a huge pile of discarded produce crates and bulk food cartons. Usually, he eats dinner at the mission. A disability check goes only so far.

Marvin may be psychotic, but he's pretty peaceful. The mental hospitals are closed to all but those who can scare hell out of the taxpayer. Marvin has a home of sorts at the mission. What else would you do with him?

Marvin has met the place of last resort and found it comfortable.

The mission is sandwiched between the Buckhorn Bar and boarded-up storefronts, cater-cornered to Pete's Liquors and Spud's Tavern. Down Broadway a little farther is Lancer Liquors and then the police building. Not an auspicious location, but an appropriate one.

Chapel services at the mission begin at 7:30 p.m. and end from 8 to 8:30. They are a necessary prelude to food and bunks. The men start forming up on the sidewalk around 7, small clumps of men smoking cigarettes in the classic postures of waiting. They are young and old, neat and dirty ... dark, ancient suits, unpressed 1950's sports shirts, tennis shoes, work boots, beat-up loafers, moccasins, an occasional set of sparkly shined shoes ... short and long hair, beards, stubble, clean shaves.

They stand next to a very clean storefront window masked with equally clean beige curtains. Above is the predictable sign reading JESUS SAVES, unpredictably rendered in modern, interior-illuminated plastic. It is a hint that this mission may not be like the ones in the Depression-era movies.

7:25 p.m.: The men begin to amble through the front door into the chapel. And ... shock. This is a rescue mission? The walls are a light pastel the floor blue-green carpeting. Fluorescent lights on an acoustic-flocked ceiling illuminate 90-medium-blue metal folding chairs, lined up perfectly, like soldiers on parade. The chairs face a wood-veneer altar with its own small complement of chairs. A simple wrought-iron cross stands out against a red velvet wall. A small piano rests to the right of the altar and over the altar itself, in gold paint, are the words, "Jesus said ... come unto me ... I will give you rest." Eyes wandering 90 degrees to the left will alight upon an original oil painting..

And all this is immaculate. In the light and airy theater of the chapel, every hue, line and corner seems to flash, like a scene of well-polished cut crystal. Somehow, the ragged men find their seats in the midst of such striking cleanliness do not seem demeaned by contrast. They seem cleaner, more human, more individual. This is not a place where one gives away one's dignity for a bowl of soup.

INTERLUDE: Bill, who wants to get back to the way he was.

Bill started drinking about 22 years ago in the Army. But nothing serious. Bill spent 12 years in the Army. He got out as a staff sergeant 10 years ago and returned to construction work. He kept on drinking, but it was still nothing serious. Bill was restles and would quit a job every year or two just to find a new and different job in a new and different place. A single man can get away with that, and the country is full of single men who stay single and stay restless and drink a lot.

Bill's drinking never interfered with his job until about a year and a half ago. His skull was fractured when he was mugged in North Long Beach. After four months of recuperation from brain surgery, he went back to work. But things started to go bad.

He had headaches and couldn't work like he used to. He started drinking in bars before he went to work in the morning. Sometimes, he'd just pick up the bar phone and call the plant and explain that he was sick and wouldn't be in that day.

Bill fell in with the hard-drinking North Long Beach bar crowd and soon he had quit his job. He closed his favorite bar at 2 a.m., then retired to a cardboard box in the alley behind the bar. When the bar opened at 6 a.m., there was Bill, standing at the door. He'd meet contractors at the bar and pick up pin money doing day labor for them.

But that went bad too. Because, "After a while, everything turns to booze. You don't even want to work anymore. I got to thinking about wanting a gun to hold somebody up. If I'd got ahold of a gun, I really would've done it," Bill reflects, looking back still with some amazement that he would think such a thing.

"Holding people up just for a bottle," he says, shaking his head a little. "That wasn't me at all. I scared myself." That's what brought Bill into the mission a couple of weeks ago. Now he's on the staff.

Bill looks very fit for a man past 40 who's been drinking so much for so long. He's short and almost evasively shy and he peers out of his horn-rimmed glasses like a baby raccoon looking down from a tree branch, all wondering and uncertain. What's his program now?

"Getting to know Jesus is their program here. I haven't been here long enough to say one way or the other. Some of the guys say it works.

"All I know for sure is that I have to straighten out my life completely."

Bill was a regular churchgoer and volunteer many years ago. It was a happy time for him. "I want to get back to the way I was," he says.

In back of the mission's chapel, a crew of six staff members — themselves men who had come through the front door bearing nothing but fatigue and hunger — wait to serve the 50 or so now seated in the chapel. Donated clothing will be given to those who need it. Food such as Spanish rice, fresh fruit, bread and butter and coffee are being prepared on donated equipment in a spotless kitchen. Razors and hot showers await.

The bunkroom houses 34 cots, the staff lounge six more, plus a color television and easy chairs. Each room in the building shines with the same lustre of austere immaculateness as the chapel.

In just its first year, the mission furnished over 60,000 meals and put up 12,000 men. Each individual is allowed to stay at the mission for only five days out of each month, to prevent ongoing freeloading. But staff members remain longer and the first year about 100 got back on their feet working at the mission. And another 900 took another look at the wrought-iron cross and decided to turn their lives down an entirely new road.

Neither food nor salvation come free though. The mission's overhead runs to about $200 per day. The mission receives not a cent of tax support, nor is it aided by United Way or other organized charities. About 10 per cent of its operating expenses are donated by local churches; the rest comes from individuals and the mission's churchwomen's auxiliary, the Pacesetters.

Thirty-four-year-old Wayne Teuerle, the mission's executive director, is vague about the funding from individuals. Who are they? They're just out there. The same kind of people who donate a half-million dollars a year to the Union Rescue Mission in Los Angeles. Most months, the books are balanced. The Lord provides.

INTERLUDE: Leroy, who has this thing about heroin.

Leroy. is a heavily muscled black who doesn't show his age. Not too far from 40 years old, Leroy still looks like a young boxer. He did do a little boxing, in fact. He passed a lot of time that way in prison.

Mission

'Wow, man, a mission'

Leroy put down his last heroin habit in 1971. Recently, though, he began falling back into his old ways. Leroy's boss at a foundry in Long Beach saw that Leroy was using heroin again and quietly laid him off. The unspoken understanding was that if Leroy could take a month or two to clean up, he could have his job back. In the meantime, who needs a junkie around the shop?

Out on the street again, Leroy met a hippie who turned him on to the mission, where he quickly became a staff member.

And here he is, all animated eyes and quick smile separated by an outrageous mustache, chainsmoking Camels and ignoring the ferocious dark-black needle tracks on his arms.

"A rescue mission!" he laughs. "This hippie, man ... this hippie's sayin' ... It's almost too funny to tell, And I thought, 'wow, man.' A mission.

"But it's OK. Hey, man, the dudes seem so understanding. It's not like a church, man. It's not forced on you. I think there's something here, man. I don't know ...

"I done tried everything, and if this ain't the answer, I don't know where it's at. I been to the penitentiary, Corona, group counseling, Atascadero, everywhere. I lost too much, man. I'm searchin' for something, you know what I mean? And this may be it. I plan to stick around till I find out. I'm gonna give it my all, man, 'cause this is all that's left."

Back a few years, Leroy got into religion very fast while waiting for a lengthy sentence to state prison. Leroy prayed and prayed. He got off with 60 days in county jail. Things like that leave lasting impressions on a man.

If the mission is surprising in its decor and modernness, Lydia Lodge is just a mindsnapper. The mission's new facility for women at 829 Daisy Ave. was named for a lady of generous hospitality who sold dye in Eastern Europe a couple of thousand years ago.

Lydia Lodge is one of those Victorian minimansions that make up much of old Long Beach, with garrets and gables and porches and the other charming eccentricities of the style. But the interior demonstrates the flair for design and the compulsive cleanliness of the mission itself.

The entranceway sets the tone with healthy green planters and antiqued mirrors. The rest of the converted boarding house is a jumble of near-new mismatched furniture somehow blended with carpeting, knicknacks, mirrors and endless religious wall plaques into a colorful homeyness that even grandma couldn't pull off.

Lydia Lodge sleeps 13 women, plus a few kids, plus proprietors Ron and Becky Hallamore. The mission brought this off with $38,000, but that figure includes a duplex apartment building in the rear that will eventually house 24 to 30 people, mostly families.

The women are accommodated in four large bedrooms. A small separate room provides for small children. The women share in the housework under the benevolent but disciplined eyes of the Hallamores.

Ron Hallamore is a short, mod-dresser of 25. Becky is a beautiful, soft-spoken and moderately pregnant woman of 22. Becky watches placidly as Ron flips through a card file reeling off some of the cases Lydia Lodge has housed since its opening in March:

— A 65-year-old Long Beach woman who had been mugged and was afraid to return home to relive her terrors alone.

— A mute woman traveling with her 6-year-old boy.

— A 20-year-old stripper from Indiana who came to California to start a new life and was trying to shake off a fondness for barbiturate drugs in the process.

— An 83-year-old Mexican woman who got separated from the daughter she was visiting in Los Angeles and wound up in Long Beach.

— A near-hysterical welfare mother with a fatherless 8-year-old, evicted because of late welfare checks. (The mother later returned with a donation).

Lydia Lodge put up 153 women in its first three months of operation, most stranded travelers, some from Britain, Switzerland and Thailand, in addition to Mexico.

A young Long Beach chicana named Esther wanders into the room. She and her two children are, at this visit, the only residents beside the Hallamores.

Shyly, she speaks: "My husband and I didn't get along at all. It seems like he wants to lead his own life, but he wants me around too. We've been together almost two years ... and it's just not working out." Esther is waiting for a welfare check and working a short temporary job. There is just nowhere else to go right now.

INTERLUDE: Ron Hallamore, who is running a race, for himself.

When Ron Hallamore got back from Vietnam, he literally couldn't find his rear end with both hands. His buttocks, along with most of the rest of his flesh, were withered away from close to a year of concerted drug-taking. He weighed less than 100 pounds.

It was a lost year for Hallamore. He never understood what had happened to him in Vietnam until he read his service records. In the interim, that year was represented only by a stark and cheaply printed Army form headed UNDESIRABLE DISCHARGE. "What have I done?" he thought, in panic.

Ron Hallamore's story reads like a summation of the worst fears of American parents in the age of Vietnam. In brief, it goes like this:

Student at Rio Hondo College in Whittier. Smoking marijuana. Bad grades. Enlists in U.S. Army at 19. Assigned as supply clerk to Army headquarters at Long Binh near Saigon. Promoted rapidly to Specialist 5. Found in possession of marijuana. Exiled to Chu Lai support base.

At Chu Lai, Hallamore and friend caught by colonel passed out on guard duty from smoking marijuana. "What's going on here?"

Mission

rages colonel. "Well, man," replies friend, "we're just relaxing, you know?"

Hallamore reassigned to end-of-the-earth signal unit in Danang. ("Scummy place," recalls Hallamore. "The morale was terrible.") Bought LSD and mescaline on R&R in Australia. Now going downhill at full gallop.

Drinks Obesitol, powerful stimulant, in intensive preparation for inspection. Inspecting officer opens wall locker door and finds model of military neatness inside, plus forgotten bottle of illegal Obesitol in plain view. Hallamore dropped from Sp5 to Sp4.

Friend in U.S. sends LSD for Hallamore to sell. Hallamore takes most of it himself. Performance and attitude sharply deteriorating. Busted from Sp4 to private first class. Using cocaine and heroin occasionally. Busted from Pfc. to private. Hates Army, haircuts, shaving. Argues with NCOs and officers. Incites other soldiers to near-mutiny.

Bang. Speedy discharge and home, a wreck. Asking self, "Can I ever get it together again?" The year behind him just a hazy, crazy nightmare.

It's not surprising that Ron Hallamore wandered into a church in 1970 and got saved. Neither the government nor society offers much in the way of rehabilitation for such human devastation as was Hallamore ... especially when branded as an organizational pariah by the undesirable discharge.

Hallamore met Wayne Teuerle the day after his conversion. Teuerle helped him work out his problems and within a year Hallamore was working almost all his waking hours at three jobs. Hallamore and his wife volunteered to operate Lydia Lodge and now Hallamore still works most of his waking hours.

"I'm running a race for myself," he says, looking blankly at the floor with a trace of bewilderment. The visitor envisions a deer bolting from a burning forest, tail singed, in full flight and not yet ready to rest.

"Only about 25 per cent of the men who come here have drinking problems," declares Wayne Teuerle, leaning back in a padded swivel chair in his small but well-furnished office adjacent to the chapel.

"Many of them we see have come to town to look for a job. The employment situation back East is pretty bad and people tend to think of California when they need a job. Restlessness is another common reason. We get some runaways and some kids dropping out of the drug subculture. The average age for men is about 38, but we've been seeing a younger crowd lately."

"Most of our drinkers are permanent residents of the area here," he says. Teuerle is medium long-haired, clean-shaven and dresses thoroughly modern. It is almost a uniform for the mainline Christians who operate the mission. "Most of the drinkers are drawing Aid to the Disabled or welfare. We get firm with these guys to take care of themselves. But the transients usually aren't heavy drinkers. A lot of them are just guys trying to get their lives together."

Teuerle outlines plans to expand the mission's activities whenever the Lord provides the wherewithal. A youth center to get downtown-area kids off the street. A home for delinquents. A foster home program to ensure a Christian influence upon children without parents. A separate mission facility for men 25 and under. A lounge area in the present mission to give men something to do during the day. A country youth camp.

Wayne Teuerle goes innocently on and on about the projects he hopes the mission will implement, apparently uncaring that the plans he describes do not fit within the scope of the mission's already hand-to-mouth budget.

But Teuerle is nobody's fool. He runs a taut financial ship and spends much of his time on religious radio and television stations and in front of local groups explaining the mission. He notes to audiences that in addition to the mission's basic humanitarian and religious effects, petty theft, panhandling and welfare expenditures are reduced. The funds seem to come in.

Financing future projects seems more chancy. But, as Teuerle frequently notes, the mission itself came about as "a miracle." Why stop now?

FINALE: Wayne Teuerle, a more or less classic case.

To the faithful who work at and or support the mission with donations, the mission is simply an embodiment of the Lord's will. Or, as the faithful assert, again and again in answer to all questions of practicality, "The Lord provides."

In a more earthly sense, though, some earthly people had to conceive the mission, organize its founding and solicit donations. Somebody had to run around solving the innumerable problems that go along with starting and operating what is, in the broad sense, a large and complex "business."

Donations and limited church assistance aside, this was all done by one man. This is Wayne Teuerle's story:

About 10 years ago, Teuerle got out of the Navy with a British wife and a lot of moxie. Wayne Teuerle was going to get rich. He took a job shuffling loan papers at a General Finance office in Chicago. Fourteen months later, at 25, Teuerle was branch manager. He was a whiz kid in the wonderful world of business, with a nice suburban home and a salary that let him set up drinks for all the boys at after-work watering holes for junior executives.

But success can be a cruel goddess. Soon, in the words of author Hunter S. Thompson, "The chickens came home to roost, accompanied by three giant condors." Teuerle began spending more and more time in those watering holes, drinking to forget the intense pressures of the day. His hangovers aggravated stresses on the job and soon he was having marital problems too.

And all along, he "wanted no part of religion." His wife would bring him to church occasionally and he would storm out. She and her friends persevered, though, talking to him easily but often. Finally, everything came together for him. Teuerle still remembers the date — Feb. 16, 1965 — when he got religion.

Eleven months later, his destiny consolidated. In the dead of winter, Teuerle and his wife sold their house (in three hours) and jumped full-time into mission work.

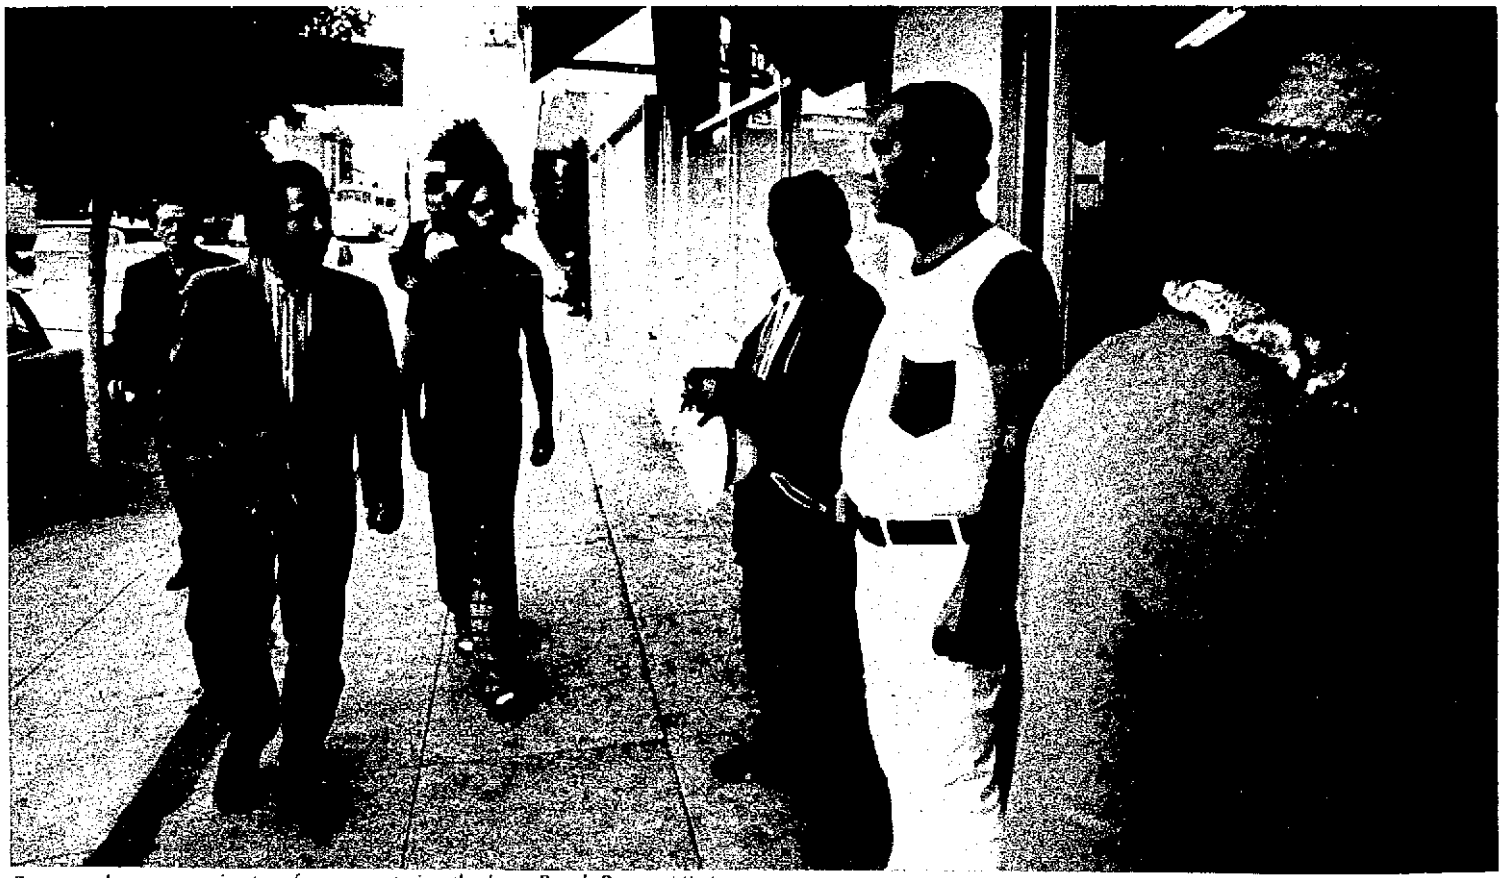

They came to Los Angeles in 1968, where Teuerle worked at Union Rescue Mission for three years. In 1971, Teuerle felt a "burden" for Long Beach. He knew that Long Beach was going to have a mission and that he was the instrument of that plan.

Teuerle dressed like a bum and prowled that decrepit area near the Pike known without affection as The Jungle. He found that The Jungle's buildings were being demolished, but that its denizens remained. He tried to find a place to eat and spend the night as a penniless transient. There was none. Long Beach Police Chief William Mooney told him that the downtown area was plagued with about 50 "sleepers" a night. Everybody said that Long Beach needed a mission, but nobody did anything about it.

Teuerle did something. At his behest, local businessmen fronted a $15,000 down payment on the building. Construction materials were donated. Churches were lobbied for assistance. General Telephone donated a new truck. Volunteers appeared to rebuild the interior of the building. Teuerle not only acted as prime mover in attracting support for the mission — a full-time job — he showed up in jeans to install skylights and wallboard. During the first two years, he worked 16 hours a day, seven days a week.

A remarkable achievement? You couldn't tell by Teuerle's attitude.

"God made me do it," he says, almost in passing. □

Ribs that tickle

By VIRGINIA HEFFINGTON

Don't spare the ribs when it comes to the barbecue. The rich flavor of meaty pork ribs cooked to a turn over an outdoor grill is unsurpassed.

Sauces can vary from honest tomato to an exotic combination of marmalade and consomme. Pictured is an easy sauce with beer as the base. Most of the traditional seasonings are mixed in including catsup, chili sauce, mustard, lemon and Worcestershire.

Spareribs are a fat cut so need long slow cooking and plenty of turning. Don't buy ordinary spareribs for the barbecue. These come from the bacon strip and don't have much meat between the bones. Best for the grill are the extra meaty loin-back ribs sometimes called country or baby ribs. Allow ¾ pound per person of meaty ribs and at least 1 pound of the fatter kind.

If you want to spin the ribs on the rotisserie, have them cut in narrow strips for easier lacing on the spit. Of course, this is a problem at stores with no meatman on duty. With the ribs, serve corn grilled in the husks and a crisp tossed salad.

The biggest extravagance with most outdoor cooks is an overabundance of briquets. The amount needed depends upon the size and type of food to be grilled, the kind of barbecue equipment and the weather. For most foods, a single layer of briquets that extends about an inch beyond the dimension of the food is adequate. This applies to spareribs.

Rotisseried foods need the most briquets. If you find yourself short of charcoal before the food is done, add more around the edges of the burning coals. On the other hand, if food gets away from you and cooks too fast, move a few coals to the sides.

Virginia Heffington is the I,P-T food editor.

After the food is cooked you can retrieve any partly burned briquets by dousing them individually with tongs in cold water. A bath of about one second is all they need. Then dry them out in the firebox of your barbecue.

When the briquets have turned to ashes, turn them into fertilizer by strewing over the garden or lawn or by adding them to a compost heap.

A word of caution about briquets is that they are for outdoor cooking only. The temptation to curl up next to the grill on a chilly evening has been the death of those who put up smoke signals inside the camper, van, cabin or boat. If there is plenty of ventilation, as in a fireplace, then briquets are fine indoors. The same holds for a garage with a wide open door.

rest of ingredients for sauce; simmer 5 to 10 minutes, stirring now and then.

To grill the ribs, place them bone side down on grill. Broil over slow coals 30 minutes, brushing oven with the sauce. Turn meaty side down and grill another 30 minutes or till done, brushing often with sauce and turning as needed.

If desired, ribs may cook the whole time over the coals but there's a school of thought the ribs dry out more this way. The ribs will also char more. Don't start basting the ribs until they've had an hour on the heat or the sauce will singe.

Sprinkle the raw ribs with salt and pepper and place bone side down on the grill. Broil over slow coals about 30 minutes. Turn meaty side down and broil just till nicely browned.

Turn ribs bone side down again and brush liberally with sauce; broil 30 minutes, basting often. You may need to baste and turn ribs frequently another 30 minutes before they are done. Time will depend upon size of ribs, how hot the coals are and how far away from the coals the grill is. Makes 4 servings.

SOUTHLAND SALAD

- 1 bunch leaf lettuce, torn in bite-size pieces
- 1 1/2 cups torn spinach leaves (ribs and stems removed)
- 1 cup thinly sliced fresh mushrooms
- 1/2 cup thinly sliced cucumber
- 1 recipe Italian dressing

Combine greens, mushrooms and cucumber in bowl. Pour on enough Italian dressing to coat then toss to mix evenly. Now taste — you may want to sprinkle the salad with salt and coarse-ground pepper. Or it may be you want to squash lemon juice over all. Whatever you add, toss to mix again. Makes 6 servings.

ITALIAN DRESSING

- 1 cup olive or other salad oil
- 1/4 cup red wine vinegar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon coarse-ground pepper
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 2 cloves garlic, minced

Combine ingredients in jar; cover and shake to blend. Shake again before dressing salad.

GRILLED CORN

Buy corn on the cob with husks on. The husks should be green and the silk should be soft and damp. Gently peel down just enough husks to remove the silk. Pat husks back in original position and soak the corn in cold water to cover about 30 minutes.

Remove corn from the water and place over medium heat; grill about 20 minutes or till done, making a quarter turn every 5 minutes or so for even cooking. (If the husks were chopped off at the end when you bought the corn, you may need to anchor the husks by tying string around the ends of the ears.)

Let guests peel back their own husks. Serve the corn with the usual butter and salt and pepper. □

Brick patio adds charm

By STEVE ELLINGSON

The romance of brick is forever. And the older it gets, the richer and warmer the effect. Our patio project can bring the charm of brick to your backyard, providing a rich setting for outdoor living and adding to the resale value of your home.

It's easy to lay a brick patio similar to the one pictured here. Our detailed instructions will guide you every step of the way. With the basic information offered in the pattern, you can also lay a brick walkway or build the brick barbecue pictured here. Planter walls and foundations are covered in depth.

However, the accent is on laying bricks with a sand or concrete base, with or without wood divider strips. The suggested patio design we offer can be adapted to any backyard simply by adding or deleting sections of brick. A complete list of tools and a materials estimate guide is included in our pattern. Brick offers great variations of color, pattern, texture and shape, lending itself to almost limitless effects. Here's a chance to really put your imagination to work!

Getting soaked at the fountain of youth

By RUTH ENGELKEN

Ever since Ponce de Leon searched for the Fountain of Youth, Americans have been looking for ways to prolong health, vigor and beauty — and a host of swindlers have been promising aid. Their schemes — running the gamut from deceptive to dangerous to deadly — bring confrontations with the law.

The law, in this case, is the U.S. Postal Service which operates under a century-old criminal mail fraud statute and a later civil statute aimed at false representation. While complaints can result in formal hearings, most are settled by signed agreements before they reach that stage.

What are some of the phony lines that have been hooking Americans?

"False diet claims," says Thomas Ziebarth, stocky, gray-haired lawyer in the Consumer Protection Office of the Postal Inspection Service in Washington, D. C. During the past two years grapefruit diets alone have totaled 51 cases, 38 of which were settled voluntarily with formal agreements.

"What's wrong with grapefruit? Nothing. It's nutritious and low in calories and could well be used on a diet. But it possesses no catalytic properties that melt body fat, as many ads suggest, and any number of other foods could be used in place of it. Put simply, grapefruit before each meal does not burn up the fat consumed during the meal.

"Actually," Ziebarth continued, "the grapefruit diet would be most effective if you deleted the grapefruit altogether and substituted nothing for it. But the grapefruit keeps the diet from being unhealthy; it supplies some carbohydrate.

"Any diet no matter how screwy will accomplish an initial weight loss. If continued, gross dehydration and ketosis may result. The tissue of muscles and vital organs, which are composed of a large part of water, can be used up and destroyed.

"Despite our efforts, it seems that each time we stop one operation another one pops up somewhere else," Ziebarth remarks. "Just recently we received a final order against an outfit that called itself Grapefruit Diet Division, operating out of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., but there are still three or four similar cases by this promoter now under investigation."

Little wonder that the scheme dies hard. At $2 a plan, one promoter was collecting for a time between 800 and 1,000 letters a day. His "take" netted about a quarter of a million dollars.

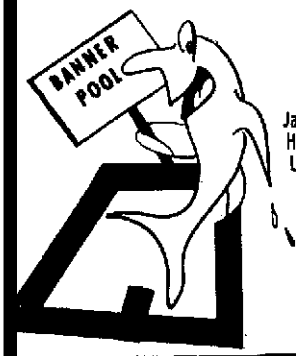

Because grapefruit diets are so similar, promoters hunt for "new" or "different" angles. One opportunist used a name that sounded like Weight Watchers International, Inc., a legitimate group not connected in any way with his plan.

Seeking to legitimize their plans by linking them with a prestigious name or organization is a common trick of diet schemers. The recently touted Air Force Diet — essentially the Stillman Diet which limits the intake of carbohydrates to 60 grams a day — had no endorsement from the United States Air Force, as indicated. When the promoters were questioned, they hedged. Sorry, they had not meant the U.S. Air Force Academy but the Royal Canadian Air Force Academy. The diet was now given a RCAF label. The truth? There is no Royal Canadian Air Force Academy; neither is there any official endorsement of this diet by any air force academy.

Some products are downright dangerous

Nor is there endorsement by Olympic authorities of the "U.S. Women's Ski Team Diet," supposedly sanctioned by a noted Colorado physician and offered by a California firm. Like many schemes, this one contains a spark of truth — but a spark fanned by hot air into a flaming misrepresentation. The coach of our Olympic ski team did concoct a diet which he had checked by a doctor for use by his healthy young girl athletes as a short-term proposition to get a few pounds off. The diet, extremely high in cholesterol (six eggs a day), was never meant for the average citizen and could be dangerous for many if followed for any length of time.

Dr. Sheldon Margen, chairman of the Department of Nutritional Science at the University of California at Berkeley, tried to set the diet subject straight when he recently testified at a hearing that the ideal diet for fat reduction consists of 30 per cent fat, 15 per cent carbohydrates and 55 per cent protein with a caloric consumption that should never go below 1,200.

"Most Americans eat foods in about the ideal proportion but the overweight people eat slightly more fat than they should — in the neighborhood of 40 per cent fat — and exceed their calorie limits of 2,500 to 2,800 for men and 2,200 to 2,400 for women," Dr. Margen testified.

Because any type of diet may be unpleasant to a person used to eating whatever and whenever he wants, promoters present enticing alternatives, such as appetitie depressants. One New Jersey firm offered through direct mail order a capsule containing sodium carboxymethylcellulose, a chemical that supposedly increases in size when ingested until the stomach feels full. At a hearing last June, doctors refuted the claim. According to Dr. Vincent F. Cordar, medical review officer for the Food and Drug Administration, the chemical could be used to fill the entire stomach of a dieter and he could still feel hungry.

Mail being held may contain more than $100,000.

Wraps and belts promise another method of painless weight reduction. One promoter of an oversized ace (stretch) bandage moistened with a solution like Epsom salts has been forced by the government to discontinue his false claims. Another case against a popular belt manufacturer ended in a decision against the manufacturer last October.

While most of the products are merely worthless, some are downright dangerous. One diet wrap used on a healthy, 42-year-old Indiana woman in a reducing salon brought tragic results.

Sara Desjardins had been joking with attendants as they began wrapping the bandages around her legs; a short time later her laughter stopped — and so did her breathing. An ambulance rushed her to a nearby hospital where she was pronounced dead. The Ft. Wayne coroner's inquest reportedly listed "pulmonary edema with circulatory complications in her lower limbs and aluminum sulphate inhalation" as the cause of death. A lawsuit initiated by the victim's husband is pending in the Indiana courts.

Creams and lotions are other gimmicks to remove weight effortlessly. Middle too fat? Hips too big? Legs too heavy? No need for pills or exercises or dieting. Simply smooth on cream and "wipe away ugly fat . . . where you want, when you want." If the advertising line sounds too good to you to be true, it sounded the same way to postal attorneys who, after investigation, filed a complaint against the East Coast firm.

During recent hearings in Washington, D.C., a chemist testified that the viscous liquid, alleged to contain "exotic algae and planktons" which possess a "natural reducing power," consisted of slightly over 97 per cent water and a non-volatile residue of less than 3 per cent. The only active ingredients in the residue were the cellulose derivative (parahydroxy benzoate ester) used as a preservative and the dye used for coloring purposes.

What's more, a skin specialist testified that there is no known substance or chemical that can be applied to the skin which will affect the metabolic process so as to cause a reduction in fat deposits or a loss of weight. The largely colored water product markets for $6 for a 30-day supply; $18 for a 120-day supply.

Apparently, the more outlandish the claims, the more eager the believers. Richard Hefner, another case-hardened postal lawyer in the Consumer Protection Office, shakes his head as he says, "It is difficult to protect the public. It seems many will be taken no matter what you do." He cites a case involving a reducing liquid that supposedly takes weight off through the pores of your skin while you bathe.

When the magazine ad was received by the office, everybody laughed. No one could believe that you can lose all that weight (50 or 60 pounds from five 15-minute baths) with just a capful of liquid in your bath water, they said. They even made an office joke! If you stay in the water too long, you'll have to hang onto the sides of the tub to keep from going down the drain." But the promoter had rightly guessed the public's gullibility. A total of 30,000 "takers" sent $6 each for a 30-day supply of the product. The mail was detained and eventually returned to senders by the postal service as the result of a court order.

Incredible cases? Yes. Pathetic too. But no more pathetic than cases involving aphrodisiacs, agents to arouse or increase sexual desire. In a sex-sick culture, impotence and waning appeal are frightening possibilities. Ingenious promoters provide "cures."

Guaranteed to improve your virility are marula nuts from a tree in South Africa — "nature's specific remedy against the sexual weakening of age, time or place." Hefner tosses a sackful of the light brown pips across the desk. "It's OK to touch them," he says with a grin. "They're in plastic." Then he produces a 20-day supply of acrid smelling marula tea bags that sells for $10.

If nuts or tea don't turn you on, how about imitation Spanish Fly Love Pills? "A great funmaker for adult parties," reads the ad. Investigators give it a different label: "deception."

Real Spanish Fly is cantharides, a preparation of powdered, dried Spanish flies which can produce a burning sensation in the bladder or urethra. If chewed in gum, burning in the stomach or throat may result. Nothing about Spanish Fly in pill, liquid or gum form aids sexual potency. Nor do the different "stimulant" creams for men and women, as one Florida sex peddler maintains. As a matter of fact, they do not even contain cantharides, only cayenne pepper.

But the tiny motor that fits into the center pocket of a fancy pink bra stimulates — or, more accurately, vibrates. "Did you ever see one of these?" Ziebarth asks, flipping the switch and causing a hum in the office like an electric razor.

"Never."

I reach for the advertising copy and note that it promises new elasticity for tired tissues and flaccid ligaments and a restoration of youthful firmness. "You may never have to wear a bra again." The case against the manufacturer for alleged false statements was recently settled by consent agreement.

Ziebarth replaces the bra.

"There are three things people are hung up on: 1) overweight, 2) female underdevelopment and 3) sexual inadequacy."

The glib-tongued lawyer who also teaches a course in Legal Aspects of Communication at American University suggests a solution. "If your problem is physical, see a urologist or gynecologist. If mental, a head shrinker might help. If over 60," Ziebarth pauses — "turn your attention to other things."

Things like wrinkles, maybe. And don't think promoters haven't thought of them. Honey-haired Nancy Dorsch, an attorney, is now working on a case against a Vitamin E oil manufacturer who claims his product does wonders for facial lines and creases. Analysis revealed that the oil contained the proper amount of Vitamin E (more even than stipulated), but the government got involved when the company claimed results not yet proved.

If wrinkles cause worry for the no-longer-young, so does graying and thinning hair. Operators offer a handy little bottle, available through the mail, that contains a liquid supposed to grow new hair for men. Analysis proved that the product which sold for $10 contained only a hand lotion ingredient.

A wig, of course, can cover the problem. So can a promoter with a hair-raising scheme. Elliott Nathaniel Scott, a Philadelphian, served a prison term four years ago for a fraud involving women's wigs. Once out of jail, Scott was back in business. Early in 1972 he sent thousands of postcards to women all over the country informing them that they had either been chosen to receive or that they had won a "free" 100 per cent human wig valued at $89. All that the "lucky" woman had to pay was a styling fee, plus postage and handling. Styling charges ran as high as $15 for wigs that actually sold for $4.98 to $8.50.

More than 1,000 complaints flooded the post office from irate "winners" who either failed to receive a wig or a refund of a styling charge, as promised. No contest or drawing had occurred: Scott got his victims' names from the telephone book and from referrals.

One woman from Sherman Mills, Maine, ran into double trouble. After paying the COD charge of $15.96, she lifted the lid of the box to find a man's wig.

Hair isn't the only thing that deteriorates with age: The liver, heart and circulation go too. To remedy the deficiencies, handy-dandy quack doctors offer "free" examinations at traveling clinics. Like the swallows, they return in predictable cycles. C.A. Miller, director of the Office of Criminal Investigations for the Inspection Service, knows all too well how they operate, for he worked in the medical investigation branch. The DeWelles case, channeled in 1965 through the office of the inspector in charge of Cincinnati, is typical. Miller, tanned and wiry, clasps his hands behind his head and tips his chair back as he recalls the details.

"Roy DeWelles, an alleged chiropractor from Los Angeles, was a big fellow with mustache and white coat like someone out of a TV show. He set up a free clinic in an office of an alcoholic chiropractor in Shelbyville, Ind. Ten thousand postal cards went out through the mails and people began rolling in. Most who came in thought they were going to get an adjustment. 'No, your problem is more deeply rooted than that,' they were told. 'You need a colon examination. Practically all body problems stem from colonic problems. This costs $10. Along with it is a barium enema.' The enema did not contain barium at all.

"The 'nurse' was his wife. She helped DeWelles with X rays. They brought out two X-ray pictures: 'This is the normal colon; this is yours.'" Miller grimaces and cuts a "Z" through the air. "Terrible looking!" Actually, Miller explains, there's no such thing as a normal pattern colon. "This will require more treatment,' the doctor would say. 'This is a $75, three-month set of treatments.'"

As Miller remembers it, the colonic irrigation machine was supposed to blow water with oxygen. "'The human being cannot exist without oxygen,' DeWelles was fond of repeating. As a matter of fact, it blew no oxygen at all."

Miller got into the case when an irate Hoosier farmer got hooked. Like 9,999 others, he had received a card. He had gotten a free X-ray examination that was for him a humiliating treatment. After his experience he had gone down to the sheriff and said there were some crooks in the chiropractor's office. An obscure registration law — DeWelles did not have an Indiana license — caused the sheriff to arrest him. Miller and an inspector interviewed the farmer in his cornfield. They found him both funny and indignant as he recounted his office visit. Later, the old man retold his story in a crowded courtroom to laughing spectators and an amused judge.

The farmer was more fortunate than some men who ended in graveyards after their colons had burst from DeWelles's machine. DeWelles himself ended in Terre Haute Federal Penitentiary on a 10-year sentence.

Fake clinics, fake analyses, fake health foods. Still the rackets continue. Wherever there is a desire, there is a dupe. Americans anxious to recapture youth are easily hoodwinked.

Tom Ziebarth offers a parting word of advice: "A consumer should take a skeptical view of any claim of any advertising which his common sense tells him is unbelievable. There are no panaceas if you send $5 to a post office box. Take the advice of the Better Business Bureau: 'Investigate before you invest." □

Have you heard the one about the traveling saleswoman?

BY JOANNE REYNOLDS

"Gee but it's great to be back home,
Home is where I want to be.
I've been on the road so long my friend,
And if you came along
I know you couldn't disagree."

From "Keep the Customer Satisfied." Paul Simon.

The plight of the traveling businessman has been immortalized into a national folk institution by song and story. In the early days of the 19th century, he was a salesman who sold his wares town to town. According to the legend, he was part charlatan, an alleged seducer of farmers' daughters and a man who generally lived by his wits.

The mystique of the traveling businessman of the 1970s is a little more sophisticated. Today he travels on the country's freeways or jet ways and is as likely to be the president of a company as the seller of its products. He is seen as overworked and probably lonely, spending his spare time in a comfortless hotel room, pining for his family or seeking companionship in sleazy bars.

But as the old saying goes, times are changing, and the old jokes about the traveling businessman are going to have to give way from the standard line, "Say, did you hear the one about the traveling salesman and the farmer's daughter?" to "Ever hear the story about the traveling businesswoman and . . . ?"

Like every other profession from police work to steeple jacking, more women are moving into the business fields in jobs that require them, along with their male counterparts, to spend some time on the road.

Hard statistics on the subject are impossible to come by, but a brief survey of some of Southern California's biggest businesses indi- 32 cates that the previously all-male domain of traveling for business is being steadily invaded by women.

The trend is obviously a product of the tendency of the government to harshly treat companies found to be discriminating in job placement against minorities such as women. One spokesman who asked that his name and his company's identity be withheld, noted that there was a certain amount of cynicism attached to the original promotions at his firm when women were given jobs that required traveling. He said the thinking was that the "ladies" would soon tire of the rigors of driving the freeways or jet lag and would be happy to stay in lesser jobs. But apparently that did not prove to be the case there.

Whatever the reasons involved in landing a traveling job, women seem to fare no better or worse under the duress of constantly being away from home than men do. In fact, there are a few who thrive on it. Meet two women from another company, General Telephone Directory, who travel extensively and love it.

Women fare about the same as men

Barbara Kelly, 29, is currently a division manager for the company, a relatively desk-bound job. But for two years she was telephone sales trainer for the western and northwestern region of General Telephone and spent a lot of time on the road. Her successor is Marsha Wise, 27. Since assuming that post 15 months ago, Marsha has averaged a trip a month to every major West Coast city as well as Las Vegas, Honolulu, Dallas and Chicago — a pace that was set by Barbara when she was trainer from 1971-1973.

The telephone sales trainer teaches new employes how to sell space for Yellow Pages ads. The traveling is a result of the company's desire to have a follow-up, in-the-field training sessions following the original instruction at the Los Alamitos facility.

Because Barbara, and then Marsha, were the ones doing the training in Los Alamitos, they were elected to do the post-training work as well.

Says Barbara, "Generally, I loved traveling. I really miss it, but I don't think I'd want to be going to quite the extent that I was before I was promoted."

Marsha's views about traveling are colored by the fact that unlike Barbara, who is single, she leaves her husband Stan behind when she takes off on the outings that can last as long as two weeks.

"It's fun, but it's so nice to get home. In fact it's getting nicer and nicer to get home. It's not all that much fun living out of a suit case," she explains.

Of the two women, Marsha is the more experienced at taking her job on the road. Prior to hiring on with the telephone company, she was a candy saleswoman whose territory covered most of Southern California from Laguna Beach to Lancaster.

Stan, 32, who sells tax shelter plans for a living, says he is proud of the promotion that got Marsha her job, but adds, "I didn't understand there would be quite that much traveling involved."

He says he doesn't worry about Marsha being on her own in strange cities. "She's an intelligent woman who can take care of herself. Although I realize that the traveling she does opens her up to more potentially unpleasant things, I think she could handle any problems that she might have."

Both women say they have had no encounters in their travels that would make them give it up. The most trying situation Marsha has had to live through was an airlines reservation foul-up and Barbara said her only unpleasantries occurred during a six-week stint in Australia when the audio-visual equipment was constantly breaking down.

"When you think about it, there really isn't any hazard attached to traveling," says Marsha. "Stan worried more about me when I was selling candy and had to go to downtown L.A. and drive the freeways every day. Now about all that can happen is that the phones could blow up."

The people they have met, especially the traveling businessmen, have never given them any problems. "The men are curious when they find out you're a traveling businesswoman," says Barbara. "I wouldn't say they try to hustle you. They're just curious. A woman traveling by herself is a very strange animal to them. First of all they don't believe you. You usually have to end up proving it."

Marsha breaks in. "If a man sees a woman traveling alone, especially flying, he automatically assumes she's on vacation. It takes a little convincing to get them to understand you're traveling for business."

Then, says Barbara, you get the standard set of questions:

"Aren't you afraid to be traveling alone?"

"Doesn't your husband mind?"

"Don't you hate to eat alone?"

"They suddenly get very protective. They go from disbelief to a paternalistic interest," explains Barbara, who is the only woman division manager in the General Telephone Directory Co.

What's a day like on the road for a traveling woman?

According to Barbara and Marsha, most of the time is spent on the job watching their former trainees perform. After work, their itineraries differed slightly, reflecting the differences in their marital status.

Barbara says she likes to go out every night, either with someone from the company or someone she may have known in town. If no one was available to go with her, she'd go alone.

Marsha, on the other hand, says she limits her nights out to company people, often the trainees she is evaluating so that she can become better acquainted with them.

Both women said they spent weekends getting to know the city they were visiting by sightseeing, visiting local galleries and museums and shopping.

"I do a lot of shopping," laughed Marsha. "I could probably name every shop in every shopping center in most of the places I've been. Usually the last thing Stan tells me is, 'Please don't spend a lot of money,' and the first thing he asks me when I get home is, "What did you buy?"'

Getting along in a strange city without having to worry about a man trying to pick them up is no problem for either woman. In fact, Barbara says that when she travels she makes it a point to meet at least one local resident because, "You get to know a city a lot better when you've got a native for a guide." Marsha says she avoids the problem of the susceptible woman alone in a bar or restaurant by not being alone in a bar or restaurant.

"When there's nobody available, I usually get room service and eat in my room or pick up some take-out food to take back to the hotel," she says.

The socializing on the trips is somewhat limited by the paper work attendant with the job. "Even when I'm gone, the paper work for my job in Los Alamitos keeps piling up plus the evaluations I do on the people in the field. I try to keep up by doing it at night or on the airplane."

Neither of them seem to fit the sad caricature of a traveling businessman, whiling away lonely hours in a hotel room or bar. "You're just too busy," says Barbara.

But the vagabond life, they both agreed, has had some effect on their personal relationships. Barbara notes that she never had a boyfriend urging her to quit traveling. "Frankly, I was so busy I didn't have time for what you might call a social life. I sort of had to sneak it in between flights."

Stan and Marsha both say her traveling, if anything, has strengthened their six-year marriage.

Stan explains, "I tend to work harder when she's gone to fill the time. I have a lot of evening work which is good, because if I had a 9 - 5 job, I'd come home and go bananas or go out and get drunk every night. Actually, I have a couple of friends who are single that I go out with occasionally.

"I think the traveling has helped our relationship because we enjoy each other so much more when she's home. Our time together is precious."

Marsha notes a reversal of roles when she's on the road. "Stan doesn't sleep well when I'm gone. But when I'm home and he's gone for some reason, I don't sleep. Every little noise I hear has me convinced that someone's trying to break into the house. Yet in a hotel, I feel very secure. I sleep like someone hit me on the head."

With Marsha gone, Stan says he rarely cooks for himself. Friends and relatives constantly invite him to dinner and he does a lot of his selling at night, so like his wife, he dines on take-out food.

"I also don't do the laundry," he adds. "If I start to run out of something, I'll just go buy what I need. I think I own 50 pairs of shorts."

One trait both Barbara and Marsha share with the legendary traveling salesman is a subconscious desire to settle down. In spite of the fact that she obviously enjoys her traveling job, Marsha like Barbara before her, will be glad when she can go on to something else.

"It's really fun — a great job. But it will be nice to quit traveling some day." □

The Tijuana most people don't see

BY JEAN SANDERS

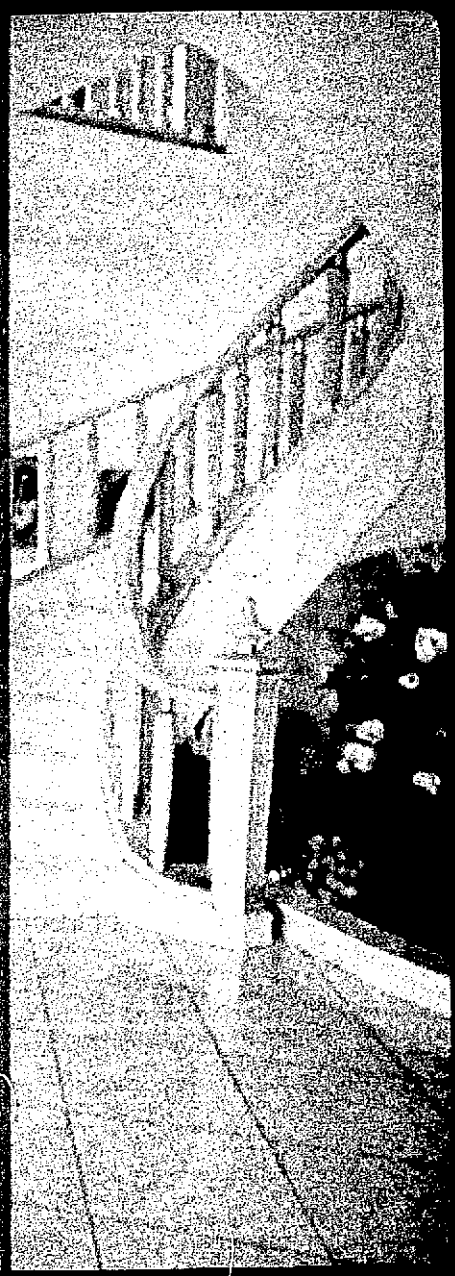

The average tourist, crossing the border into Mexico from San Diego, is struck by ramshackle upholstery shops, helter skelter junkyards, a main street lined with small stores, some very good and some very bad.

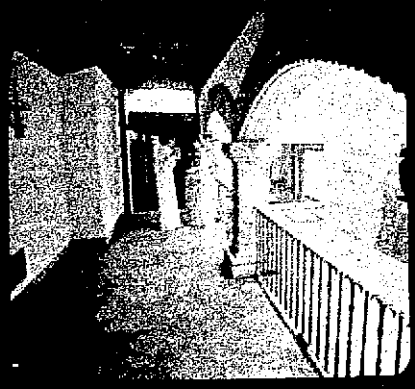

If the gringo visitor is Ensenada-bound, he cannot fail to notice the crude shacks of the poor — crumbling cardboard, tin and plank shelters that barely pass for homes and house large families, dogs, an occasional chicken and pig. Mexican border towns do not conceal their poverty masses as well as cities north of the border.

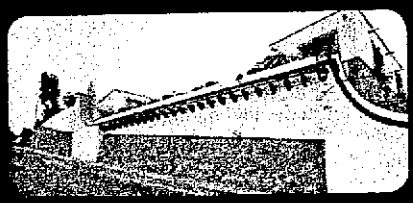

But there is another side of Tijuana. After all, quite a few "someones" must own and operate the city's businesses and in Mexico accummulated pesos go pretty far.

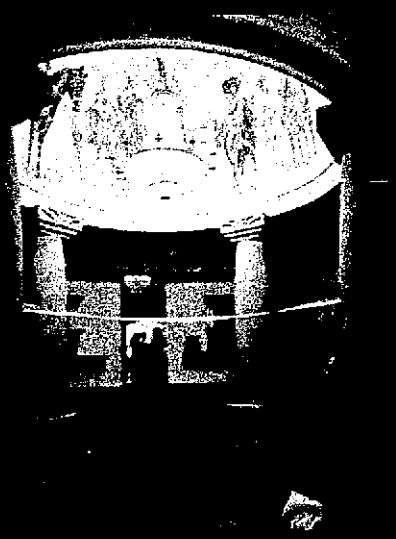

Tucked in residential pockets and perched high in the hills surrounding the sprawling border town are the homes of the affluent, seldom noticed by the tourist bent on bargains, sports, a nip of tequila or resorts further down the Baja line.

Anyway, even if a person did notice them, what chance would he have of ever seeing more than the outside?

Several years ago a group of 25 women in San Diego and 25 in Tijuana formed a hands-across-the-border organization they call Caridad Internacional. The ideal for the international charity germinated in the fertile mind of Senora Graciela Aldrete. Bilingual, and with homes in both Chula Vista and Tijuana, she clearly saw possibilities for a charity that would benefit both sides of the international border.

On the Mexican side there was need for a rehabilitation residence for young women who come to Tijuana from Mexico's interior and find themselves destitute.

On the United States side, there was interest in the neighboring country, but lack of knowledge about the modes of life — other than the tarpaper shacks lining dusty, rutted streets.

Mrs. Hernando Limon, large photo at left, stands in the entry of her Tijuana home. In the center panel are photos of the Raymundo Arnaiz residence: the hallway passing the atrium; the backyard retaining wall; and the sunken library with its domed ceiling. At upper right is the Limons' daughter-in-law with a portrait of an early-day Limon who was a member of the Maximillian court. Below are a table set in the Limon dining room and the Limon family chapel.

Tijuana

The fortunate tour ticketholder gets her money's worth plus a few thrills

Thus was begun a Tijuana Home Tour, which even today causes a raised eyebrow of disbelief on the part of those who have never heard of such a thing.

Word spread fast. Here was a home tour similar to those in the United States, but with a distinct, provocative Mexican flavor, tart as a lime, serene as a soft guitar, as full of surprises as a pinata.

Women north of the border flocked to Tijuana to observe distinctive Mexican architecture, furnishings and traditions.

Things like:

— Vaulted brick ceilings.

— A two-story circular library with upholstered reading pit.

— A collection of artfully placed 19th century saints.

— A family's private chapel.

— Walls of onyx and floors of slate or rosewood parquet.

— Immense portraits of aristocratic ancestors.

— A row of nine trees on a parkway representing each of the owners' children and cared for individually by each child.

Limiting attendance to 1,000 in deference to the Tijuana home-owners, Caridad Internacional has returned hundreds of requests for tickets in its three years of annual May tours.

At $10 a head, the fortunate ticketholder gets her money's worth, plus a few thrills.

From a central location, guests board Tijuana buses with radios tuned full volume to the local station, windshields decorated with a wide fringe of various fading hues and an occasional gearshift springing from a doll's head on the floorboard.

Waved adios by beautifully costumed Tijuana women, the passengers peer out at street fruit vendors and walls of peeling paint before the bus grinds up steep hills. Thanks be to Dios the drivers know what they are doing and have good brakes, particularly when parking is at a premium and the bus slides backwards downhill to a likely parking spot.

It becomes apparent that Tijuana's affluent citizens live a more formal life than most in the U. S. Many of the spacious homes have several living rooms. The more formal, with crystal chandeliers either of Mexican or European origin in recessed ceilings, are called reception rooms.

Dining rooms, resplendent with European crystal, silver, fine china and bouquets of fresh flowers are formal also, but there is usually a separate dining area for casual dinners.

Price per square foot seems to be of little consequence in Mexico. Entrance halls are vast. They may feature an indoor garden or a sweep of a circular marble staircase, an imposing gold leaf table with ceiling-high mirror or a wall divider of natural Mexican wood squares, softly rounded at the corners, each centered with amber glass and held apart from one another by brass fittings.

While some homes have their draperies fashioned in Los Angeles, many rely on Mexican artistry — and artistry it is. The graceful swags, festoons and glass curtains accent picture windows of astounding size.

Europe's influence is felt in many of the homes, from exquisite collections of crystal and glass to Louis XV and XVI furnishings. However, Mexico's fine artisans and craftsmen have contributed their multiple talents in virtually every home. Where one homeowner may have his furniture handcarved in Guadalajara, painted white and trimmed in gold leaf, another will have his manufactured and upholstered in Tijuana — with outstanding results.

Kitchens are hardly the mind's eye version of an earthen oven hovered over by a round senora patting out tortillas. They are large, modern, cabineted with mellow native woods and intricate Mexican hardware.

One which inspired sighs and awe in this year's tour featured buff tiles fired in Guanajuato. Gaily interspersed on walls and counters were tiles of vegetables, from asparagus to zucchini.

The entrance to this particular kitchen in the just-completed Mexican Colonial home of Senor and Senora Raymundo Arnaiz was off a slate hallway that would do justice to a hotel. Like thick twists of honey-colored taffy, beams of parota wood and suspended grills of the same warm wood beckoned one to enter this 'cocina', 20th century modern, but invitingly warm and sunny.

In stark contrast to the leaning shanties of the poor are the elegant, roomy bathrooms of the well-to-do with their sunken tubs, ample showers and dressing rooms. Restraint in tile colors is evident. Rather than the familiar multicolored, multipatterned Spanish tile one finds in Mexico's public places and surrounding fountains are monotone shades of soft greens or pale lavenders.

And while most of the homes use materials indigenous to Mexico, some look to Italy for their bathroom tile.

A guest bath in the Arnaiz home drew smiles of delight. Situated in a semicircular alcove of soft persimmon and black tile like the throne it is sometimes called was the commode. The ceiling rose 20 feet up to a skylighted tower, casting soft shimmers on the etched brass lavatory and brass faucets.

Upper class Tijuana bedrooms, large, airy, furniture glistening, seem to follow a pattern, if one is to judge by the tour homes. Most favor the giant velvet padded headboard that is almost an altar in itself.

Wedgewood blue and white are a favored combination, but soft pinks as well as "Mexican pink" are popular too. It is in the childrens' bedrooms that color runs wild as the wares of a paper flower vendor.

Depending on the owners' taste, the exterior of homes of the Tijuana brass may be starkly modern, Mexican Colonial or traditional Spanish white stucco and tile roofed. As might be expected, gardens brim with roses, geraniums and unfamiliar but vibrant blooms. Some of the gardens have swimming pools and al fresco dining areas; others place emphasis on tennis courts with game rooms and showers located in a nearby building away from the main house.

A Tijuana architect built two special outbuildings when he designed his modern home high in the Chapultepec district of Tijuana. Reached by separate walkways fanning in opposite directions from the main house are a studio for his blonde wife to pursue her art career and a duplicate building for his son's rock and roll musician friends.

Unexpected bonuses accompany the tour. Upstairs in the private chapel of one family the owner's daughter and four-year-old granddaughter added atmosphere dressed as they were in replicas of a white wedding gown worn by an ancestor whose large portrait dominated a wall in the hall just outside the chapel.

Downstairs, in the red carpeted music room with white upholstered furniture, a dignified Tijuana gentleman rippled light classics on a white piano trimmed with gold leaf as a handsome Mexican woman in yellow listened.

Then there is the unusual. A staircase in one home led to an upper lobby where television and music from a German-made stereo could be enjoyed. Off this central room was a bar with avocado green leather stools and long custom seats. Another room on this second floor was a library with panels hand-carved in Tijuana. There were two bedrooms, also, almost as an afterthought.

Breathtakingly beautiful Tijuana young women who speak excellent English stand quietly in each room of every home, ready to answer questions of the visiting gringas and a few gringos.

Each wears a costume of her country, from handsome suede women's charro costumes with camel-colored felt sombreros framing raven hair to flower-splashed ruffled skirts and fresh flowers twined in sleek black hair.

Mexican hospitality permeates the daylong tour. Appetites the second year of the tour were assuaged with luncheon at the Tijuana Country Club and a refreshing break in the gardens of one of the homes for sangria, sipped as mariachis boomed joyously and several decorative senoritas in flamenco gowns sat picturesquely by the pool.

This year visitors were invited to the Jai Alai Palace for margaritas and bocadillos, Mexican hors d'oeuvres, enjoyed as the ubiquitous mariachis played and departed, leaving the musical entertainment to a tiny man in white who delicately plucked a native harp.

The band of 50 Caridad Internacional members and associates work year long on the tour. They meet monthly in one another's homes on both sides of the border for friendship, hospitality and cementing of tour plans for the next year.

The San Diego membership contributes to various charities of its choosing in the San Diego area, and, as mentioned previously, the Tijuana women are building a residence for needy young Mexican women. Both sides of the border share equally in the profits.

In these days when old world graciousness is old hat, Caridad Internacional's Tijuana Home Tour is as refreshing and welcome as a Mexican smile. □

James Caan- The urban rustic

BY REX REED

On the screen, as Sonny in the $142 million-grossing Godfather, or as the dying football hero in TV's Emmy-winning Brian's Song, or, more recently, as the Billy Buddish sailor in Cinderella Liberty, James Caan appears to be enormous, burly and jocundly rock-ribbed. But when he answers the doorbell of the first house he's ever owned in 30 years of living in a not-very-big way, James Caan (pronounced Khan, as in Kubla) is a rather diminutive 5-foot-10, and not half the Trojan one expects.

It's his language that is chesty, and his good-humored arrogance that puts muscle on his frame. He's slim, taut and "split up as high as a Texas cowboy," which is what he play acts when he's not a movie star. Wearing faded jeans and a silly T-shirt from a friend's New York store that says Doctor Generosity, he trundles teddy-bare-footedly ahead to flop on a sofa.

Rex Reed is a syndicated entertainment writer.

He smiles insouciantly and offers blunt bread-and-butter introductions to his live-in brother, Ronnie, and to his roommate for the past three years, former Playboy centerfold Connie Kreski. Connie has brought instant coffee and box cookies to soothe the snorts and sniffles of his sinus condition, which makes his broadside of "I means" and "You knows" sound like bronchial telegraphese. His unfinished sentences are punctuated with the hackneyed profanity of honest rebellion, while the frequent, nice guy laughter has a patina of gentle warmth. James Caan is that paradoxical human product of American consumerism — the urban rustic.

Hot from the lucky break of appearing in both The Godfather and Brian's Song in one year, he has just finished three films in nine months, two of them — The Gambler and Freebie and the Bean — still unreleased. He's now in the enviable position of being able to turn down scripts, for although he enjoys acting, it's his business, not his life.

As a business, acting can only buy him the leisure time to do what he likes to do best. Sometimes what he likes to do best is nothing. Other times, New York's street-smart Jimmy is twirling a rope over a running calf from high up on a Texas quarter horse in the strictly American, bone-crushing game called rodeo.

On this rainy day, Hollywood gossip columnist Joyce Haber reported Caan had signed to co-star opposite the only million-dollar box office female left in the United States, Barbra Streisand, in a sequel to Funny Girl called — what else? — Funny Lady. But more important to James Caan was whether his sweetheart Connie had cashed a check so he could fly to Denver that night to appear for 20 seconds on a horse in a rodeo parade.

When asked if Haber's report was true, he reached for another cigarette and introduced his handsome gray brindle pitbull puppy. "I got him from a 360-pound Long Island friend, a terrific guy ... like, uh ... one of the teamsters, ya know? I named the pup Lucca after a character in The Godfather, you know? You never see all-white pitbulls anymore. They're tough dogs who are great with kids, but they'll kill other dogs. The first time the males get a little . . . uh . . . action, ya know? . . . their chests drop, kinda . . . "

Back to the subject. "Oh, yeah, it kinda looks like I'm gonna be in a musical. I always preached I'd do something different each picture, and now I gotta go ahead and do it, don't I? I'm playing Billy Rose, from my own age to 50 or so. Though Billy Rose was an interesting character, not too many people know what he looked like. He was only 5-foot-2 with lots of energy and sloppy ill-fitting clothes. I mean, Dustin Hoffman would be perfect as him, ya know? I don't know what I'll do with my hair. I won't work with a wig, but maybe I'll grow a sleazy mustache. I figure Billy Rose talked a mile a minute with his hands. I've always had this vision of him as a guy who sold stuff on 37th Street. I can't wait to work with Streisand. I turned down another Godfather-type gangster part for a lot of bread to do Funny Lady.

"Lots of actors just do the same thing over and over, afraid to change the formula. They just sell out. I gotta fight that. Actors let dollars and cents rule their lives. I'm always out to be different. I've been an Irishman with a brogue, an Italian heavy — I was even a retarded football player with a metal plate in his skull in The Rain People. That's the film I'm most proud of and hardly anyone remembers it. Francis Ford Coppola directed it, and I got the best reviews I've ever received from people I really respect, like Agnes Varda and Antonioni. The film won the Grand Prize at the film festival in San Sebastian two years ago. But it made only a dollar and forty cents. I couldn't get arrested after that.

Of course, since The Godfather I'm a genius. I didn't want to do Cinderella Liberty, but Mark Rydell, who directed it, said he wouldn't make it without me, so I said what the hell. God knows it's not The Exorcist, or even a Magnum Force, which is the worst LIGHT IS RIGHT in many home decorating situations, including the choice of a carpet. It used to be that careful homeowners steered clear of light carpets for fear of showing soil and staining too soon. Not so today.

For one thing, today's miracle fibers resist soiling and staining. The fibers do not absorb moisture or alien chemicals, so they can be sponged up easily. Some carpet fibers are now treated with a stain-shedding process like that used on furniture fabrics. Spills bead up on the surface instead of penetrating. Result: easy care in any color.

In fact, light colors show less dirt of many kinds than dark colors. Dust and lint stand out more on deep colors than on light.

Light colored carpeting enlarges a room, since the pale hues recede visually instead of jumping at you. They also provide a perfect foil for the bold colors and patterns so popular today in furniture fabrics, draperies, art and accessories.

You'll find a rich array of light colors in lovely carpets of many fibers displayed in our carpet showroom . . . along with a host of bold, bright and deep colors, too. Look for your carpet where you always find more . . . at piece of crap I ever saw make nine million dollars. But it was fun playing a sailor, ya know? Now I'm ready for a musical. I might fall flat on my rear end, but that's the good thing about fear. It makes you work harder.

"In The Gambler, which may be released in the fall, I play a Harvard graduate and a professor of English who is diseased with gambling fever. He's not a hero, he's a bad cat, a compulsive gambler who destroys everyone he meets. Imagine ME a Harvard professor. Yuk, yuk! Then I made Freebie and the Bean for Warner Brothers before I ever did Cinderella Liberty, but they've cut it so many times I guess they can't find enough blue to paste it together long enough to release it. Alan Arkin is in it, too.

"We play a couple of larcenous cops. It's kinda like 'the odd couple in a squad car.' It started out being funny, but I've seen some of the stunts, and they look gross. There's this car chase through San Francisco like in Bullitt, and we go right off the freeway and land in the third-floor apartment of an old couple who just sit there and watch while we phone the tow truck to come on up to the third floor. After Arkin and I saw the rough cut, Alan waited until the lights came on after the picture, then whispered to me: 'I'm NOT doing the movie.' He's terrific. We worked without a script in that picture. We improvised into a tape recorder and then put what we said on a written page. It was wild, ya know?"

'The odd couple in a squad car'

Working without a script is all part of Caan's technique as an actor. He likes to read the script first, then never refer to it again. What he does best is mimic the behavior, speech and mannerisms of someone closest in real life to the character he's playing. For The Godfather, he befriended the closest thing to the son of a mafiosi 'padrone' he could find. "Hell, anyone can do words! It's the behavior that counts. If you and I are talking and I have a stomach ache, what's really going on is the stomach ache. I say the words, but I'm more interested in the character than what he says."

In The Gambler, I copied the professor's character from the author, James Toback, because I knew the script was autobiographical. He was loaded with physical and vocal tics. To me all that anguish he got from gambling was more important than how well I spoke the English language. And in Freebie and the Bean, it was easy to find a larcenous cop to mimic. Listen, Tell your cop readers I'm just kidding. I get into more trouole with my big mouth."

He uses the same talent for mimicry when he ropes in rodeos. "I always loved horses and I just watched a champion rider work out, and though I have no idea what I'm doing — ya know? — I just ape all his moves, and hell! I just do it. I ride mostly quarter horses, which are trained for either calves or steers, though a lotta horses never learn anything 'cause a horse is really stupid. Uh ... apologize to your horse readers too, willya?

ANSWER TO CROSSWORD PUZZLE
(See Page 47)

"What I like most about rodeos is the atmosphere. The rough-and-ready living. The outspoken, truthful people who say exactly what they mean. That idea of rodeoing being crueler than bullfighting is a lot of horse s—t. Take bucking horses. I mean, they're well fed and work only 20 seconds a week. Nothin's done to them ... no pepper up their rear ... nothin' except an occasional piece of popcorn in the bucking strap. They kick to get rid of the strap 'cause it's in a strange place, ya know what I mean?

Want to talk about cruelty? All those high-falutin' bastards with their jumping horses, and the Arthur Godfreys with their Tennessee walking horses. Parade horses? You know what they do to them? It's unnatural for a horse to jump five feet. So they take a board with bare-ended tacks and as the horse approaches the fence, whack! — right across the shins. Next time around that horse raises his legs real high to avoid that board.

"It's fancy people who break a horse's tail and put a rod in it. You think a horse's tail stands up like that all by itself? And how would you like to be a horse in a rent-string with every jackass on top of you belting you in the head?"

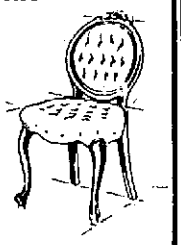

I haven't the vaguest idea what he's talking about. He's going faster than the speed of light. "I never killed anything in my life. I can't hunt 'cause I wouldn't be able to pull the trigger, so I get upset when I hear those complaints about rodeos. I also get upset about Women's Lib, you know? I mean, the world doesn't need any more extremism. Women don't need Billie Jean King to help them do anything."

"The tennis player?" I ask.

"Oh, is Billie Jean the great tennis player? I'm sorry. I like Billie Jean. I mean that other ugly old mother, what's-er-name? Hell, I'm in trouble again. I don't fit in in this business. The fastest thing in Hollywood is slow motion." Connie, the Playboy centerfold, feeds him another cookie. Barbra Streisand clearly has her work cut out for her. □

I have never forgotten the ringing words of the late John Paulos, co-owner of King Arthur's Steak House, who said: "We don't serve any dog meat here!"

He referred to the tactics of a minority of restaurateurs who buy inferior cuts of beef and then use tenderizers and other tricks which fail to improve the quality of their product.

I was reminded of John Paulos' philosophy the other evening when I dined on prime rib au jus at King Arthur's, a handsome establishment at 5511 E. Spring St. just east of Bellflower Boulevard. The restaurant's tradition of serving only the best has been carried on faithfully by John's nephew and co-owner, Tony Apostle. My wife, daughter and I enjoyed slices of prime rib which were — to put it simply — fabulous.

Even some good restaurants serve their prime rib with a rim of "lifter" beef which is less tender and juicy. King Arthur's refuses to do so. Johnny Franco, who has been the restaurant's No. 1 chef more than a dozen years, buys only premium roasts. They are carefully trimmed and roasted with rock salt by a secret method which brings out the glorious flavor of that glorious beef.

King Arthur's English cut of prime rib au jus is larger than in years past. It's $5.35 on the king-sized dinner, definitely a top value, including fresh soup of the day, a large salad, the biggest baked potato in town (or French fries) and hot cheese bread. The Roquefort salad dressing is out of this or any other world. The prime rib slice is big enough for 90 per cent of those who dine at King Arthur's, but for some who wish even more there is a Diamond Jim Brady cut, $6.70.

TONY APOSTLE
Fabulous prime rib au jus

The same standards of highest quality are maintained for all of King Arthur's 25 dinner entrees, ranging from southern fried chicken and roast tom turkey with cranberry sauce, both $3.90, to filet of sole, broiled halibut, eastern scallops, Monterey abalone, frog legs saute, sweetbreads saute, Australian lobster tail and a selection of the most magnificent steaks.

Open every day, King Arthur's has fine luncheons, banquets and nightly entertainment in its lounge.

GUIDE by Tedd Thomey

THE HEADING on this column says quite plainly: "Gourmet Guide." Which brings up a question. Is pizza gourmet?

My answer is yes — provided it's fresh, tempting pizza baked to individual order like that at Me 'n' Ed's Pizza Parlor and Ye Olde Public House on Paramount Boulevard near Carson Street.

The meaning of the word "gourmet" has been given added significance in recent years. Once it was used to describe only an elaborate meal served in posh surroundings to a group of purists. Now the word is used to describe something considered the best in its class — which is why the pizza at Me 'n' Ed's in Lakewood qualifies so neatly.

Owned by Bob Baldwin (who opened it in 1963), Me 'n' Ed's Lakewood prepares each pizza patiently by hand, spurning the use of quickie convenience techniques. Each disc is topped with only the freshest cheeses and other ingredients, ranging from savory Italian sausage, pepperoni and salami to beef with onions, linguica sausage, mushroom, anchovy and black olive. Also featured are combinations of three ingredients or combinations of "everything."

The pizza crust at Me 'n' Ed's Lakewood is definitely the best. It's crisp, but never too crisp, with a flavor that's almost nutlike. Surprisingly, for such quality, the prices are lower than elsewhere. The individual plain cheese pizza is $1.45. The prices for the "everything" combinations are $2.25 for the individual, $3.60 for the large and $4.70 for the giant. Other varieties are less.

The tap beer prices at Me 'n' Ed's Lakewood are equally attractive. A mug of cool Lucky Lager, light or dark, is 30 cents; a pitcher is $1.50. A mug of Coors is 35 cents and a pitcher is $1.75. Also featured are a variety of premium bottle beers.

Bob's top executives are brothers Sherman and Marvin Rolf, who direct a well-trained staff of cooks and bartenders. The place is kept remarkably spic and span. The windows are washed every day and the floor is swept repeatedly day and night. It opens every day at 11 a.m.

Q. Is there an inexpensive way to achieve a formal look with my draperies?
A. Yes, use a double row of sheers. Average cost of sheers is $3.00 a yard and for a little extra cost you can put a contrasting fringe on your outer drape.
Q. I recently saw 4'x8' mirror sheets that came in several colors and could be sawed, nailed or glued to the wall. Where can I purchase this and how much does it compare with regular glass mirror?
A. The cost is approximately the same as glass mirror but you can save substantially on the installation labor by doing it yourself. We sell this product at the Alamo Center.

Medicine & You

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Surgeons at the Texas Heart Institute in Houston say that Jehovah's Witnesses can safely undergo the popular saphenous-vein bypass operation for the relief of chest pain of coronary heart disease.

Drs. Luigi Chiariello, Frank M. Sandiford and Denton A. Cooley, reporting in the journal Cardiovascular Diseases, tell of 36 Witnesses, 38 to 68 years old, who underwent the operation without submitting to blood transfusions.

Use of transfusions is forbidden by church law, the doctors explain.

A heart-lung machine is used in the operation. In some instances these devices, which circulate the patient's blood while surgeons are working on the heart, require priming with donor blood. However, the Texas doctors prime their heart-lung machine with dextrose (sugar) in lactated Ringer's solution (a preparation containing various mineral compounds).

In addition, the temperature of the patient's body is lowered to 86 degrees from the normal 98.6, to reduce oxygen (and thus blood) requirements.

The average time to perform the bypass operation was 42 minutes among the Witness group, but some procedures lasted as long as 90 minutes.

The Texas doctors say they have used a "bloodless prime" for their heart-lung machine in various types of heart surgery in more than 8,000 cases since 1962.

The procedure not only conserves blood but eliminates some of the possible hazards of transfusion, such as hepatitis (liver inflammation).

Summing up, the doctors say that Jehovah's Witnesses are "not a prohibitive operative risk" for the coronary bypass operation.

Research reports continue to look promising in describing a drug used to "damp down" the drive of sex offenders.

The medication is cyproterone acetate.

Even if taken for a long period, its effects are reversible when the patient stops taking the drug, reports the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

One German researcher points out that the drug doesn't cure the patient's perversion or change his personality.

What cyproterone does do, however, is remove the tension which apparently builds in the sex offender — the tension that makes "the sadist more brutal, the exhibitionist more bold and the child molester more daring."

Consequently, with the help of a psychiatrist, a patient taking the drug can begin to see his problem more objectively and perhaps find a satisfactory outlet in normal sexual relationships.

If there is any question whether the patient will take the drug, the medication can be administered by intramuscular injection every 10 to 14 days, according to a report in Drug Therapy, a periodical for physicians.

Another case of epidemic diarrhea attributable to a one-celled organism called giardia lamblia has been reported.

This time, about 75 persons of a group of 136 from England who took a Mediterranean cruise had symptoms, mainly diarrhea and abdominal pain.

The outbreak was thought to be waterborne, probably acquired at a port of call.

In contrast to traveler's diarrhea, in which symptoms begin early in a journey and last for a few days, giardia infection is characterized by late-developing symptoms and persistent diarrhea.

The chronic, unremitting nature of the disorder may be severely disabling.

But treatment with the drugs mepacrine or metronidazole (Flagyl) is highly effective, doctors report in the journal Lancet.

High blood pressure is a common complication after a tissue graft is used to replace a defective aortic valve, the heart valve between the main pumping chamber and the aorta, the great artery.

Doctors at London Hospital, London, report that 53 per cent of patients who received homograft valve replacements (tissue type) developed high blood pressure within five years after surgery.

The significance is that the high blood pressure can bring about valve failure and thus should be treated early to reduce the risk of valve failure.

Details about his complication are described in the Lancet.

A nutrition authority with the American Medical Association says that nuts are free of cholesterol.

Nancy Selvey of the AMA department of foods and nutrition, Chicago, says cholesterol is found only in foods of animal origin.

However, she points out, few nuts contain less than 45 to 65 per cent fat.

"Some contain considerably more," she says.

Consequently nuts are to be avoided in a low-fat diet.

In the treatment of one type of cholesterol disorder, which calls for low cholesterol and modified fat intake, one proposed diet excludes coconut, cashew and macadamia nuts but allows others, according to the AMA report.

An anticancer drug, said to be effective in treating a wide variety of malignant tumors, is to be investigated by United States medical researchers.

The compound, developed in Japan, is mitomycin-C, which is also an antibiotic.

The drug will be available to physicians for investigational purposes only, according to a report in Modern Medicine, a periodical for physicians.

Q. A recent Gallup poll shows that 73 percent or almost three-fourths of the American people believe Richard Nixon was involved in Watergate or the coverup. Does this mean that the U.S. Congress feels the same way and wants Nixon removed from office? —Stephen Adams, Oakland, Calif.

A. In a general way Congress belatedly reflects U.S. public opinion. That does not mean, however, that 75 percent of the Congress wants Nixon removed from office at this time. It may mean that 75 percent of the Congress believes Nixon was involved in the Watergate coverup—two separate matters. At this writing, national polls reveal that 25 to 27 percent of the American people remain hard-core Nixon supporters. A Gallup poll taken in May showed that of the Americans surveyed, 48 percent believe President Nixon should be removed from office; 37 percent believe he should not, and 15 percent have no opinion on the subject.

Q. How old is Grace Kelly? How long has she been married to Prince Rainier of Monaco? How old is he? Is he still a playboy? Is their marriage secure?—Alma Zack, Silver Hill, Md.

A. Grace Kelly is 44. Rainier is 51. They have been married 18 years, have three children: Princess Caroline 17, Crown Prince Albert 16, Princess Stephanie 9. Prince Rainier stopped playing around when he got married. His marriage to Princess Grace is from all accounts successful and happy.

THE ROYAL FAMILY OF MONACO: (CLOCKWISE) PRINCE RAINIER, ALBERT, STEPHANIE, PRINCESS GRACE, CAROLINE.

Q. Was Doris Day's son, Terry Melcher, ever married to Sen. Barry Goldwater's daughter?—L. Harman, Douglas, Ariz.

A. No, for a short time he went with Senator Goldwater's niece, Wendy Johnson, 24.

Q. A stripper from Mingo County, W. Va., named Blaze Starr claims to have been the mistress of the late Earl Long, Governor of Louisiana, and the girlfriend of Frank Rizzo, now Mayor of Philadelphia. Is there any truth to her claims?—D.L., Philadelphia, Pa.

A. Blaze Starr (real name —Sissie Fleming) has written her autobiography, Blaze Starr—My Life Story as told to Huey Perry published by Praeger. In her book Blaze details her spicy relationships with Long and Rizzo. If she is not telling the truth, Mayor Rizzo may sue her and her publishers for libel.

STRIPPER BLAZE STARR

Q. If former Gov. John Connally of Texas has become a dedicated Republican, why does he hire a Democratic law firm like Williams, Connolly & Califano to defend him in the dairy operators' scandal in which allegedly he is involved with Jake Jacobsen?—P.E., Alexandria, Va.

A. If Gov. Connally were sick, presumably he would hire the best physician he could get without inquiring into the doctor's politics. He feels the same way about lawyers. He obviously believes that the Washington, D.C., law firm in which the senior partners are Edward Bennett Williams, Paul R. Connolly and Joseph Califano, is the best qualified to defend him in his alleged involvement with Jacobsen in the milk operators' scandal.

Q. The real reason, please, why Willy Brandt resigned as Chancellor of West Germany? Wasn't it because he was afraid his private life would be revealed rather than because his aide Gunter Guillaume, turned out to be a Communist spy?—F.R. Becker, Cincinnati, Ohio.

A. Brandt gave three reasons for his resignation: (1) He let top secret papers fall into the hands of Guillaume even though he knew Guillaume was suspected of being an East German spy; (2) He felt he would hinder Bonn's relationships with East Germany and the Warsaw Pact nations; (3) He was afraid various aspects of his private life, particularly his campaign travels during which he was interviewed by female journalists who found him fascinating, would be drawn into speculation.

Q. When are Moshe Dayan's memoirs coming out? —Herbert Robinson, New York City.

A. Moshe Dayan, who was paid $107 a week as Israel's Defense Minister, has signed a contract with a British publisher, Weidenfeld and Nicholson, for his memoirs. Dayan will receive if he hasn't already, an advance of $450,000 for the book which will be published in 1976.

Q. I understand that actor Henry Fonda had a pacemaker implanted to help his ailing heart. What other celebrities use pacemakers and how do they work? —Louise Brown, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

A. Among the more than 150,000 Americans using the battery-powered device are Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and President Nixon's close friend Elmer Bobst, the honorary chairman of Warner-Lambert Company. The pacemaker works by sending out steady electric impulses that stimulate the heart to beat at the proper rhythm.

DAVID FROST, ONE OF THE ELIGIBLES, WITH ACTRESS ALEXANDRA BASTEDO

Q. Who are the 10 most eligible bachelors in the United States?— S.M., Ann Arbor, Mich.

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

A NEW DAY FOR PENSIONS

The nation's entire pension system--which covers more than 35 million employees --is about to undergo a basic overhaul. In the past several weeks, members of a Senate-House conference committee have hammered out a landmark pension reform bill which the President is expected to sign into law sometime in July.

"This pioneering measure," says Sen. Jacob Javits (R., N.Y.), who introduced the original Senate bill, "will work a revolution in the lives of working people equaled only by the enactment of the Social Security system in the 1930's. For the first time in our history retirement will be possible for a large part of the American working force with reasonable economic comfort."

Although all the details have not yet been made public, the new law will bring reform in the following fundamental areas:

- Vesting: Employees will be guaranteed the right to receive deferred pension benefits on reaching retirement age after working a reasonable length of time--as little as five years. At present, about 13 million workers covered under private retirement plans have no vested rights--and consequently are not entitled to any benefits unless they are still on the company payroll upon retirement.
- Funding: Employers will be required to make sufficient contributions to the plan over the approximate working lives of the participants so that promised benefits will be paid.

PENSION REFORM LEGISLATION SHOULD MAKE MORE OLDER AMERICANS SMILE LIKE THESE SQUARE DANCERS IN SUN CITY, ARIZ.

- Plan Termination Insurance: There will be mandatory participation by private pension plans in an insurance program--similar to Federal Deposit Insurance for banks--which will guarantee payment of legally obligated pension benefits if the employer is incapable of discharging his funding responsibilities. In recent years, a great deal of attention has been focused on cases in which workers have lost their pension benefits when their employer went bankrupt or merged with another company.
- Uniform Fiduciary and Disclosure Standards: Judicially enforceable requirements will be established to ensure honest, faithful and competent management of pension and welfare funds and provide employees with access to more adequate information about their plan.
- Increased Portability: The new law will grant more opportunity for workers to carry their pension rights from one retirement plan to another.

In addition, it will expand private pension coverage. It is estimated that 25 million workers who file income tax returns are not covered by a retirement plan. The principal method of expanding coverage to these workers --including many auto mechanics, hairdressers, small businessmen and supermarket employees-- will be the adoption of a new individual retirement savings device, known as IRA, or Individual Retirement Account. Under IRA, contributions will be invested in a number of tax-sheltered vehicles, ranging from banks and mutual funds to special government bonds. These entities will actually hold the contributions; and investment earnings will be free of tax until distributed to the employee.

JACOB JAVITS

The new law will also mean expanded coverage for self-employed, now limited to a $2500 retirement fund deduction against annual income. Under the new system, the maximum will rise to $7500.

CANADIAN SAVINGS BONDS 9%

Canada, which has been paying 5 to 7.54 percent on various savings bonds will pay 9 percent on all such bonds, held to maturity.

The higher yield will be paid by means of cash bonuses on all unmatured Canada savings bonds. For income tax purposes the cash bonus payments will be treated as capital gains.

MORE WOMEN GOING POLITICAL

This year more women are seeking political office than ever before--828 at this writing. The figure was compiled by the National Women's Political Caucus in Washington, D.C., whose executive director, Jane McMichael, believes that women are emerging as the "new breed of political activist in 1974."

On the national level, 108 women are running for Congress, a 24 percent increase over the 1972 figure of 87 and 74 percent over 1970. At present 16 women hold Congressional seats, all in the House.

On the state level, 671 women have declared for legislative posts, 10 are seeking governorships, 12 are in contention for lieutenant governor, while 27 are running for various executive posts such as secretary of state. At present there are 441 women serving in the state legislatures of the United States.

The NWPC encourages women to become active in politics and has launched a campaign, "Win With Women," to assist and encourage women to run for office. It offers aid in the way of public relations, campaign organization and fund raising. EAST GERMAN MOTHER AND CHILD: THE GOVERNMENT WANTS MORE CHILDREN.

MARXIST MOTHERS

"Having babies is fun and truly Marxist." So reads one of the slogans in East Germany where Communist leaders are worried about the slump in the birth rate.

For the past 12 years the birth rate in East Germany as in other European countries has fallen steadily. But now it's become acute, and if it continues in Communist Germany, the state is afraid the decline will jeopardize its long-range economic plans.

In East Germany free abortions are granted on request during the first 12 weeks of pregnancy. While absent from work for the abortion a woman draws 90 percent of her salary as sick pay. Contraceptive pills for all women are free.

Now the new propaganda holds that only through having children can the East German woman enjoy a happy family life.

WORDS TO REMEMBER

"Decency, security and liberty alike demand that government officials shall be subjected to the same rules of conduct that are commands to the citizen. In a government of laws, existence of the government will be imperiled if it fails to observe the law scrupulously. Our government is the potent, the omnipresent teacher. For good or for ill, it teaches the whole people by its example. Crime is contagious.

If the government becomes a lawbreaker, it breeds contempt for law; it invites anarchy. To declare that in the administration of the criminal law the end justifies the means -- to declare that the government may commit crimes in order to secure the conviction of a private citizen -- would bring terrible retribution. Against that pernicious doctrine this court should resolutely set its face."

—Justice Louis D. Brandeis, Olmstead vs. the U.S. — 1927.

RUSSIAN DRESSING

Détente is the current watchword not only for diplomats but for fashion designers. The Soviet influence will be strong in this fall's Paris and New York collections, showing up in all types of garments from lingerie to outerwear.

Stylists are pushing the Russian Look for both sexes, with "Cossack shirts" for men, and gaily embroidered peasant blouses, high-collared tunics and side-buttoned coats with braided trim for women..

If none of these is your cup of borscht, you might be interested in Russian-style, thick-heeled leather boots, available both in men and women's models. They're said to be sturdy enough to keep a wearer's feet warm in Siberia -- which might give them a chance in downtown Chicago on a windy winter's day.

Soaring septuagenarian: 75-year-old Ted Mumby shows that age is no bar to athletic success as he wins the triple-jump event in the Senior Olympics.

It's Olympic Time For Old Athletes

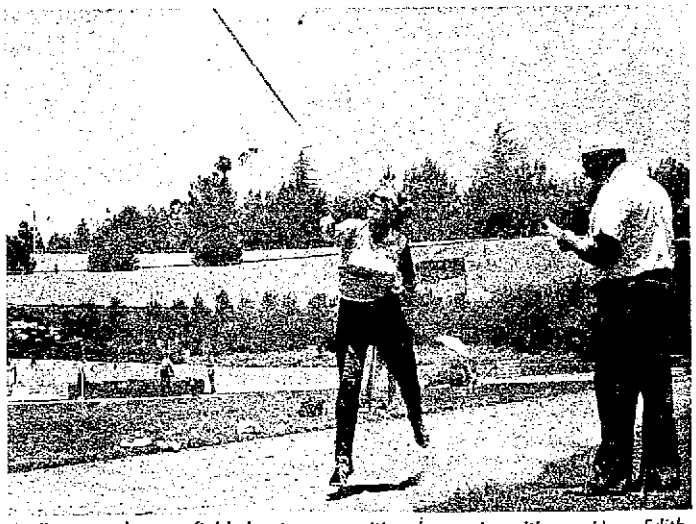

by James R. Hanley

At what age is an athlete all washed up and ready to be put out to pasture? Well, you might ask Satchel Paige, who pitched baseball into his 60's. Or tennis star Pancho Gonzales, who's still serving aces at 46. At the same age, George Blanda is a deadly field goal kicker.

Or better still, you might ask dozens of gaffers who right now are participating in the fifth annual International Senior Olympics, a series of athletic events, held mostly in the area around Los Angeles, Calif. The competitions, ranging from archery and basketball to water-polo and wrestling, have absolutely no top age limit.

The Senior Olympics are organized by Senior Sports International with the objective of demonstrating that nobody has to be a has-been.

Smoking.
What are you going to do about it?

Many people are against cigarettes. You've heard their arguments.

And even though we're in the business of selling cigarettes, we're not going to advance arguments in favor of smoking.

We simply want to discuss one irrefutable fact.

A lot of people are still smoking cigarettes. In all likelihood, they'll continue to smoke cigarettes and nothing anybody has said or is likely to say is going to change their minds.

Now, if you're one of these cigarette smokers, what are you going to do about it? You may continue to smoke your present brand. With all the enjoyment and pleasure you get from smoking it. Or, if 'tar' and nicotine has become a concern to you, you may consider changing to a cigarette like Vantage.

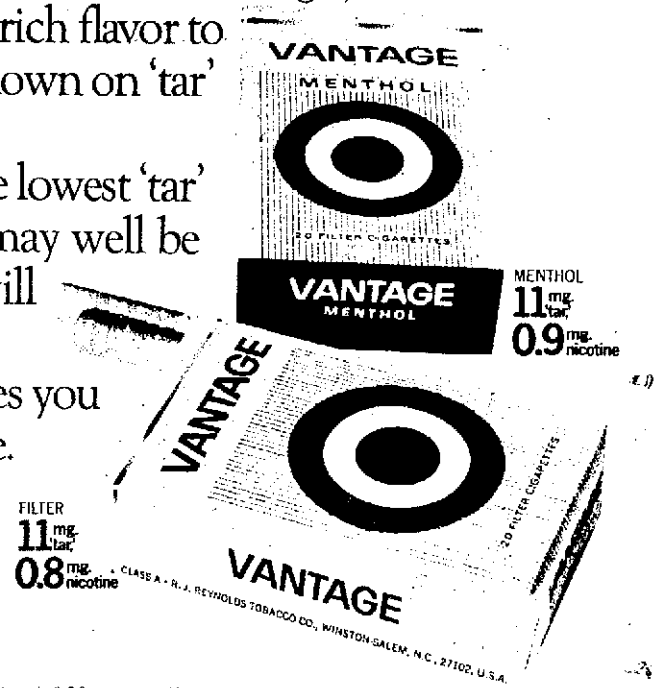

(Of course, there is no other cigarette quite like Vantage.)

Vantage has a unique filter that allows rich flavor to come through it and yet substantially cuts down on 'tar' and nicotine.

We want to be frank. Vantage is not the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette you can buy. But it may well be the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette you will enjoy smoking.

Vantage. It's the only cigarette that gives you so much taste with so little 'tar' and nicotine.

We suggest you try a pack.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Filter: 11 mg. "tar," 0.8 mg. nicotine, Menthol: 11 mg "tar," 0.9 mg. nicotine—av. per cigarette, FTC Report Mar., '74.

Weight Watchers® Frozen Dessert with new family pleasing flavor

When we first made Weight Watchers Frozen Dessert, we did everything we could to make it look rich and creamy, like ice cream. And it did. But no matter how much like ice cream it looked, you didn't like the way it tasted.

"Too dietary", you said. "Doesn't taste like real ice cream".

That's a tough order for a low-fat dessert but we went back to work and created new Family Pleasing Flavors. They have a far more natural taste... much more like the real thing, and still have less than 1% fat.

We really are proud of our new Family Pleasing Flavors, because we found the way to give you a delicious frozen dessert that lives up to your expectations.

OLD ATHLETES

CONTINUED

Says the official prospectus: "The Senior Olympics was developed with the goals of promoting healthier, happier and more productive lives for adults through sports . . . and recognizing the adult athlete by giving him/her the opportunity to experience the excitement of international championship competition."

Start at 25

You have to be at least 25 to enter—after that, you can be as decrepit as you wish. But just to equalize matters, competitors are split up into five-year age groups—25 to 29, 30 to 34, and so on, up to 75 to 79. So far there haven't been any entrants 80 and over, but nobody is counting on this continuing forever. To date the preponderance of entrants are between 35 and 55.

Last year's games were the most successful yet held. Nobody had heart palpitations or even tripped over his beard. Instead, Harold Chapson, a youthful 70-year-old, ran the 1500 meters in 5:30.8, a meet record. Hal Higdon, 42, did the 3000-meter steeplechase in 9:38, a time that collegians half his age might envy. Al Guidet, 55, zipped through the 220 in a record 23.6 seconds.

Among the other geri-athletes, 75-year-old Walt Westbrook won two tennis titles in 100-degree heat; Ted Mumby, also 75, competed in 16 events in three different sports; while Rod Drummond, a boy of 66, played handball and racquetball, as well as swimming and competing in the shotput and discus events.

Tarzan tries, too

Well-known personalities on hand included former diver Gerta Ross; the first Mr. America, Bert Goodrich; actor Doodles Weaver; Buster Crabbe, the movie Tarzan, and California Senator Alan Cranston.

This year's games got underway June 15, and will continue through Sept. 15. Track and field competition begins today. Among other sports on tap are badminton, bowling, cycling, fencing, golf,

With starting age of 25, you don't have to be superannuated to enter. Poised on bar is gymnast Marian Duncan, winner of 25-29 "all-around" competition.

handball, three kinds of ice-skating (dance, hockey and speed), judo, karate, polo, rugby, soccer, softball, and table-tennis.

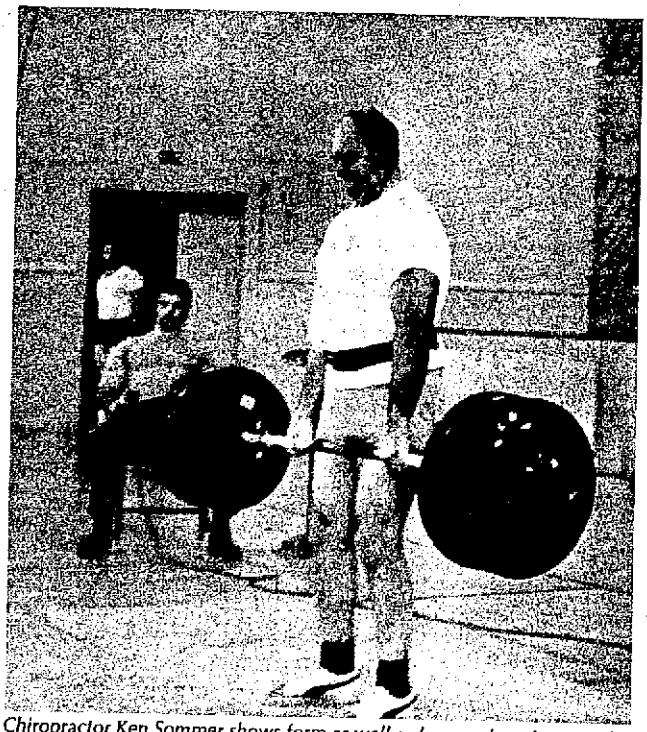

Even that isn't enough to satisfy some of the geezers so plans are afoot to add billiards, darts, curling, boxing, water skiing, frisbee, lacrosse, roller skating, squash and surfing—practically everything except mumblety-peg.

Says one expert volleyballist: "You know the saying 'Don't trust anyone over 30.' Well, out there I'd say, 'Don't challenge any one over 30 either.' "

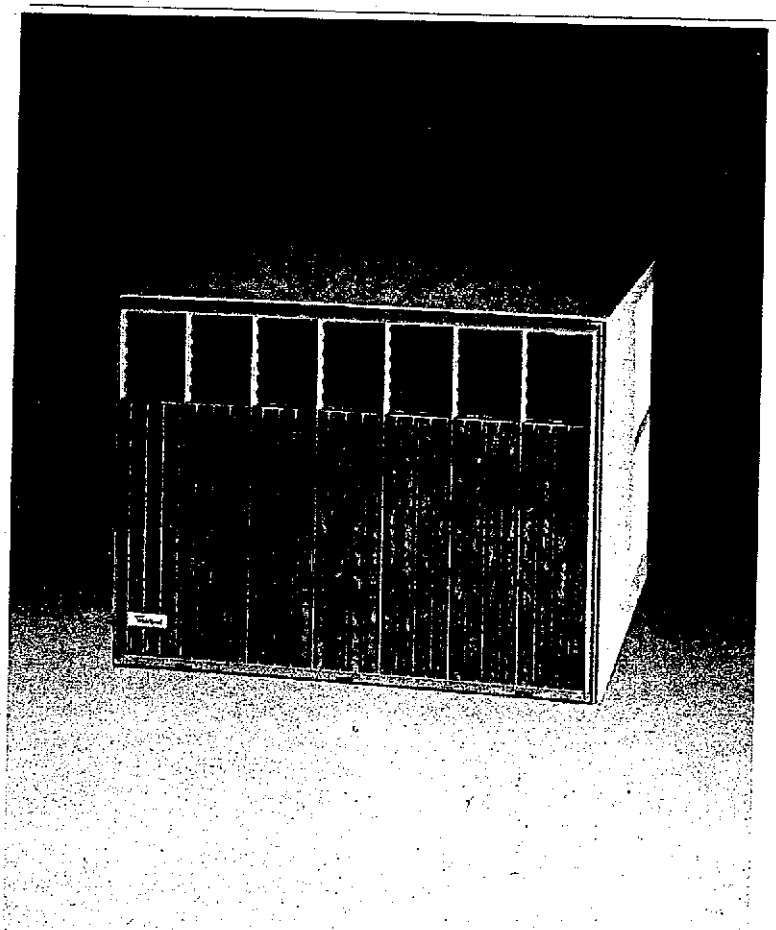

Participants and spectators agree that there's a special kind of exhilaration in races and contests between people who normally aren't expected to do anything more strenuous than running for a bus or picking up a loaf of bread. Out at the Senior Olympics, anyone who thinks he can still put one foot in front of another is welcome to try—and there are plenty of old codgers to cheer him on.

How to find out

Anybody interested is urged to write to Senior Sports International, organizers of the Senior Olympics. Keeping Up...With Youth

Sex—No. 1 Student Health Worry

Sex is the major health worry of college students. So declared Dr. Arnold Werner, director of Michigan State University's psychiatric services, at the recent annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association in Detroit.

Dr. Werner, an associate professor of psychiatry who also writes a column for Michigan State and some 50 other student newspapers, analyzed 700 letters sent to him consecutively by his readers. Of that number, 53 percent, asked questions concerning sex.

Of those letters which had nothing to do with sex, 39 percent concerned general medical problems such as colds and headaches, 38 percent dealt with cosmetics, care of hair and skin, and only 7 percent concerned drugs.

"They (young people) worry about how their bodies work and what they should do in relation to other people," Dr. Werner explained. "They want information. They say, 'Tell me what I need to know, and I'll take care of it.'"

The sex questions addressed to Dr. Werner's newspaper column, "The Doctor's Bag," revealed a surprising lack of basic information, "things you could find out from reading a book or from an adequate education."

All of them were serious inquiries, with young women worrying about their inability to achieve orgasm and young men worrying about why they achieved one too quickly.

"Young people," Dr. Werner pointed out, "are not particularly worried about coronaries or cancer or the problems of degeneration which generally bother their parents."

Drowning in Alcohol

If you drink, don't dive.

That may become the motto for safety-conscious swimmers and boaters this summer.

A recent study clearly links drunkenness and drownings. "Our figures indicate that alcohol is as much a part of drowning as of automobile accidents," says Park E. Dietz, who made the study at the Johns Hopkins University Medical School. Nearly half of all persons over 14 who drowned in Baltimore in the five-year period ending in 1972 had blood alcohol levels that would make them legally intoxicated.

The study found that the most likely drowning victim is a young man, aged 15 to 24, swimming or boating while drunk. The most likely location is in a river or creek.

"The average blood alcohol content among the drunk drowners was .18 percent, a very high level," says Dietz.

The findings apparently coincide with studies made in California, Australia and Scandinavia, he says.

College Competition

Last year only 49 percent of the nation's high school graduates went on to college. In 1968 the percentage of ongoing students was 58. Why the drop? Did students go to college because they didn't want to go into the Army and Vietnam?

Whatever the reason, college recruiters are none too happy about the current trend. They want warm bodies, more and more students, or the halls of ivy are going to come tumbling down. Private colleges are already closing in unprecedented numbers, faculties are becoming unemployed, all because student enrollment is on the decline.

As a result "the competition for students may be bordering on the rapacious," declares Henry Peter, vice president for admissions and records at Syracuse University. Peter reveals that some colleges have already begun "buying" students by offering scholarships, paying their own students to recruit others, and pirating students from other colleges and universities.

PART OF A TREND: MARIA MULDAUR

Maria's Gold

In the last two or three years, women singers have begun to have hit records again, following a period dominated by British and American male rock groups.

Some well-known examples of this resurgence are Bette Midler, Helen Reddy, Joni Mitchell, Cher, and Anne Murray.

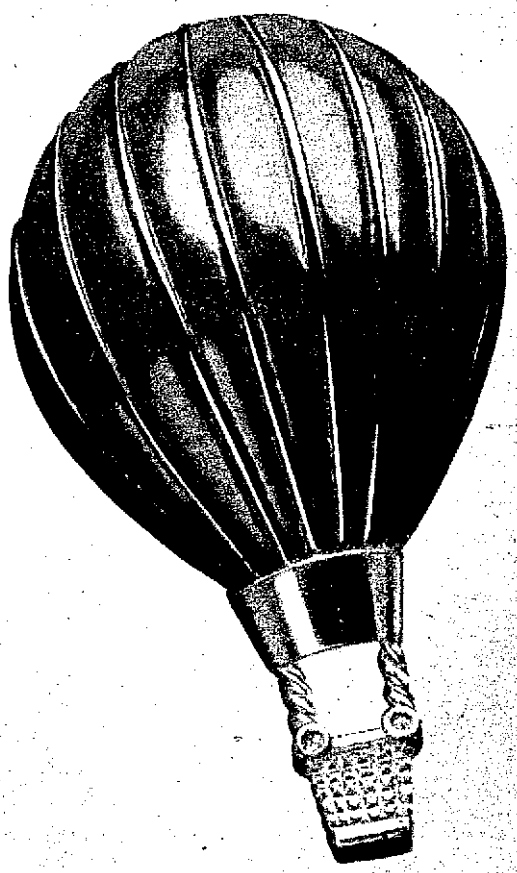

Now another woman has a gold album. She is Maria Muldaur, who has been on tour across the southern U.S. from San Diego to Atlanta lately.

In addition, her hit single, "Midnight at the Oasis," has been near the top on both "easy-listening" and rock charts, and a second album is scheduled for release in August, according to Reprise Records.

Maria and her husband Geoff Muldaur have a daughter, Jenny, 9. Maria, originally from New York City's Greenwich Village, now resides near Los Angeles, but she also maintains a home in Woodstock, N.Y.

Miss Muldaur says of her voice: "I'm not a screamer, but my voice is getting heavier as I get older. It's like I've had a flute all these years. But... now I find there's a saxophone in there."

Night at the Carnival. And almost everybody has a gimmick. Pick the one who doesn't. 1-2. No and no. It's the former tattooed man and his wife, "The Rubber Woman." Gimmick: They've embraced so much, she's erased him. 3. Nope. He's Moe M. Downe. Gimmick: Pitching show-off. His curve never breaks...only his extra-long cigarette. Not too bright. Thinks a manila folder is the Filipino contortionist. 4. Nope. He's Jack Knife. Gimmick: Dives 185 feet into a full-color photograph of Lake Erie. 5. No, he's Hugh Mann Kanonbawl, recently fired. (They wanted a man of higher caliber.) Either still has black powder on his face...or his charcoal filter cigarette is attacking his nose. 6. No, but it's a pretty good ms. 7. Right. He thinks there's enough fun here without extra gimmicks and fancy frills. Likes his smoking pleasure honest, too. Camel Filters. Great tobacco taste without the nonsense. 8. Not Noah Refund, the barker. Gimmick: Fast sales pitch. He could talk the Wolf Man into wearing a flea collar. 9. "The Bird Man" (not shown). spicy CARIBBEAN bird

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

The words sensual, spicy and exotic could well apply to all of Geoffrey Holder's accomplishments—in dance, painting, acting, choreography and costume design—but describe most aptly his artistry with the cuisine of his native Trinidad.

"Food back home," he says, "is full of herbs and spices. I think many people in this country are afraid of any seasoning but salt and pepper—and that's a shame." Holder, who recently wrote and illustrated his own Caribbean Cookbook (Viking Press), insists that cooking is a highly personal pursuit and that recipes were made for changing—to suit yourself.

One of the recipes from his cookbook that is bound to please most palates is Coq au Rhum Kendal, a flavorful combination of chicken and a dark, tangy sauce. Serve it with rice and a tossed salad of your favorite summer greens.

COQ AU RHUM KENDAL

- 1 chicken (3½ to 4 lbs.); cut into small sections
- Salt and black pepper to taste
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 teaspoon soy sauce
- ½ teaspoon Ac'cent (optional)
- ¼ cup rum
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- ½ cup minced chives
- 6 tablespoons vegetable oil, divided
- 1 tablespoon brown sugar
- 1 cup minced onions
- 1 can, (3 or 4 oz.) mushrooms, drained
- 1½ teaspoons sugar
- ½ cup water
- 2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 2 tablespoons water
- 2 pimientos, sliced

Season chicken pieces with mixture of salt, pepper, Worcestershire sauce, soy sauce, Ac'cent, rum, garlic and chives. Marinate for 1½ hours; remove chicken pieces from marinade; set aside. Heat 4 tablespoons oil in heavy skillet. When oil is very hot, add brown sugar. When sugar has melted and turned dark brown, add chicken; cook about 8 minutes, turning occasionally until the chicken is fully browned. Add minced onion and marinade; cook 5 minutes on high heat. Add mushrooms, sugar, and ½ cup water. Cover; cook on medium to low heat for 30 minutes. Thicken sauce with cornstarch dissolved in water. Sauté pimientos in 2 tablespoons hot oil for 1 minute. Remove pimientos and use as garnish for chicken. Makes four servings.

TESTED IN PARADE'S KITCHEN

Geoffrey Holder, born in Trinidad, excels at dancing, painting and preparing spicy dishes of the Caribbean.

WHAT ELSE IS COOKING

COFFEE BREAK

"Coffee whitener," is the official term for a dairy or non-dairy "creamer." These products have long shelf or freezer life and will not form an oily film on top of the beverage. They have a high sodium content and contain about the same number of calories as light cream. The main ingredients include a vegetable fat, usually coconut oil, sodium caseinate or a soya derivative. Sodium caseinate is classified as a chemically derived "non-dairy" product, but persons allergic to milk may also be allergic to this product.

AGE-OLD ALMONDS

The almond, a member of the rose family, originated in China centuries ago, and is related to stone fruits such as nectarines, peaches, plums, apricots and cherries. There are 73 references to these delicately flavored nuts in the Old Testament. They were important in the commerce of ancient Greece and the Roman Empire, and later, were grown in Spain, Italy and Portugal. Eventually almonds arrived in Mexico and California, which has more acres planted with almonds than with oranges. This state supplies nearly 100 percent of the almonds consumed in this country and exports about 50 percent of its crop.

Nutritionally, almonds are high in energy value, contain protein, iron, magnesium, calcium and phosphorus. They also are a source of the Vitamin B complex and Vitamin E, and their fat content is largely polyunsaturated.

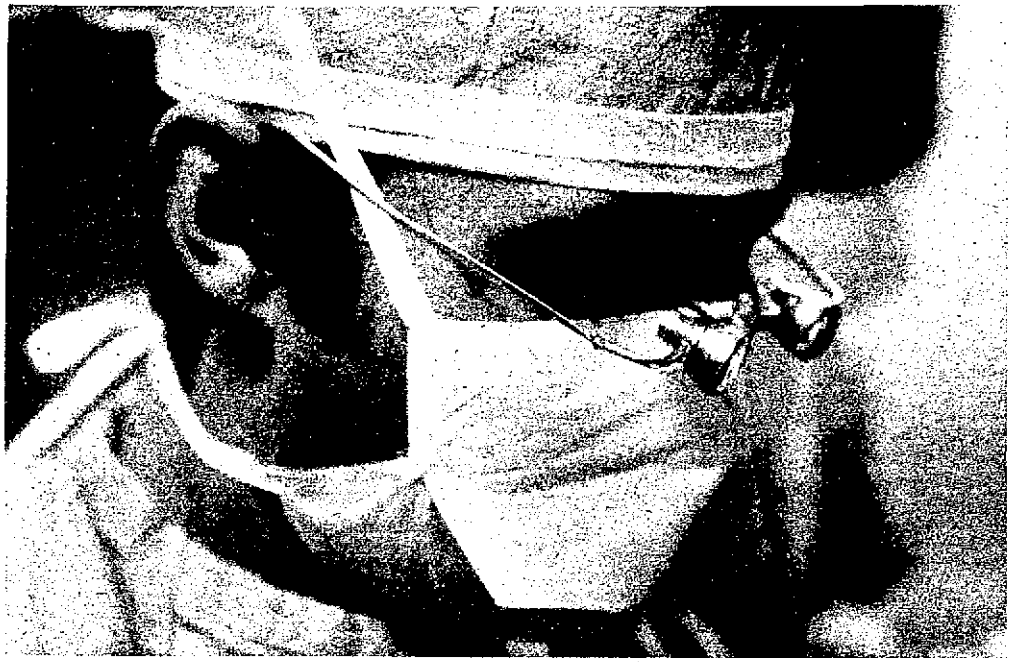

HAM EXTRA

Gelatin is often added to canned ham to help hold the boned ham together during shipping. Just before the can is vacuum-sealed, dry gelatin is added. As the can cooks, the gelatin combines with the juices to fill air space.

PROTEIN PROGRESS

Hungry consumers around the world might soon be reaping a cheap, versatile and plentiful protein product from the sea. "Fish flour," also known by the initials WFPC, is a colorless, tasteless, powdered protein food made from defatted whole fish. It is scheduled to be marketed in the United States in the near future, according to the Food and Drug Administration.

In protein value, fish flour compares favorably with soybean supplements; it will probably first appear in stores in fortified baked goods.

With the aid of special magnifying glasses and scaled-down instruments, physicians—such as this one—who specialize in the delicate and dramatic techniques of minisurgery, return otherwise doomed babies to life.

A Second Chance at Life

New Surgical Techniques That Save Infants

by Jonathan Braun

Joey was born in a New Jersey hospital at 3:30 a.m., weighed about 5½ pounds—and was in danger of losing his life.

X-rays showed that his esophagus, instead of leading from his throat down to his stomach in one long continuous tube, was in two segments. The upper part ended somewhere in his chest, while the lower end joined his trachea.

"Esophageal atresia," was the diagnosis, a common—but potentially deadly—birth defect. Survival meant it had to be totally corrected within hours.

It was—and today, Joey is a normal, healthy 4-year-old. Like thousands of other children, he owes his life to a medical specialty known as minisurgery—surgery on the very, very young.

Using incredibly delicate techniques, doctors have operated successfully on premature infants weighing slightly over a pound. Some operations have been conducted less than an hour after birth.

Nearly every American university hospital and children's hospital has become a center for minisurgery—and hospital physicians in any given area are familiar with their nearest center.

Right after Joey's illness was diagnosed, a call was put in to New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. Head pediatric surgeon Dr. S. Frank Redo listened as a New Jersey doctor described the baby's condition. "Get him here as soon as possible," said Dr. Redo.

Joey was placed in a special incubator for the 40-mile ambulance ride to New York City. Upon arrival, he was transferred to an "isolette," a Plexiglas-covered incubator on wheels, with "portholes" through which staff members can perform blood transfusions, administer oxygen and give other emergency services.

A top minisurgeon, Dr. S. Frank Redo, is shown treating a patient through the "portholes" of an "isolette," which is a Plexiglas-covered incubator on wheels.

Just six hours after he was born—after undergoing blood tests and additional X-rays, Joey was operated on by Dr. Redo and a team of skilled assistants.

The operation, which connected both ends of the infant's tiny esophagus, was a complete success. There was a time, however, when babies born with esophageal atresia—as well as countless other birth defects—were almost certain to die.

'Nothing is routine'

"Minisurgery is a relatively new field," says Dr. Redo. "Operations that were considered tremendous undertakings 20 years ago are now relatively routine, although with these cases nothing is really routine."

The concept of major, lifesaving surgery on infants had its beginnings in the late 1930's at Boston Children's Hospital. There, great advances were made by an almost legendary group of pediatric surgeons trained and led first by Dr. William E. Ladd, then by Dr. Robert E. Gross.

According to Dr. Redo, "The Boston group's real accomplishment was the realization that the infant is not just a little adult—that the infant has its own special problems and requires a good deal of special care before, during and after the operation."

Pre-operative care is vitally important in minisurgery, especially, as in Joey's case, when the patient has to be transported from one hospital to another. Says Dr. Redo: "Probably the most significant development in surgery on premature and high-risk newborn patients has been the perfection of transport techniques such as those perfected by our unit."

The critical point

"The idea is to get the baby safely to the regional center while maintaining the highest quality care," explains Dr. Alvin Hackel, who manages a West Coast interhospital transport system at the Stanford University Medical Center. "When we get a call from one of our 55 referral hospitals we usually dispatch a team consisting of a nurse and at least one highly trained specialist. After consulting with the other doctors, our people take over responsibility for the baby. This is the critical point—from then on the quality of care must be maintained."

On their first day on earth, some infants fly over 300 miles to get to Stanford. Many are brought by helicopter to a heliport only 700 feet from the emergency room entrance. Others are brought by airplane, then transported by ambulance.

How your Horoscope can bring you wealth, love, success and happiness.

by Norman P. Kennedy

Did you know your horoscope could mean the difference between happiness or sorrow; between success or failure?

Picture a long room with doors at each end. In this room there are money, attractive persons of the opposite sex, books that tell you the secret of happiness and many other valuable articles. But, also in this room are bottomless pits, traps, hostile persons and dangerous beasts chained in various places around the room. You must walk through this room, but you may take out of it anything you can.

Now if you had a choice, would you choose to 1) go through the room blindfolded or 2) go through the room with your eyes open and with written instructions on which places and people to visit or avoid.

Of course, all of us would pick the second choice in a case such as this. Isn't it ridiculous, then, that we would choose to go through life, the same situation, blindfolded! Even when there is a means to go through life with a map and our eyes wide open! The means provided is Astrology. The map is our astrological horoscope.

How does it work? Nature's cosmos imprints each of us at the time of birth – when the umbilical cord is cut. We then become ourselves. Until the cord is cut, we are part of our mother. Why or how we presently do not know. The movement of the large solar bodies then times potentials for events in our lives. Astrology does not cause events but is timing of events. But, it's not fortune telling. It's a prediction of potentials which free will can override.

A natal horoscope analysis contains the best psychological analysis of yourself that you can get today. In addition, a natal horoscope analysis includes discussions on the following: financial outlook; taxes and inheritances; early home environment; relationships with family, relatives and parents; lovelife and marriage; children; career and occupation; hopes; wishes and goals; and subconscious attitudes.

Many people think that astrology only appeals to "way out" unscientific people. Nothing could be farther from the truth. In fact, studies show that astrology appeals most to intelligent and logical people. Famous scientists Galileo, Carl Jung, Johannes Kepler, Roger Bacon, Tycho Bache and Albert Einstein all believed in astrology.

Anyone familiar with Jackie Onassis' horoscope will be amazed with the uncanny way that it has predicted her love life. For example, Jackie's Cancer lies on the cusp of her eighth house. This indicates that she will marry a man connected with water. Her first husband, the late President Kennedy, was a P. T. boat Captain in World War II and also enjoyed sailing. And, of course, her current husband, Aristotle Onassis, is a super-wealthy shipping magnate. Her Sagittarian rising sign shows that she prefers foreign countries and people. Her husband, Aristotle, is Greek and Jackie is known for her jet-setting image. Finally, the planets Jupiter and Venus symbolize money. The fact that these two planets fall in her seventh house, the House of Partners, indicates that she will have a very wealthy husband.

Your horoscope can help you be in the right place at the right time. Your horoscope can help you avoid disasters, while guiding you to your beneficial opportunities.

Did you know that astrology helped the Allies win World War II? The Allies employed astrologers. The Axis powers started out employing astrologers. But, this was ceased early when the famous astrologer, Karl Ernst Krafft, predicted the exact time and place of an attempt on Hitler's life in 1939. Hitler thought the astrologers were conspiring against him, so they were imprisoned.

Hitler turned back to astrology – too late. He read his horoscope in the last moments of the war as Berlin burned around him.

On the other hand, astrologers aided the Allies in forecasting the Axis' moves. The most famous astrologer, Louis de Wohl, employed by the British Government, predicted the exact events leading to the downfall of Mussolini. He gained the faith of the American military, when he predicted Pearl Harbor a year before it happened.

More on avoiding disaster, came these stories from a recent article in the Miami Herald newspaper. The article tells the story of Mary Kelly, a Miami computer programmer, who heeded the advice of her horoscope which warned her of a wrong medical diagnosis. She avoided an unnecessary operation that would have left her a cripple.

Your horoscope can bring you wealth. Famous business tycoon, J. P. Morgan, used astrology to acquire his fortune. Morgan did not make a financial move without checking his natal horoscope forecast.

From an article in the Miami Herald came this story: "Stockbrokers on Wall Street are as likely to call an astrologer in this decade as Hollywood film stars would call a psychiatrist in the last. David Williams, a 75 year-old retired financial expert who lives in Clearwater, has made $150,000 from the stock market in 13 years by using astrology as an investment guide."

Your horoscope can show you the way to success and happiness in love and marriage. Horoscopes of Grace Kelly and Jackie Kennedy predicted their current successful marriages. Grace Kelly to Prince Rainier and Jackie Kennedy to Aristotle Onassis. As with these famous people, your horoscope can help you find and keep a lasting and meaningful love relationship.

Now and through the ages, a good natal horoscope analysis has meant the difference between success and failure. Will you miss your success opportunities? Will you stumble into pitfalls you could have avoided?

Today, right this moment, you can have your natal horoscope cast and analyzed. You can get it for only the cost to make your duplicate copy. You get the expensive casting and analyzing process – FREE. The article below will tell you how. The means are available, but the choice is yours.

"The transfer between hospitals should be as quick as possible since complete intensive care is not possible until the baby is at Stanford," says Dr. Phillip Sunshine, program director of the university's Premature Research Center. "The ideal traveling time between hospitals is less than one hour."

Since infants lack the ability to ward off cold and maintain a stable body temperature, they must be transported in a neutral thermal environment. The Stanford transporter provides a comfortable temperature through use of radiant heat warmers, a principle adapted from the Apollo space program.

Safety devices

The transporter also has an oxygen ventilation system with a two-to-three-hour oxygen supply, battery-powered monitors for heart rate, fluid intake, blood pressure and temperature; portable rechargeable battery units for the system; and a stabilizing unit to prevent injury to the minipassenger during sudden changes in speed or altitude.

But rapid efficient transportation from outlying hospitals to better equipped and staffed regional centers is only part of the story. For one thing, infants require more precise diagnosis than adults. They obviously cannot explain anything about their condition; even more importantly, though, they are often so weak that their lives can be threatened by merely subjecting them to too many tests. "We make a special point of limiting diagnostic studies on these babies," says Dr. Redo. "We only do whatever is necessary to verify that the patient is in need of surgery."

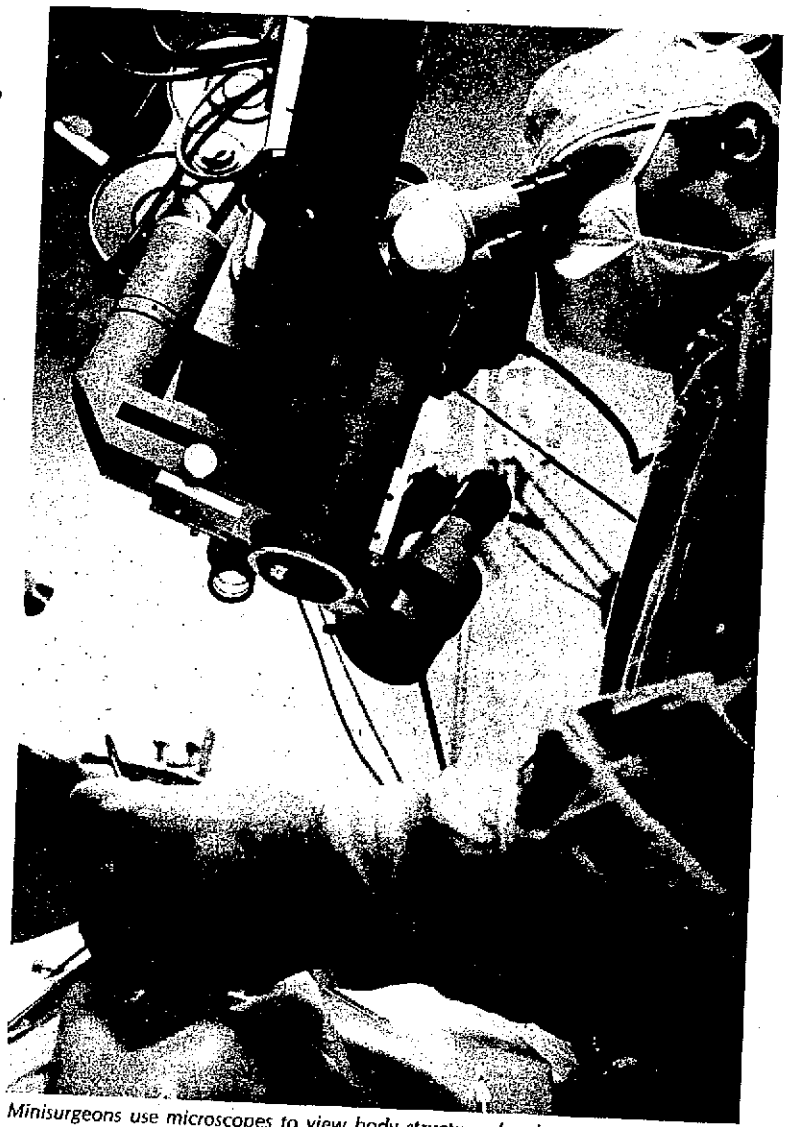

Intensive care for the newborn includes careful monitoring of all their responses. Babies are extremely susceptible to bacterial invasion. Since fever, the standard adult trouble signal, is often absent, they can run deceptively normal temperatures with serious infections.

Because babies are physiologically very different from adults, they react differently—sometimes unpredictably—to drugs. Therefore, special infant drug doses must be based on super-precise calculations.

Anesthesia progress

The same holds true for anesthesia, and much of the progress in minisurgery can be traced to advances in this area. Special masks about the size of telephone mouthpieces have been created to administer anesthesia to babies.

Other surgical tools have also been cut down to meet infant needs. The minisurgeon's scalpel, for instance, has a normal handle, but a blade less than a half-inch long; and some test tubes used for newborns are no larger than drinking straws.

Minisurgeons use microscopes to view body structures barely visible to the naked eye. The liver of a newborn baby, for instance, is 1/20th the size of a 5-year-old's.

Some minisurgeons wear special eyeglasses—and even use microscopes—to magnify baby body structures that are barely visible to the naked eye.

Even structures that can be seen are incredibly small. The liver of a newborn infant, for instance, is just 1/20th as big as that of a 5-year-old.

But while minisurgery calls for scaled-down instruments, it requires giant-sized surgical skill. "The minisurgeon needs special training and understanding," says Dr. Redo. "He has to be careful, yet quick. He has to handle tissues with extreme delicacy; and he has to be ready for a variety of problems, because no two cases are exactly alike. In minisurgery, as with surgery on adults, there are standardized approaches, but the actual steps in each operation can be very different. Above all, the minisurgeon has to be thoroughly prepared for surgery that is always of an emergency nature."

Probably the most dramatic and revolutionary minisurgery technique is the use in open-heart surgery of a kind of suspended animation called deep hypothermia. Using icebags and a refrigerated bed, doctors drastically lower the patient's temperature, then stop the heart with an injection of potassium solution. At this point, the patient is legally dead—with no heartbeat, circulation or reflexes, and no electrical signals coming from the brain. While the patient's body functions are temporarily frozen, the surgeon is free to operate without the risk of heavy bleeding or the obstacle of a pulsating heart muscle.

No damaged blood cells

Another great advantage of deep hypothermia is that it eliminates the need for the heart-lung machine, which has made open-heart surgery possible by keeping blood circulating during surgery. In infants, however, the machine, if used throughout an operation, can damage blood cells that no critically ill baby can afford to lose; it also requires several clamps, tubes and connections that further limit the tiny area in which the surgeon works.

The new "icebox" surgery is saving many of the thousands of babies whose lives are in imminent danger each year because of defective hearts.

"We now do complete corrections I would have thought not possible five years ago," says Dr. Robert L. Replogle of the University of Chicago's Wyler Children's Hospital.

A heart stops

One of the leading specialists in deep hypothermia, Dr. Replogle recently operated on a 5-month-old boy who was born with one lung artery connected to the aorta—the main artery to the body—instead of the heart. The infant's heart was stopped for an hour while Dr. Replogle repositioned the artery. After the correction was completed, the patient was hooked up to the heart-lung machine for the first time. It pumped warm blood through his body, and immediately his heart came back to life.

At least one new diagnostic technique is also reducing the risk in infant heart surgery. Until now, heart disease in babies, as in adults, was diagnosed by catheterization—inserting a flexible tube through the blood vessels and into the chambers of the heart. The tube's progress is monitored by an X-ray as the pressure and oxygen content in the heart's chambers are both monitored. But cardiac catheterization can be a demanding and dangerous procedure with fragile infants on the verge of death.

So doctors are now using a much safer method called echocardiography, which uses high-energy sound waves that are transmitted through the patient's chest and bounced back from the heart, creating an echo picture on a special scope. Echocardiography is expected to be a valuable tool in pinpointing the problems of an estimated 50,000 babies born each year with heart disease, as well as 30,000 babies who are born "blue" because their blood is not getting enough oxygen.

Early diagnosis

"The diagnosis must be done as early as possible," says Dr. Aldo Castaneda of Boston Children's Hospital. "Eventually, we hope to perfect intrauterine diagnosis."

Recognizing a birth defect in an infant that has yet to be born is only one future goal in minisurgery. "There's no question that once the rejection phenomenon is licked even transplantation will someday be possible," says Dr. Redo. "Despite the great strides in this field, many problems still lack total solutions and a good deal of research is needed in several different areas.

"In many ways, minisurgery is still in the pioneering stage. As such, it's an exciting, challenging and gratifying field. You see, we give a baby a whole new life—only hours after its life began."

my favorite jokes

by christopher merrymee

EDITOR'S NOTE: "With my name it seemed necessary to become a comedian," says Christopher Merrymee, and he adds, "I always did crazy things. One of my friends once said, "Chris, you're the type of guy who would walk into a MacDonald's and ask for the wine list!" So, even though he started in show business as a singer, it wasn't long before a natural zaniness took over and comedy became his main concern. "I realized that I got greater satisfaction out of getting laughs than applause, and I was hooked on comedy."

Merrymee has appeared in the Merv Griffin and Steve Allen TV shows, and entertained at clubs such as New York's Bitter End, the Playboy circuit, and at resort hotels.

Here are some of his favorite jokes and stories:

I was in a drugstore with a friend of mine who can only be described as a tightwad. Suddenly two armed men stormed in shouting, "This is a stick-up!" While one of them began searching the customers for valuables, my friend inched over to me and whispered, "Take this." "What is it?" I whispered back. "The $25 I owe you," he said.

A first-grade pupil came home and his mother asked him the inevitable question: "What did you learn in school today?" "I learned," he said, "that 4 and 4 make 9." "But that's wrong," said his mother. "Well," said the youngster, "in that case I didn't learn anything."

During the energy crisis I traveled by train on a subsidiary of Amtrak; it was called Offtrack. Offtrack was created for people like me who couldn't afford to take Amtrak. With Offtrack you didn't have to make a reservation, you showed up at the station a half-hour ahead of time with a bucket of coal in your hands—they took you anywhere you wanted to go.

I wouldn't fly during the energy crisis. I felt, if I'm going to run out of gas, I'd rather do it on the ground than in the air. What if you're flying at 40,000 feet and your plane runs out of gas. I mean, you could be stuck up there all day.

Several nights ago I was walking through a college town and I stopped to ask a spaced-out student what time it was. "Twelve o'clock," he replied, "No kidding," I said, "I thought it was later than that." "Man, it never gets later than that around here. Like when it reaches twelve o'clock we start over again."

A friend and I argued for two hours regarding a loan which he insisted he had paid back, but I knew for a fact that he had not: After having been outshouted I reluctantly gave in. "No hard feelings," he said. "No," I said, "I wish I had a dozen friends like you." "Really?" he replied. "Yeah," I said, "I have two dozen."

WHY PLANT A GROUND COVER?

In many areas and situations, ground covers are more appropriate and more satisfactory than turf. They are able to grow and thrive in sun OR shade, and in poor soil.

On steep slopes where mowing is difficult, ground cover is much more effective and much less laborious to maintain than grass. Ground covers hold the soil as well as turf and the textures are far more interesting.

Small areas of grass are a continual chore to keep mown and trimmed but ground covers require almost no care. They are excellent protection and soil conditioners. They hold the fallen leaves from blowing away, thus helping to add annually to the humus content.

WHY CREEPING RED SEDUM?

One of Sedum's most valuable assets is its full time beauty. Lush foliage begins in early spring, and star-shaped wine red flowers delight the viewer from late June through September. The attractive semi-evergreen foliage lasts well into winter, maintaining its rich green and bronze color nearly all year round.

Besides being one of the loveliest of the ground covers, Sedum also rates high on the other requirements. It is hardy, grows well in sun or partial shade, in sandy soil, clay soil, or good soil.

Its thick foliage and root system hold the soil on slopes or banks. The neat 3-4" cover forms a dense perennial mat to bring green and wine red beauty to slopes, borders, rocky areas, anywhere beauty and durability are needed.

Each plant will easily and quickly spread to fill one sq. ft. Sedum spreads evenly, maintains its uniform smooth beauty at all stages of growth. Unlike some other ground covers, Sedum, also called "Dragon's Blood," stays where you put it — does not straggle out into places where it doesn't belong. Sedum is almost indestructible, enduring and persisting against heavy climatic and nutritional odds.

FULLY GUARANTEED

All items guaranteed to be of high quality, exactly as advertised and to arrive in good healthy condition or purchase price will be refunded. RETURN SHIPPING LABEL ONLY —you may keep the plants. (One year limit).

SEND this Special Offer Coupon TODAY to receive your Red Sedum and Peonies!

Now is a Good Time to Order RED SEDUM!

Your young Sedum plants will establish themselves and begin to spread a few days after planting. In a month or so they will already be 3-4 inches in diameter. They may lose their foliage as the first winter progresses but will leaf out again in early spring. During a long growing season they may reach 12" in diameter, always maintaining their neat regulated shape.
